Don't Panic!

Handy Holiday 'Shortcuts'. . .

Your intentions were good.

You wanted to get all of your holiday shopping done early, but somehow you just never got around to it — again!

Here are some last-minute shopping tips gathered from experts designed to make the hectic holidays a bit less so:

The first thing, say the experts, is to organize your plans. Take a few minutes to sit down and make a list of the things you wish to accomplish during the holiday season. A list, they point out, is the best way to avoid forgetting important details.

Carry the gift list (including names, sizes and gift ideas) with you at all times and, as you make a purchase, simply cross the names off.

Try to do as much shopping as possible in one location. While different stores may offer special "bargains" to lure you in, it's often not worth the time, money and effort to drive all over town to find them.

Shop during the early morning hours, before stores are crowded, clerks are irritable and while there is still a good selection of merchandise on the shelves.

And, avoid shopping when you are tired. The experts say one of the worst attitudes to have when shopping is "shopping to get it over with." This situation usually results in poor selections and wasted money.

So if you get tired, take a break. Find a place to sit and rest for ten minutes before continuing.

If you're searching last minute for a business acquaintance or a relative or friend in a distant city, here's a novel idea:

You can now not only send flowers, but also a wide variety of wines, liquors, candy and other gifts to just about anywhere in the country. The service is called "WhiskeyGram" and to use it just dial 1-800-FOR-LOVE, 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Or give a gift of yourself. This is especially appreciated by older people. Simply indicate on a greeting card that you wish to spend some time with that person and plan a specific activity to share with him or her.

Gift certificates are another last minute idea that often makes sense. (They make great stocking stuffers, too.)

While you're taking care of "emergency" shopping, have the store gift wrap the presents for you. Or, wrap them as soon as you arrive home. That way, you avoid having to wrap a heap of packages at the very last minute.

And, try to shop with a bit of understanding for your fellow shopper and the sales person. He or she may have many of the same problems that you have. . . only worse!

Oh, yes, one final tip — really do shop early next year. It can be a lot less hectic and a lot less expensive.

Tuberculosis Is Erased By The Christmas Seal

Smithsonian News Service

Each year millions of Americans lick millions of Christmas seals in the finest spirit of the holiday season. But chances are most card senders are not aware of how this tradition became part of the Yuletide mountain of mail.

As you adorn your envelopes with 1983 seals — a jolly Santa decked out in granny glasses — consider that the first holly-wreath-decorated "stamps" were sold in 1907 for one penny each in a Delaware post office lobby. They came with envelopes bearing this persuasive legend: "Put this stamp, with message bright on every Christmas letter. Help the tuberculosis fight and make the new year better."

Initial sale, organised by a Delaware social worker named Emily P. Bissell, raised $3,000 to pay for an open-air shelter for TB patients near Brandywine, Del. By 1917, Christmas seal sales had topped the $1 million mark.

But the reasons for the campaign's success lie beyond the copywriter's skills and the low cost of the stamps. "TB was so widespread in this country before the 1930s that everyone knew someone who had the disease," says Ray Kondratas, curator of medical sciences in the Smithsonian's national museum of American history. "Unfortunately, everyone could relate to the problem."

Disease was so prevalent, in fact, that the pale, frail consumptive women who were "going into a decline" were considered romantic by the poets and novelists of the 18th and early 19th centuries. In truth, the facts about TB were anything but romantic. In 1907, when the Christmas seal campaign began, one in seven deaths was caused by TB, making it the chief cause of death in the United States.

It struck people of all economic and social backgrounds. But Americans aged 15 to 45 were hit hardest, especially those in the immigrant-crowded cities of the East coast where large families lived in close quarters and where factory conditions and nutritional and public health standards were poor. The stricken often were out of work for long periods; treatment called for bed rest (either isolated at home or in a sanitorium), fresh air, nutritious diet and sometimes lung surgery.

Impact of TB on the country's young people, especially during wartime, undoubtedly gave the annual fund-raising campaigns an added impetus and emotional appeal, Marilyn Hanson, associate executive director of the American Thoracic society, says.

News media gave the annual fund drive even more attention by wholeheartedly supporting Christmas seal sales. But not at first. When Bissell went to "The North American," Philadelphia's leading newspaper, to see if something might be published about her "stamp out tuberculosis" effort, one editor was shocked at the thought of combining "Merry Christmas" greetings with the country's most dreaded disease — and refused.

Bissell, however, did manage to convince one influential columnist there, Leigh Mitchell Hodges, to help. Years later, in his book, "The People Against Tuberculosis," Hodges recalled the words of the paper's Sunday editor one December day in 1907, 'Tell Miss Bissell the North American is hers for the holidays. Drop what you're doing and give this your whole time. Take all the space you need. Ask her to send up 50,000 stamps by tomorrow.'

Effort grew until the sale of Christmas seals involved thousands of state and local organizations affiliated with the National Tuberculosis Association. The money raised was earmarked for medical research and public health education as well as for the care and prevention of TB, support of sanitoriums and identification of new cases.

For years, the Christmas seal campaign followed the same successful formula: Sheets of 100 seals (the word stamp was dropped to avoid confusion with U.S. postage stamps) along with educational materials were stuffed into millions of envelopes by volunteers at local TB associations and other organizations. In 1962, the California Lung association switched to computers for its mailing and by 1970 all lung associations' direct mail operations had been modernized. Machines stuffed the envelopes and computers processed the mailing labels at five national mailing centers.

In October 1983, Christmas seals were sent to 50 million households. The American Lung association expects about 6.5 million responses, each containing an average donation of $5.

History of the Christmas seal campaigns can be traced in the Smithsonian's numismatics department in the Museum of American History, where a new seal is added each year to the "Cinderella' collection (a name used by stamp collectors to denote non-postage stamps), The museum also has grim reminders of the era — surgical tools used in tuberculosis lung operations, containers used for antibiotics, sputum cups, "don't-spit-on-me" sidewalk bricks and collections of old photographs gathered by curator Kondratas and museum specialist Michael Harris last year in Pittsburgh on the occasion of the 75th anniversary of Christmas seals.

Appearance of the seals themselves have changed over the years, but they have always featured a holiday-related scene. In the 1930s, seals showed Santa Claus, carolers, Christmas trees and snowy scenes, accompanied by such messages as "Buy Christmas Seals — Protect Your Home from Tuberculosis" and "A Seal on Each Letter Helps Many Get Better." In 1939, artist Rockwell Kent broke with design tradition and produced a sleek, modern-looking angel flanked by an enlarged TB cross — and no message.

By the 1940s, seals had returned to their customary holiday scenes. But the slogans became increasingly forceful as the country approached war: "Help Knock Out Tuberculosis — A Saboteur in Home and Factory" and "Health for Victory," they cried. The incidence of TB actually went up during both world wars because of health problems caused by crowded working conditions in defense plants, long hours, the influx of women and children into industry and makeshift living conditions. As the '42 packet dramatically said, "War fans to a destructive blaze the smouldering embers of the lurking disease."

In 1944, the introduction of streptomycin by Dr. Selman Waksman began to put out that blaze. For the next few years, the TB Association funded clinical trials of this antibiotic. By 1953, it was being manufacutred by nine companies and prescribed for thousands of TB patients. Over the next decade, more effective antibiotics were introduced, and gradually the disease was brought under control with drug treatments and improved living conditions. Patients no longer had to be confined to bed rest in sanitoriums or to undergo painful lung surgery.

In 1973, the National Tuberculosis association became the American Lung association. The ALA continues the Christmas seal campaign, using the funds to educate the public about all lung diseases, to support medical research and to wage anti-smoking campaigns. Last year, the ALA raised $41 million from Christmas seals.

Anti-TB campaign was the first nationwide effort by a voluntary health organization, but it was not alone for long. In 1934, fund-raising campaigns to finance the battles against polio (later called the March of Dimes) and physical disabilities (Easter Seals) were launched. And in 1966, another kind of medical fund raising was introduced when Jerry Lewis hosted the first telethon for victims of muscular dystrophy. Like the American Lung association, each organization uses its funds for a variety of programs including research and assistance for victims.

Today, more than three quarters of a century after Emily Bissell's first Christmas seal campaign, tuberculosis is a rare cause of death in this country. In 1982, only eight out of every 1 million deaths in the United States were attributed to TB.

Nonetheless, although tuberculosis is now a preventable disease, there still are new cases reported every year, and Centers for Disease Control continues to maintain a Tuberculosis division.

Last year, the new-case rate was 11 per 100,000 but in crowded cities such as San Francisco, Washington, D.C., Newark, Detroit and Baltimore (the leading five cities for TB cases) the rate is often four or five times the national average. Many of today's patients live in the same conditions that fostered TB years ago. Mainly, they are elderly men who are poor and malnourished, living in crowded, unsanitary conditions and unable to obtain proper medical care.

While the Christmas seals that Emily Bissell called the "biggest little thing in the world" have not completely stamped out TB, they have gone a long way toward making it a rare disease in this country.

HINTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

Storage Under The Stairs

Retarded Rats Result From Lack Of Zinc

Diets mildly deficient in zinc caused memory and learning impairments in the offspring of laboratory rats fed the diets during pregnancy and suckling periods, U.S. department of agriculture scientists reported recently.

Impaired learning of the animals continued into adulthood, said Edward S. Halas, research psychologist for USDA's agricultural research service.

Halas said the results of the zinc-deficient study done at the research agency's Grand Forks, N.D., human nutrition research center, may have implications for humans.

He said a rat maze used to diagnose the impairments was the same kind of maze that researchers at John Hopkins university developed to study effects of surgically imposed injuries on the rat brain. John Hopkins researchers found that injuries to the hippocampus area of the brain impaired short- and long-term memory.

"In the Grand Forks study," Halas said, "we found that the hippocampus areas were less well developed in zinc-deficient rats with memory and learning impairments than they were in the rats on control diets." He reported the findings at the society for neuroscience annual meeting in Boston.

In rats and in humans the hippocampus normally has high concentrations of zinc, a trace mineral that is essential for formation or nucleic acids and protein.

Whether zinc deficiency occurs in human fetuses and interferes with the rapidly developing hippocampus during pregnancy and postnatal periods is not known, said Halas. But the researcher suggested that it may be prudent for pregnant women to consume foods rich in zinc.

Good sources of zinc include oysters, variety of meats such as liver or beef heart, other kinds of beef, dark poultry meat and crab.

Once the brain is fully developed in a rat or child it is difficult to injure it by nutritional means, Halas said. But if zinc deficiency occurs early in life during the critical period of brain development, he added, normal growth and maturation may be irreversibly impaired.

Can zinc deficient rats be rehabilitated in other ways?

"Insights for answering that question may depend on whether learning impairments in rats are general or specific in nature," said Halas. "If they're specific, perhaps in other kinds of learning experiments the rats could be rehabilitated to learn through kinds of stimuli that are different than the ones involves in our study. "Knowledge is too limited to comment on humans."

A 17-arm radial maze resembling the hub of a wheel and 17 spokes that Halas used in the experiment, tests for either short-term memory or learning, depending on how the maze is used.

"If you're testing for memory you put a pellet of food at the end of every arm of the maze," Halas explained. "After a rat has gone to several arms he has to remember which arms he's already visited if he is to be successful in finding food on the next trip away from the hub of the maze. A failure to find food on a trip constitutes an 'error of short-term memory."

In the test for learning only 8 of the 17 arms were baited for 15-minute tests each day. Other nine arms are never baited so the rats has two problems: to remember which arms have been baited and which arms were visited recently. Successfully solving both problems constitutes learning.

Rats were always motivated for the experiments because the few pellets they got were only a part of their daily ration — not enough to satisy them. During the rest of the day the three groups of rats involved in the experiment received sufficient food to maintain their body weight at 85 per cent of their normal weight.

None of the rats was zinc deficient during the behavioral testing procedure, Halas said.

Histological examinations by University of North Dakota anatomists Curtis D. Hunt and Jerrolynn C. Kawamoto showed that the hippocampi of rats that were undernourished during fetal development and suckling period were less developed than hippocampi from the well-nourished rats.

Halas said further studies now underway may show whether the learning deficits resulting from malnutrition become worse in succeeding generations.

STOCKING STUFFERS

Armagnac de MONTAL

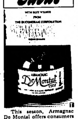
This season, why not give her a classic gift, a single strand of luxurious pearls? And, for him who has everything, there is but one treasure to give: a miniature (50 ml.) selection of Armagnac de Montal. This limited edition of three rare distillations will elicit an immediate response of pleasurable surprise. For Armagnac is a very special, mature brandy the French have only recently allowed out of the country and into the United States.

A superb libation, it is savored by connoisseurs for its full, rich, mellow taste, that many believe to be less burning than that of its younger cousin Cognac. Such distinguished gentlemen as Winston Churchill and Charles de Gaulle would accept no other after-dinner drink.

This season, Armagnac de Montal has released what possibly may be the world's most expensive miniature collection of elegant tastes: the 1893, a majestic and superbly rich brandy that practically melts the silver spoon in one's mouth (a 750 ml. [or fifth] of this exquisite spirit usually retails for about $2,000 a bottle). While the 1904, a little less than $800 for a 750 ml., is celebrated as an extremely mellow, yet abundant full-flavor. The woody accent which is not apparent on the palate, returns to warm the senses after you swallow. Finally, the pièce de résistance, the 1939, is a steal at only $200 for a 750 ml. This wonderfully smooth elixir, full in flavor with the aroma and almost spicy taste of wood, delivers the gentlest finish of prune. Throughout the Second World War, France guarded this brandy as a treasured heirloom.

This unique miniature collection is packaged in a distinct wooden box that bears the dates of each distillation—the 1893, the 1904 and the 1939. Truly this gift is the world's most expensive stocking stuffer at $100, and is a gift of unquestionable good taste.

Gift-Giving Ideas



This season, Armagnac De Montal offers consumers a special opportunity to personalize the lids of one case or more of V.S.O.P. (750 mls.) and the rare distillations of 1893, 1904, 1939, 1960 and 1961. Where legal, the handsome wooden boxes, imprinted with messages up to five lines, make impressive corporate and sales gifts, in addition to enhancing the home bar.

For more information, write Armagnac De Montal Personalized Lid Program, The Buckingham Corporation 620 Fifth Avenue, New York NY 10020.

cancer answers

"Cancer Answers" is a weekly column sponsored by the Red River Valley Medical society, the Red River Valley unit of the American Cancer society and the Thief River Falls Times. Questions may be mailed to the editor, Thief River Falls Times. All questions will be answered, and those of a general interest will be published in "Cancer Answers."

Q: My wife and I just found out that she has cancer. I want to be sure she gets the best treatment available. I've heard that some patients are being treated in clinical trials. Please explain what a clinical trial is and whether this is an option we should consider.

A.: In cancer research, a clinical trial is designed to see if a new treatment will be a significant improvement over the best known treatment. The best known treatment generally involves either surgery, radiation therapy, chemotherapy (treatment with anticancer drugs) or a combination of the treatments. Clinical trials often incorporate standard treatment.

These studies are not necessarily the best option for everyone. Clinical trials enroll patients with specific types of cancer and specific conditions. Some patients may be treated effectively by standard treatment alone. For patients who have not been helped by standard treatment, clinical trials offer hope.

Your wife's doctor will advise you about the best treatment for her type of cancer. You may wish to get a second opinion from another physician. Your wife's doctor can recommend a cancer specialist who can discuss with both of you the best treatment in her case.

A.: A friend of mine has chronic lymphocytic leukemia. She didn't know she was sick until she went to the doctor for a checkup. They did blood tests and found leukemia. The doctor told her she doesn't need any treatment yet — she's just supposed to come back for checkups more often. I don't understand why she isn't being treated for this. I thought cancer was supposed to be curable when it's found and treated early.

A.: It's true that many forms of cancer grow rapidly and can be treated most effectively early when the tumor is small and hasn't spread. These tumors can be removed or destroyed with surgery or radiation therapy.

Other forms of cancer progress slowly. For these types, doctors must carefully weigh the possible risks of treatment against the effects of the disease. Any medical treatment, even taking aspirin, involves a potential risk. Doctors must decide when the disease is a greater risk to the patient's health than the treatment.

Chronic lymphocytic leukemia is a disease which usually occurs in older people and progresses slowly. When it is accidentally discovered and there are no symptoms, as in your friend's case, it often is not treated. Patients are examined at regular intervals.

Many of these patients continue to do well for months or years. Treatment usually is not necessary unless or until the disease progresses and the patient begins to have symptoms. Chemotherapy or radiation therapy then may be the recommended treatment.

Q.: I had a spot of skin cancer removed last month. The doctor said it was basal cell cancer and that I don't need any other treatment. Since I've had this one spot of cancer, does that mean I'm likely to get more cancer?

A.: Basal cell and squamous cell skin cancers are very slow growing, only rarely spread and are almost never life-threatening. Surgical removal of the spot usually is the only treatment necessary to cure these cancers.

People who have had basal cell or squamous cell skin cancers may develop more of these tumors. Doctors advise that you avoid unnecessary exposure to the sun to help prevent more skin cancers.

Sun exposure also increases a person's risk for the more rare and dangerous type of skin cancer, melanoma.

In general, however, the number of individuals who develop more than one separate type of cancer is much lower than the number of people who have only one kind. More people who have been successfully treated for cancer die of "old age" than of a second cancer.

Q.: My brother has lymph node cancer. I read in a book that people with that type of cancer have a 60-70 per cent chance of cure. Is that currect?

A.: There's no definite answer to your question because there are several different types of lymph node cancer. There also are many cancers that start in other organs and spread to the lymph nodes. An individual's chances for cure depend upon many variables including the type of cancer, location of the tumor, the extent of the disease at the time of diagnosis, and the age and general health of the patient.

Each person's prognosis is dependent upon all the variables. Cancer often has an unpredictable course, so progress may be different for each patient.

Statistics that you see in articles and books describing cancer survival are based on hundreds, even thousands of cases. Furthermore survival statistics are constantly changing as methods for treating cancer improve.

Also statistics on survival can be misinterpreted. For example, physicians often speak of "five-year survival" rather than "cure." This does not mean that a patient can expect to live for only five years after treatment. Many people who have cancer are cured immediately after the tumor is surgically removed. Many others are cured following radiation therapy and chemotherapy. The American Cancer Soceity estimates there are three million Americans living today who are considered cured of cancer.

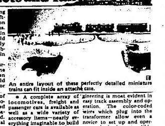
TRAIN facts and fancies



An entire layout of these perfectly detailed miniature trains can fit inside an attaché case.

Many families are getting the inside track on gift-giving this holiday season by looking into model trains. Here are some model train facts and fancies that could start you and your family on an interesting new hobby, one that could result in treasured collectibles.

- Collectors will be surprised to learn that some model trains made between 1900 and 1940 have sold for as much as $40,000 for a single locomotive.
- The manufacturer of those trains is a European train company called Marklin Brothers, a company nearly 125 years old. The romance and technical expertise of trains in Europe have been a long tradition and this West German company draws upon a record of unequalled quality in design and technical innovation.
- The company sold its first train at the 1891 Leipzig trade fair—a clockwork mechanism in a figure-eight layout. Today, Marklin offers three model train gauges: Z gauge, the world's smallest operating railway; HO, the most popular gauge and I gauge, ideal for indoor and outdoor operation.
- A complete array of locomotives, freight and passenger cars is available as well as a wide variety of accessory items—nearly everything imaginable to build the fantasy world of your dreams.
- Marklin trains are highly durable and manufactured to last a lifetime. In fact, these trains enjoy a tradition of being handed down from one generation to the next.
- Z gauge trains are built at a scale of 1:220 and have been precision engineered with every original feature. An entire layout can be set on a desk or coffee table.
- The manufacturer's engineering is most evident in easy track assembly and operation. The color-coded wires which plug into the transformer allow even a novice to set up and operate a basic layout within minutes.

All of which means that this holiday season, trains are offering a new dimension of fun for adults and children alike, and these trains promise solid returns on an investment for your children or yourself.

Marklin trains are sold through hobby, specialty and leading department stores. Or, customers may write the company at 5060 North 60th Street, Milwaukee, WI 53218; (414) 527-3107.

Set Community Christmas Eve Dinner Schedule

Plans are being made for the eighth annual Christmas eve dinner for anyone in the Thief River Falls community who will not be having a family holiday dinner this Christmas season. The dinner will begin at 5 p.m. on December 24 and will be held at Lon's restaurant.

Lon Gobell, who is handling arrangements for the event, encourages anyone of any age who will be alone for the Christmas holiday and would enjoy the company of others to make a reservation to attend the dinner. It is offered free of charge through contributions by individuals and organizations and prepared and served entirely by volunteer workers.

Reservations may be made by calling the Thief River Falls chamber of commerce office at 681-3720 and giving name and number of people who will attend. Persons who need transportation should also give their address and arrangements will be made to provide rides to and from the dinner. Reservations should be made by Friday, December 23.

Residents of the area who would like to contribute toward the annual dinner may also contact the chamber of commerce office. Donations may be in cash or may consist of canned green beans, canned sweet potatoes, bars, cookies, candies or pickles and relishes. Donations may be brought or sent to the chamber of commerce office and food donations should be brought directly to Lon's restaurant.

Persons who would like to volunteer a couple hours of their time to assist in serving or in providing entertainment for those attending the dinner should also contact Gobell immediately so that adequate arrangements can be made. Meals will be sent home with each of the people attending the dinner for use the following day. Last year about 200 meals were provided by the volunteer group.

Sanctuary At Warren Seeks Memberships

In an effort to establish a steady source of local support, the directors of Wetlands, Pines and Prairie Audubon sanctuary have launched the "Friends of the Sanctuary" membership program, according to sanctuary manager David Siegenthaler.

"We hope the program will foster more interest in and use of the sanctuary, as well as provide a source of income for our operating budget," said Siegenthaler. "The success of this project will really depend upon strong local support."

"Friends of the Sanctuary" memberships are available for a $15 annual fee, for which the donor will receive a special sanctuary mug, a membership card, use of the sanctuary and a periodic newsletter. "Most important, though," Siegenthaler said, "members will have the satisfaction of knowing they are supporting the important work of wildlife habitat restoration and environmental education locally."

Siegenthaler said it is important to provide for displaced wildlife places where it can find the needs of life, and where it is safe from human predation. "Habitat destruction affects all of us because we depend upon natural communities of life for our own survival," he said. "As those natural communities are diminished, so is the quality of our lives and the potential for future life."

Siegenthaler hopes that the promotion of "Friends of the Sanctuary" will generate interest in other kinds of donations as well. "We can use volunteers providing a wide variety of skills on the sanctuary. We'd really like to make this a community-wide effort," he said.

Membership forms are available at the sanctuary, at the First American Bank and Ken Nelson Agency in Warren. Donations may also be sent directly to Friends of the Sanctuary, Route 2, Box 45A, Warren, Minnesota 56762. Contributions are tax-deductible.

Turkey Gifts To Kick Off Local Pantry

Thief River Falls ministerial association has approved a cooperative pantry to begin functioning early in the new year. Provision of Christmas turkeys and related items for several dozen needy families in the community is being planned as a kick-off for the idea.

Contributions toward the purchase of the turkeys and other items have been solicited and any funds remaining will be used later for the community pantry effort. Persons wishing to contribute may send checks to the United Methodist church at P.O. Box 595 with the notation that they are for the food shelf program.

Library Delays Senior Program

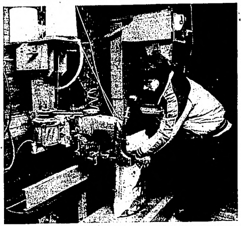
BEVERLY RUSTAD Miss Thief River Falls, assisted a number of youngsters in selecting and wrapping Christmas gifts for family members as part of the "Operation Christmas" project conducted by the Thief River Falls Jaycees and Jaycee Women on Saturday. Disadvantaged youngsters were selected with assistance from Pennington county social services. About 17 volunteers, including Jaycees, Jaycee Women and their spouses, assisted in the project which was co-chaired by Dave Cariveau and Charlie Bigelow and advised by Al Rux. Wrapping was done at United Methodist Church. In addition, the children were provided with stocking stuffers by Northern State Bank, Norwest Bank and Hartz store, and fed, compliments of Hardees and McDonalds restaurants.

St. Hilaire Elevator Division Kept Busy . . .

Cold And Snow Increases Birdseed Sales Volume



PLANT MANAGER Glenn Kalsnes sews a bag of sunflowers at the St. Hilaire Co-Op Elevator sunflower plant in Thief River Falls. The cooperative purchased the plant from Northrup King and company in November of 1982 and during the current operating year expects to handle 13 to 14 million pounds of sunflowers, 80 per cent of which are sold for birdseed.

St. Hilaire's
SUNFLOWERS FOR BIRDS
Sunflowers FOR BIRD FEEDING

NEWLY DESIGNED BAGS for 25-pound and 50-pound lots of sunflowers for birdseed are now used at the St. Hilaire Co-Op Elevator's sunflower plant in Thief River Falls. The bags have gained wide acceptance and their use is expected to increase demand for the cooperative's product. The former bag used is shown at left.

Not only has the cold and snow throughout parts of the United States been good for the local snowmobile industry, it has also been good for another lesser known but extremely active business.

"We're running 24 hours a day and are still two weeks behind on our orders," states Glenn Kalsnes, manager of the sunflower operation for St. Hilaire Co-Op Elevator in Thief River Falls. Eighty per cent of the plant's operation is geared to the birdseed business and feeding has been heavy in many areas due to the early snowfall.

Sunflower processing is not new to Thief River Falls, nor is sunflower handling new to St. Hilaire Co-Op Elevator. But it is only in the past year or so that the marketing and processing operations have been combined under the elevator's ownership.

"We had a long-standing agreement with Northrup King and company that if they wanted to move their sunflower processing operation from this area, we would have the first opportunity to purchase their plant," states Bob Miller, general manager of the St. Hilaire elevator operation. "We were able to purchase the plant from them last November and it has proved to be a good investment so far."

The plant is located on Davis avenue in what was known as the E. J. Lyng company elevator. It is equipped with drying, storage, cleaning and bagging machinery. Miller credits Kalsnes with developing much of the market and continues to be amazed at the amount of birdseed used throughout the country each year.

"The volume is unbelievable," Miller said. "This year we expect to move 13 to 14 million pounds of sunflowers through the plant with about 80 per cent in the form of birdseed. We have also expanded to include bagged confection roaster seeds, which are usually shipped to export markets overseas through West Coast and Canadian markets at a premium price. This market is a big factor in our determination of what contract price we will use as a base for the following season's crop."

Striped confectionery seeds which are smaller than those shipped for the overseas market are bagged for birdseed at the plant here. In some cases the striped seeds are mixed with the small, black oilseed type sunflowers. Kalsnes said the product has been especially well accepted because of the quality which the plant provides.

"We guarantee 99 per cent purity," Kalsnes said, "while most of the other companies are around 97 per cent. Most of our production goes to distributors and to large chain store operations. We sell an occasional small lot to an area dealer but almost all of our business involves purchase of at least a semi-trailer load."

The sunflowers have to be dried down to about 10 per cent moisture to guarantee that they will keep indefinitely without spoilage. They are bagged in 25-pound and 50-pound bags specially designed for the company and proclaiming "St. Hilaire's Sunflowers for Birds". Acceptance of the bag as a marketing tool has been extremely good, and the elevator is in the process of registering the trademark.

With a plant capacity of about 100,000 pounds of sunflowers being processed per day on a 24-hour basis, the necessity to purchase sunflowers from a wide area becomes evident. Because of very wet growing conditions in this area, which reduced yields and increased disease damage, the elvator had to go to other areas to contract and purchase confectionery sunflowers needed to meet market contracts.

"Sunflower midge has been a major problem in this area," Miller said. "There is no effective control at this time and it can cut the yield of a crop down from a ton per acre to just several hundred pounds. Most of our purchases have been from areas to the west into North Dakota. We've gone as far as Minot (250 miles west of Thief River Falls) to buy sunflowers during the summer. Now the price has been

Sjulson Seeks Vice Presidency Of MSBA Board

Harry Sjulson of St. Hilaire, a member of the School District 564 board of education, is a candidate for vice president of the Minnesota School Boards association (MSBA). Annual convention of the association will be conducted January 16, 17 and 18 at the Minneapolis auditorium and Leamington hotel.

Sjulson was elected to the Thief River Falls school board in 1966 and to the MSBA board of directors in 1977. He has served as clerk and as treasurer of the local board. In the December issue of the MSBA Journal, Sjulson comments on his candidacy as follows:

As a candidate for the vice presidency of MSBA, I feel that these are not the best of times nor are they the worst of times for school boards. It is rather a time when problems may have created opportunities. With the publishing of "A Nation At Risk" and other reports that are critical of our educational system, the public at large has finally been awakened as never before this time.

It is our responsibility, as board members to make the most of this opportunity to communicate with an audience that is listening. I feel that in every district, we must involve the administration, the teaching staff, the students, and most of all the parents in striving for improvements in our schools. This could take many forms or lead in different directions, but I believe that each community should be involved in addressing the problems that they deem worthy of priority. Without trying to limit the scope, here are just a few topics that could be pursued: testing of students, alternative ways of funding; daily loss of student and teacher contact time; homework, higher expectations of students by themsleves, their parents, and the staff.

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Marcia Coan-Jeff Culkins Marriage Vows Exchanged

Faith Lutheran church, Goodridge, was the scene of the recent wedding of Marcia Kay Coan, and Brian Jeffrey Culkins.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Coan of Goodridge. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Russell Culkins, Thief River Falls.

Rev. Gene Broughton officiated at the double ring ceremony witnessed by approximately 400 relatives and friends. Organist Sandra Rustan, a friend of the couple, played Bach's "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" and Wagner's "Bridal Chorus", as the processional and recessional. During the ceremony, Gen Radniecki, a friend of the couple, and Jodi Peters, a cousin of the groom, sang "Wedding Song", Radniecki sang "Endless Love", and Peters sang, "Wherever You Go". The guests participated by singing "Hear Us Now, Our God and Father."

Candelabra and floral arrangements in purple, yellow and white graced the chancel. Matching flowers backed by wicker fans marked the pews.

The bride and groom were given in marriage by their parents. For her wedding, the bride selected a long-sleeved, Victorian styled gown of organza and Chantilly lace, featuring a sheer V-yoke, marked by an off-the shoulder double ruffle. Complementing the yoke was a lace motif embroidered with pearls and iridescents. Lace edged the five tiers of her bouffant, hooped skirt which flowed into a chapel-length train. Her walking length and blusher veil of bridal illusion, held by a lace headpiece. She carried a cascade of satin roses, in three shades of lavender, accented with yellow roses, white carnations, babies' breath and lavender and white ribbon streamers.

Marilyn Stanley, Grygla, a friend of the couple, was maid of honor. Other attendants were Mary Jo Kiesow, Goodridge, a friend of the couple; Lynn Culkins, Thief River Falls, a sister of the groom; Betty Srnsky, Thief River Falls, an aunt of the bride; and Sherry Henrickson, Wadena, a friend of the couple. Their lavender sheer polyester knit gowns, lined in taffeta, were styled with gathered bodices with dropped shoulders and satin accented ties at the waistline. Bustles added back interest to the gowns. At the neckline, they wore pearl necklaces, gifts from the bride. A cluster of babies' breath, a lavender rose and white streamers accented their headbands. They carried arm bouquets of lavender, purple and yellow roses, white daisies, babies' breath and ribbon streamers.

Flower girl was Kari Asselin, Red Lake Falls, a cousin of the bride. Her white, floor-length gown with lace overlay, elasticized at the waistline, featured ruffles at the rounded neckline and at the bottom of her skirt. In her hair, she wore a single comb with a lavender rose, babies' breath and lavender and white streamers. She carried a basket of flower, similar to those in the bride's bouquet. Her cross necklace was a gift from the bride.

The rings were carried by Ryan Rustan, Oklee, a cousin of the bride. Like the groom, he wore a white tuxedo with a single purple rose boutonniere..

Attending the groom as best man was his brother, Kevin Culkins, Mesa, Ariz. Groomsmen were Randy Henrickson, Goodridge, Jay Erickson and Randy Steenerson, Thief River Falls, friends of the couple; and Roger Coan, Goodridge, brother of the bride. The ushers were Paul Srnsky, Goodridge, uncle of the bride; Jack Miller, Goodridge, cousin of the bride; Gregg Peterson and Mitch Muzzy of Thief River Falls, friends of the groom. All wore silver-gray tuxedoes, lavender shirts with winged collars; bow ties and lavender shaded rose boutonnieres.

The mother of the bride wore a levender floor-length gown, with long sheer sleeves and a ruffled V-neckline. The groom's mother also wore a lavender floor-length gown. Her gown was styled with slit sleeves and a V-neckline, in front and back. Their identical corsages were of lavender and yellow roses, white carnations and babies' breath with lavender ribbon accents.

Honor guests were Robert and Michelle Coan, brother and sister of the bride, and Gen Radniecki, Oklee, the bride's personal attendant.

A reception in the church parlors followed with Norman and Joy Olson, LaMoure, N.D., uncle and aunt of the bride, Sid Culkins, Thief River Falls, uncle of the groom, and Alice Longtin, Red Lake Falls, a friend of the groom's family, as hosts and hostesses.

Centering the serving table was a four-tiered wedding cake topped by a triple cluster of lavender wedding bells. Topping the second tier were miniature replicas of the bride and groom, made by the bride's mother. The cake was cut and served by Dorothy Miller, Goodridge, aunt of the bride, and Adella Mortenson, New Hope, aunt of the groom. Pouring coffee were Judy Rustan, Oklee, and Ardith Hanson, Thief River Falls, also aunts of the bride and groom.

The bride's brother and sister, Robert and Michelle Coan, presided at the guest book and distributed the wedding programs. Punch was served by Charleen Sanders, Embarrass, cousin of the bride, and Juli Hanson, Thief River Falls, a cousin of the groom. Waitresses were Joni Hanson, Thief River Falls, a cousin of the groom; Arlene Coan, Embarrass, cousin of the bride, Rhonda Haugen and Becki Peterson, Goodridge, friends of the bride.

The gifts were arranged by Rhonda Srnsky, Goodridge, Kari Mortenson, New Hope, cousins of the bride and groom; Lyle Sanders, Embarrass and Allen O. Olson, LaMoure, N.D., cousins of the bride. Distributing the rice packets were Wendy Olson, LaMoure, N.D., cousin of the bride; Lori Hanson, Thief River Falls, and Kathy Mortenson, New Hope, cousins of the groom. The flowers were pinned by Vivian Srnsky, Goodridge, aunt of the bride, and Mari Lou Anderson, Grygla, cousin of the bride.

Following a wedding trip to Duluth, along the North Shore Drive, and the Twin Cities area, the couple is at home in Thief River Falls at 2002 East Greenwood. The bride is a 1982 graduate of Goodridge high school and attended Bemidji AVTI, sales and marketing. The groom is a 1980 graduate of Lincoln high school and a 1982 graduate of Northland Community college. He is continuing his education. Photo, Don Nordlund, Bagley.

Legion Auxiliary To Give Veterans Christmas Gifts

Local American Legion auxiliary will be remembering veterans during Christmas, according to action taken at the meeting of the organization held at the club room on December 6.

It was noted that a card and monetary gift will be sent to World War I veterans and shut-in veterans in this area.

The Adopt a Marine program was discussed, and the secretary was instructed to obtain names in order that members may remember a Marine with cards, gifts and prayers during the holidays.

It was also noted by JoAnn Reeve, that the national president of the American Legion auxiliary had requested that Christmas cards be sent to service men in Lebanon. She stated that those wishing to send cards may obtain the address from her.

Several reports were also given at the meeting. The membership chairman stated that 502 members had paid their dues; and Senora Skay, in reporting for the scholarship committee, stated that 10 "Need a Lift" booklets, giving information on various scholarships available, had been distributed to schools and the Public Library.

It was noted that during American Education week, the auxiliary had sent letters of appreciation to all teachers in Thief River Falls and Goodridge. Enclosed in the letters were discount certificates on a meal at the Legion club.

Clarice Gallither gave the legislative report and JoAnn Reeve reported on the Falls Conference held at Rochester and the Auxiliary supper, stating that the supper money would be given to the four veterans' projects supported by the auxiliary.

President Karen Fredrickson presided at the meeting. She expressed her appreciation to the members for serving the Friendship club in November and for serving cookies and nectar on Santa Claus day. She also urged all members to attend the mid-winter conference on January 28, stating that the registration will be paid by the unit.

During the social hour, the Poppy hats were judged. Winners in the hat contests were Millie Dallmann, for designing the smallest hat; Betty Graff, the most original, and Marilyn Winters, the largest. Members were encouraged by Poppy chairman Lylia Quam to buy Poppy seals.

Lunch following the meeting included Christmas goodies brought by the members. In place of a gift exchange, members made monetary contributions toward buying gifts for the residents at Oakland Park Nursing home. The door prize, a potted poinsettia, was won by Bea Hanson.

Student Council Energy Saving Ideas Sought

Energy-saving ideas could mean money for high school student councils in Minnesota. The cash awards are incentives for competing in the 1984 Minnesota national energy education day (NEED) project.

A joint resolution of the United States Congress established the education project to involve students in energy awareness. The program also offers students an opportunity to increase schools' energy efficiency and reduce energy waste.

Energy division of the Minnesota department of energy and economic development, Northern States power comany (NSP) and the Minnesota association of student councils are sponsoring the event.

NSP will award $2,000 to the first place winner, $1,000 to the second and $500 to the third, fourth and fifth places. All participating student councils will receive certificates of achievement.

February 1 is the deadline for preliminary registration. Winners will be notified by May 1.

Professor Seeks Letters From Telemark Area

Norwegian Professor Oyvind Gulliksen, a teacher this year at Luther college, is interested in letters sent prior to 1945 to Americans from the Telmark region of Norway.

Gulliksen is on leave from Telemark college in Norway. He and his wife, Torun, are Fulbright scholars-in-residence at Luther college during 1983-84.

Professor Gulliksen is studying letters sent from his home county of Telemark prior to 1945. He is working for the Telemark historical association on the project. Purpose of the study is to show what families and communities in Telemark were like years ago as reflected in the letters.

Hundreds of letters from the United States, especially from the Midwest, have been filed at the Telemark county central library in the past two years. Some of these letters will be published in a collection in 1985.

Anyone who has such letters or knows of their existence should write Oyvid Gulliksen, Luther College, Decorah, Iowa 52101 or call (319) 387-1039 or (319) 382-6345. He will help people translate letters from Norwegian to English if necessary.

Miniature Models Create Realism In Doll Houses

by Ink Mendelsohn
Smithsonian News Service

Historians have agreed that it was a grand house. Albrecht V, Duke of Bavaria, commissioned the residence for his daughter in 1558.

On the lowest floor of the four-story building were the office, larder, wine cellar, stable, cow barn and coach house. An almost-unheard-of bathroom was on the second floor along with a kitchen, courtyard and orchard. The Duke, Duchess and six servants held sway on the third floor in the gold-tapestried ballroom. And on the top floor, the priest and court musicians conducted services in the chapel; court ladies worked at looms and spinning wheels, and royal babies slept in the nurseries. Reportedly, there was even a zoological garden on the grounds of this first doll house in recorded history.

Doll house had been built for the Duke's little girl, but the child lost the princely toy to her father's majestic art collection. Posterity, too, eventually lost the doll house itself. Happily, however, detailed accounts of its splendors survive.

Aesthetic heirs of Duke Albrecht, who love to collect small and beautiful things and put them in small and beautiful environments, consider the doll house an art object. Even in the electronic age, children continue to love the doll house as a toy.

For those adults who consider a doll house merely a roof over a doll's head, doll house historian Flora Gill Jacobs has another view. "For four centuries, the dolls' house has accurately reflected the life around it. Just about everything made in life-size has been made in miniature."

Exotic Victorian evidence of Jacobs' theory is the miniature squirrel cage in the Annie Pinkney Watt doll house that came to the Washington Dolls' House and Toy museum. Small revolving brass cage reflects the Victorian fad of keeping unusual pets.

Avant garde paintings are also facts of miniature life. Art patron Carrie Walter Stettheimer's 1920s doll house with its remarkable collection of miniature — and genuine — modern art has been at the Museum of the City of New York since its "doll house warming" party in 1945. In the late 1940s, an art dealer arranging a Cubism show found that Marcel Duchamp's celebrated "Nude Descending a Staircase" wouldn't arrive in New York on time, so he borrowed Duchamp's Lilliputian version from the Stettheimer doll house.

Had an art dealer in the 1920s been in dire need of a miniature English landscape, Queen Mary's doll's house in Windsor castle most certainly could have provided it. In 1920, Sir Edwin Lutyens, then England's foremost architect, conceived a royal doll house both as a tribute to the queen and as a three-dimensional document freezing in time a way of life rapidly passing at the end of World War I. It was to be perfect replica in miniature, not of a palace, but of a "comfortable" royal residence.

And in the traditional inch-to-the-foot scale of the minature world, perfect it is. Skilled craftspeople carved furniture, fired china, blew glass, wove fabrics and embroidered carpets. Britain's finest artists created miniscule paintings for the walls; her most celebrated authors wrote — in their own hand — tiny volumes for the library, and talented composers contributed diminutive scores which could be played on a working baby grand — or a working upright.

Everything from the gramophone to the "good English" coal-burning stove in Queen Mary's dolls' house works. Hot and cold water flow through silver taps, vintage Madeira mellows in the wine cellar. In the garage, two Daimlers, a Rolls-Royce and a bicycle await. And in the princess' bedroom, under her mattress, lies a pea — one twelfth the usual size.

Fanciful pea would fit right into Coleen Moore's castle, decorated in "Early Faery." In the fabled doll house created by that silent screen star, the original "flapper," historical documentation takes a back seat to flights of fancy.

Diamonds, emeralds and pearls from Moore's jewelry collection are the glittering ingredients of the castle's drawing-room chandelier. King Arthur's round table serves as the castle's dining table and is set with tiny monogrammed knives and forks and lacy napkins, — refinements real knights never knew. And in Aladdin's garden, the willow really weeps.

On a more serious literary note, Moore's castle, now in Chicago's museum of science and industry, has a library, too. Its very limited editions include works by F. Scott Fitzgerald, Sinclair Lewis, Willa Cather, John Steinbeck and Booth Tarkington.

Like Colleen Moore, Faith Bradford of Washington, D.C., was a woman with a personal vision that found its expression in a miniature house. Perfect replication of the life-sized world was not her goal, nor was creation of a fantasy world. The Dolls' house in the Smithsonian institution's national museum of American history, donated by Bradford to the museum in 1951, is her interpretation of life at the turn of the century.

Margaret Klapthor, curator of the division of political history at the museum, remembers her first visit to the Dolls' house before it came to the Smithsonian. "It was an extraordinary experience," she recalls. "At that time, each room was in a cardboard box. Miss Bradford knew from where each object had come. She had created an entire family with a documented social history — a lifestyle since vanished."

Cardboard boxes soon were replaced by a proper home for Peter and Rose Doll, their 10 children, Grandmother and Grandfather Doll, the servants and assorted family pets. Bradford, as she put it, had "arranged for a mortage (a loan from her nephew) and had a new house of her own design built for the entire Doll household.

Life in the Doll's house, Bradford once wrote, "represented an American way of life of a large and affluent family living in the period 1900-1914, living with inherited furniture of mahogany in the best designs. . . with an attic filled with family pieces, seasonal articles between seasons, hasbeens too deer to discard such as the iron deer removed from the lawn, and articles to be mended-sometime."

Bradford, longtime head of the Library of Congress' accessions division, was a faithful record keeper who left a detailed inventory of every household item. She listed the mid-19th-century "china doll in original blue dress," her mother's as a child, and the "little lamp without a globe," the sole survivor of her very first doll house. She noted some "light oak" doll house furniture, purchased at the Washington shop "where Abraham Lincoln bought toys for his little son, Tad," and the "mirror over bureau, unknown clerk in dime store."

Even after the Dolls' house moved to the Smithsonian, Bradford came to the Museum of American History — to give "house tours." When she died in 1970, the political history staff placed a miniature bouquet of her favorite violets in the Dolls' house.

Bradford devoted a part of her long life to the world of the miniature. In San Francisco, John and Ellen Krucker Blauer devote their whole lives to "the little things of life."

They are the landlords of Maynard Manor, a 42-room miniature castle with more than 8,000 one-inch-to-the-foot pieces of finely-crafted furniture and accessories — one of the world's largest collections. The objects, both antiques and reproductions, represent the period 1755-1910 — with a few anachronisms, because John places friendship above purism. A young friend created a tiny box of Kentucky Fried Chicken for the castle, and John placed it in the kitchen along with the working egg beater and meat-grinder. Another friend contributed a miniature model railroad to the Christmas room.

Blauer loves the small train, of course, but he does worry that it will distract visitors from other very special things — like the set of 36 gold knives, forks and spoons in a fitted case and a tiny gold jewel cask both made by the Russian artist Faberge.

Both John and Ellen Krucker Blauer are creators as well as collectors. One of Ellen's many talents is Igoluchkoy — a Russian punchneedle embroidery done with a tiny needle. The results are miniature Persian, Chinese, Aubusson and Victorian rugs. She also makes elaborate brass objects like a gold-plated Victorian globe stad with winged griffins supporting the revolving globe. It is 3-½ inches high.

Blauers and other craftspeople across the United States are fashioning small hand-crafted objects of all kinds for children's doll houses and for ever-more-demanding hobbyists all over America. Miniaturists with a miniscule ice cream parlor, for example, might find a delicate blown-glass gasogene — the forerunner of the carbonated soda water dispenser — a handy addition to the soda fountain.

For holiday time in one's doll house, a collector can find a two-inch-square Monopoly game perfect in every detail to amuse the guests. An inch-high turkey is served with glazed carrots, potatoes and stuffing.

John Blauer has concocted his own confection, a seven-inch-high Christmas tree, lavishly decorated with ornaments, toys, candy canes and colorfully wrapped presents. He happily tells you why he loves small things. "Some of us have never grown up, and we love to play."

ARCTCO EMPLOYEES put in some overtime on Friday evening as they worked feverishly to prepare the company's newest sled, the El Tigre AFS for its public debut at a snowmobile race in Alexandria over the weekend. Limited production run of 50 of the new sleds begins this week, with those machines destined for distribution to a wide variety of locations for testing and to generate interest in the 85 model line. Radical suspension changes on the machine are different from anything previously carrying the Arctic Cat name, and have generated high demand well in advance of its release. A story on the new design will be carried in the Wednesday edition of the Times.

A REAL BABY will play the role of the baby Jesus in Franklin middle school's Christmas vocal program Tuesday. Two-month-old Mary Beth Acosta is held by her aunt, Sherri Anderson, who will play the role of Mary. Kent Hamre will be cast as Joseph for the eighth grade choir production.

EAGLE SCOUT award was presented recently to Bobby Camp, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Camp of Tucson, AZ, and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Jansen of Thief River Falls. A former Thief River Falls resident where his father was active in the Boy scout leadership, Bobby is a member of Troop 230 and received his award at Mt. Zion Lutheran church.

Mix Food With Drink To Keep Parties Sober

Party-givers should have plenty of food available for guests if alcohol is served at holiday parties, says the Minnesota safety council, supporters of the state "Drunk and Drugged Drivers Awareness" campaign. Snacks help slow the rate at which the body absorbs alcohol.

Last year about 25,000 Americans were killed in alcohol-related accidents; in Minnesota of 581 accident deaths in 1982, as estimated 55 per cent of 319 deaths were alcohol-related. Many of the traffic accidents occurred during the holiday season, when many people attend parties.

Hosts and hostesses should be aware of the following tips:

—Make drinks a sensible size and space them out. It's better for somebody reliable to act as bartender than to offer liquor from a do-it-yourself bar.

—Use a jigger to measure the amount of liquor when you mix drinks. It's easy to underestimate the amount of alcohol you pour in a drink, especially after you've had one or two.

—Offer guests a choice of nonalcoholic beverages. Many people prefer juices, soft drinks, tea or coffee but accept alcoholic drinks to be polite.

—Set up service so guests can easily help themselves to refills of non-alcoholic punch and snacks.

—Consider suggesting a carpool as part of the invitational process. One person in the group can serve as the "designated driver" — it's that person's responsibility to refrain entirely from drinking and drive the others home safely.

—If someone has had too much to drink, convince the person to ride home with someone else, take a cab or stay overnight.

For more party-giving tips, interested persons may order the pamphlet, "How To Be a Good Host: a Guide to Responsible Drinking," from the Minnesota Safety Council, 555 Wabasha Street, Suite 102, St. Paul, Minnesota 55102, for $1 a copy.

Child Car Seat Suggested Gift For Christmas

One possible holiday gift for children under four is a child restraint system, according to the Minnesota Safety council.

"What better Christmas gift than a child restraint system to show you care about a youngster?" asks John H. Shaffer, director of the Minnesota occupant restraint program, sponsored jointly by the Minnesota safety council and Minnesota department of public safety.

If you buy a restraint system for a child who does not have one, you not only will be helping protect the little one but also will be assisting parents to observe the law. Minnesota Statute 169.685, effective Aug. 1, 1983, states that children under four must be secured in federally-approved child restraint systems when being transported on Minnesota streets and highways in motor vehicles owned by the parent or legal guardian. The law carries a $25 penalty.

Statistically, traffic accidents are the leading cause of death and injury to infants and young children, Shaffer says. More than 80 per cent of those injuries and almost 90 per cent of child fatalities caused by auto accidents could be prevented by the use of approved child restraint seats.

Safety belts are effective in reducing deaths and injuries to older children and adults from auto accidents, but small children need special restraint devices to prevent spinal and internal injuries caused from pressure exerted on the still-soft pelvic area by adult belts. Whenever possible, the child restraints should be installed in the back seat — it's safer for the child to ride there than the front seat.

"It doesn't take a crash to kill or severely injure a child," Shaffer says. "A sudden stop from 30 miles per hour can propel an unrestrained child forward into the dash or windshield with a force equal to falling from a third-story window. It's a common misconception that adults can protect children by holding them in their arms. Because of the forces unleashed in a 30-mile-per-hour collision, however, a 15-pound infant would be torn from the parent's arms with the force of 450 pounds," he explained.

"A child restraint system makes an excellent present for a loved one and offers peace of mind to the giver, too," Shaffer says.

He lists the following additional tips for motorists:

—Don't allow a child to ride in the cargo area of a truck or station wagon;

—Don't use any child restraint system that already has been in a major accident;

—Don't use a second-hand child restraint system unless you're sure it meets current safety standards;

—Don't buckle yourself and a child into the same safety belt;

—Don't let the child ride in a carbed, infant feeding seat or any other device that hasn't been designed and approved specifically for use as a child restraint system;

Don't give in if a toddler resists the idea of riding in a child restraint system. Children will accept the child restraint seats if you're firm about it, and properly restrained children usually behave better in the car. And set an example by buckling up yourself, Shaffer concludes.

Persons who have further questions about child restraint systems may contact Shaffer at Project Childsafe, 555 Wabasha Street, Suite 102, St. Paul, Minnesota 55102.

Advent Program Set At St. John Church Wed.

Public attendance is welcomed at the advent celebration Wednesday from 6 to 10 p.m. at St. John Lutheran church in Thief River Falls, according to Rev. John E. Beck, pastor.

Highlight of the evening will be a live nativity scene on the front lawn of the church, located on the corner of Pine avenue and First street just off highway 59. The scene may be observed from a car on the church property.

Main front doors of the church will be open during the evening and refreshments will be served in the education wing of the church. The handbell choir will perform at 7:05 p.m. in the sanctuary which is prepared for the Christmas services this weekend.

At 8 p.m. a presentation will be made on symbolism of the Chrismon tree ornaments with a colored slide to be shown of each ornament design. Christmas carols will be played on the church's carillon speakers throughout the evening.

Worship services will be at 7:30 p.m. on Christmas eve and 10:30 a.m. on Christmas day.

Senator Says Worker's Comp Won't Be Less

Workers's compensation insurance is not likely to get cheaper for small businessmen, according to state Senator Collin Peterson of Detroit Lakes.

"There were promises of relief made when the 1983 workers' compensation reform bill passed," Peterson said. "Some short term benefits are starting to surface for large employers, but the prospect of lower premium costs for small business are not good."

Peterson said that insurance carriers are offering discount deals on workers' compensation to large employers throughout the state, while data from the insurance industry's workers' compensation rating association shows that current premiums are far short of covering anticipated losses.

The official data mandated by the legislature shows that premiums are likely to fall 27.7 per cent short of covering losses even without accounting for insurance carrier cost for claim adjusting, agent commission, profits and other administrative costs (although it should be noted that the investment of premiums and reserves produces substantial offsets).

"I don't have to tell anyone that insurance companies are not in business to lose money," Peterson said.

"This means that these 'loss leader' shortfalls will be made up by charging small employers more and maybe eventually by increasing premium rates for large employers when the fight against insurance pools and the state fund is over."

Peterson said he has little doubt that the wheeling and dealing by insurance carriers is a reaction to the creation of the state competitive fund and the use and expansion of insurance pools by governmental units.

"Understandably, workers' compensation insurance carriers want to beat the new fund before it even gets started," Peterson said.

"They are doing this by offering bargain basement premium rates to large employers."

This strategy is likely to succeed, Peterson said, and thus would leave the state fund and the pools with individual small employers and high risks shopping for the best deal.

"This is hardly the kind of customer to provide solid base for a new insurance fund," Peterson added.

Despite the 27 per cent plus shortfall determined by the rating bureau, premium discounts of 15 to 50 per cent are being offered to various large employers, Peterson noted.

The story of the Duluth insurance pool illustrates the current situation, he added.

The city of Duluth came to the legislature earlier this year and asked for authority to create a workers' compensation insurance pool with other governmental agencies and private employers.

"Duluth officials were urged on by officials of the Duluth school board and some large area employers," Peterson said. "They were hoping for a reduction of their workers' compensation insurance cost." The legislature gave Duluth that authority.

"But the ink was hardly dry on the governor's signature, when the insurance companies started courting the Duluth board of education and other large employers with cut rate proposals," Peterson said.

"The Duluth school board was offered a 50 per cent premium 'deviation' up front. Other employers were offered 12 to 25 per cent 'up front' discounts. Thus Duluth wound up without the backbone for its pool — prospective pool members being wooed with offers they found hard to refuse."

This discount game flies in the face of the rating bureau data which shows that existing premiums are not even close to covering the cost of losses, Peterson said.

"Insurance companies will not break tradition and offer discounts to small employers," Peterson said. "The little guy will pay the manual rate with adjustments to cover the indicated losses in the rating bureau report."

The operators of the Duluth pool are aware of this and they are working at putting together a pool of good risk small employers. According to Robert Healy, the Duluth pool manager, a group of small employers in this kind of pool could stabilize rates by spreading the risk and offering rebates on an experience rating basis.

That is the best hope for the small businessman in outstate Minnesota, Peterson said.

"I will work on legislation to make this easier to achieve, by either using the Duluth model or using the state fund as some type of umbrella for small employer pooling," he said.

"The alternative to innovative moves to cut workers' compensation premium costs means heavier and heavier burdens on the backs of our small businessmen."

REFLECTI NS

When life deals harshly with us, concentrate on some of the happy times we've had, nudge some memories that can bring back a smile or two. Life is a ledger, with entries on both sides, some happiness, some sorrow and it has a way of balancing itself out. The bad times must be endured, the good times savored. Today's sadness will pass as surely as the clouds dissipate and the sun shines again. Take comfort in that . . . for it is fact.

LOADING A SEMI with bagged sunflowers for birdseed is a regular routine at the St. Hilaire Co-Op Elevator's sunflower plant on Davis avenue in Thief River Falls. The plant dries, cleans and bags sunflowers for birdseed as well as handling sunflowers in bulk, serving as broker and shipping confectionery type sunflowers to overseas markets.

going up and up and up, and we have had to buy on the open market to meet our needs."

The elevator attempts to cover its contracted sales by contracting for equivalent production in the area. The annual contract has been for about 6,000 to 7,000 acres, but the reduced yields reduced the anticipated return per acre and caused a supply shortfall. This became evident early enough for the elevator to buy several million pounds of sunflowers during the summer. Delivery was taken by the elevator and storage arranged in the area.

Operation of the plant on two 12-hour shifts per day began in October and is expected to continue at least through February. Five people are employed in the operation full-time with some part-time help from other elevator employees who fill in when needed. The elevator continues to serve as a broker in handling sunflowers for other buyers, including Northrup King. St. Hilaire elevator was a buyer for Northrup King even when that company was running the processing operation here.

Kalsnes said that St. Hilaire elevator did not take many of Northrup King's accounts when the plant changed hands, even if he had been an employee of NK in the plant here. He went about marketing on his own, contacting retailers by telephone, finding out where they purchased their supply of birdseed, then contacting the supplier, sending samples and encouraging orders. Because of the quality of the product and the acceptance of the bag design, he expects the volume to grow and the number of accounts to increase.

"The more we can sell, the more our area farmers can grow with a good market at hand," Miller said. "If everything had gone as well for us as the sunflower business this year, we'd be in great shape. And we're looking for the operation to continue to do well for us in the future."

My experience with the MSBA consists of seven years as a director with service on several different committees and the last two on the executive committee. On many occasions, I have lobbied or testified for educational bills on both the state and national level.

I owned and managed a hatchery for the past 28 years and have also been a general manager of a wholesale plumbing firm. Recently, I retired and this has given me extra time to devote to my board duties and I have been encouraged to seek the office of vice president of MSBA.

Christmas Gift Plants Can Be Very Poisonous

Christmas gift plants can be beautiful! And some of them can be poisonous, warns the Minnesota safety council.

Those people planning to give a gift plant to a household that includes small children should ask the florist to recommend one that is nontoxic and just as beautiful.

A typical gift plant at the holiday season is the Christmas cactus, which is nontoxic (although large amounts of this plant ingested could cause diarrhea and vomiting, according to information from the Minnesota poison control system).

Another typical gift plant is the poinsettia, which has been unjustly accused. It is a safe plant to have in the home. But, for about 60 years, stories unsubstantiated by medical and scientific fact have been circulated during the holidays when the plant is at the peak of its popularity.

The poinsettia is not highly poisonous, although the sap does cause slight skin irritation to susceptible persons and, if ingested in large quantities, the leaves may prove irritating to the mouth and lining of the stomach.

Christmas trees themselves do not cause problems, although ingestion of the needles could scratch the mouth and throat, then cause an upset stomach.

On the other hand, mistletoe and holly berries which are commonly found in Christmas arrangements are extremely poisonous. Just one or two mistletoe berries can be fatal if ingested by a small child. All parts of the plant are poisonous. All parts of the holly plant also are very toxic, an especially difficult problem since the leaves and berries tend to fall off as the plant material dries.

Other toxic gift plants popular during this time of year are cyclamen, dieffenbachia, English ivy, philodendron and Jerusalem cherry, the yellow and orange berries of which may be especially attractive to youngsters. Anyone who has questions on poisonous plant material or suspects a poisoning may call the poison center day or night at 221-2113 in the Twin Cities or 1-800-222-1222 (toll-free) for non-metro residents.

Popular nontoxic gift plants include African violets, begonias, kalanchoe and peperomia plants. Mums are generally safe too, although a few persons may have an allergic reaction to them.

If toxic gift plants arrive in a household that includes small children, what should be done with them?

The recipient might consider passing them on to an elderly shut-in where they would bring cheer. At a minimum, they should be displayed well out of reach of little fingers and mouths.

Accident And Injury Risks High In Dec.

For most of us, the December holiday season is a welcome break from normal routine — a chance to celebrate and to spend time with family and friends.

But the holidays can also be hazardous. Traditional holiday activities, and a sometimes hectic pace, can combine to raise the risk of accident or injury. Minnesota department of health and the U.S. consumer product safety commission are offering a number of suggestions for keeping holidays safe and free from mishap:

Choose safe and appropriate Christmas toys for your child.

In selecting toys, bear in mind the skills, interests, and age level of your child. Look for and heed age level and safety information on product labels. Keep toys intended for older children away from younger siblings, and avoid giving young children "hand me down" toys that may not be safe for them.

Don't buy toys with sharp points or edges for children under eight, and be alert for exposed prongs or wires, sharp points, and sharp or jagged edges on broken toys. Children under three should not be given toys with very small parts, which can be swallowed, or lodged in the ears, nose or windpipe. Toys with long strings of cords can strangle an infant or very young child.

Children should not be given toys or games that involve shooting or throwing sharply pointed objects, such as arrows, darts or "guided missiles." All such projectiles should have cork tips, suction cups or other protective devices. Be especially careful in choosing electrical toys, and supervise children in using them. Avoid toys with heating elements for children under eight.

To further reduce the risk of accident, teach your child to use toys properly, and put them away when they're not in use. Make sure all toys are used under appropriate adult supervision.

Take proper precautions in selecting and setting up your Christmas tree.

Artificial trees should be fire resistant — check the label to be sure. Natural trees should be fresh — the color should be good, the needles should be firmly attached and should not break when you bend them, and there should be resin where the trunk was cut.

To mount a natural tree, cut about two inches off the bottom, and place it in a broad-based stand, with a place to put water. Support large trees with thin guy tires, attached to walls or ceiling. Make sure the tree does not block traffic, keep it away from fireplaces, radiators, and other sources of heat.

Water your tree regularly. Do not rely on sprays or chemical coatings to flameproof your tree.

Use caution in selecting and putting up holiday decorations.

Avoid inhaling artificial spray "snow," which may irritate the lungs.

Use Christmas lights that have been approved by Underwriters' Laboratories (UL). Be sure to use only weatherproof outdoor lights outside, and indoor lights inside. Check light sets before use, and repair or discard damaged lights. Never use lights on metallic artificial trees. Always turn lights off before leaving the house or going to bed.

Use only non-combustible or flame-resistant decorations. If you make your own decorations out of paper, use non-combustible or flame-retardant materials. Keep paper decorations away from open flames or electrical connections, and be especially careful with paper costumes.

Wear gloves when handling spun glass "angel hair," which can irritate the eyes or skin. Avoid tinsel or "icicles" that contain lead — they can be harmful if eaten by children or pets.

Keep "bubble" lights away from children. If you have small children, avoid sharp or breakable decorations, decorations with small removable parts, and decorations that look like food.

For further information about holiday safety, contact your state health department at (612) 623-5506, or the consumer product safety commission at (612) 725-7781.

Farm Family Hosts Needed For Trainees

Farm, ranch and horticulture families are needed as hosts for international agricultural student-trainees for eight months, March through November. Program provides the students with practical training and work experience and the host families with an opportunity to learn about farming methods in other countires.

More than 80 agricultural trainee applicants from seven northern European countries, Australia, Britain and New Zealand are ready for agricultural or farm placements beginning March 28. Additional applications are arriving daily. Call Fred Hoefer, Program Director, at (612) 373-0725 to find a trainee for your situation.

Student-trainee will live with his or her host family while learning about American agriculture, rural community life, new systems of farming and new agricultural methods and technologies related to his or her career goals. As a family member they will work the same hours as their hosts.

Student-trainees, ages 20 to 28, generally have two years of agricultural schooling and two years of post-high school farm and livestock work experience. All have a basic working knowledge of English.

Families wishing to be a host must:

(1) Be willing to accept the trainee as a member of the family.

(2) Be interested in the trainee as a person and as a representative from another culture.

(3) Be willing to discuss farm business and records with the trainee and cooperate with him or her in developing a training strategy.

(4) Be able and willing to pay approximately $500 to $525 per month, plus room, board and laundry.

Anyone interested in becoming a host may call or write for further information and an application form from Fred Hoefer, Agricultural Extension Service-O.S.P., 405W Coffey, 1420 Eckles Avenue, St. Paul, Minn. 55108; (612) 373-0725. Applications will be accepted through March. Families will be notified of their student-trainee's name and address.

Information and an application on a reciprocal program offering young American agriculturalists placements in participating countries can be obtain from the same address.

PTA Discusses Eating Habits Of Children

Poor eating can be very harmful to children's health. Today many American children and youth eat too much while others eat too little. Supportive home and school environment can help prevent obesity, says an article in the December-January issue of "PTA Today", the magainze of the National PTA.

The fact is that "obesity results from consuming more food than expending energy," according to Rob Wharton, author of the article and director of the weight control program at the children's hospital medical center in Boston. It is not true that: obesity is caused solely by too many fat cells formed during infancy, an abnormal metabolic rate, a thyroid deficiency, or through heredity.

To help a child who suffers from obesity Wharton suggests that parents:

—Eliminate high caloric foods from shopping lists and do not allow them in your home;

—Make mealtime a time of togetherness where confrontation and anger are avoided and positive behavior is rewarded;

—Place the proper portion on the plate of each family member;

—Decide with the child before mealtime if second portions or desserts will be served;

—Plan weekly menus to ensure proper nutrition;

—Prepare a box lunch if the school lunch is not suitable and if school policy allows;

—Seek medical treatment, if needed before attitudes and patterns become fixed. Medical treatment consists of medical examination, family counseling, and detailed advice on diet.

—Initiate an exercise program. A good start is a family walk.

While eating too much is often a problem, it is also true that eating too little is harmful. One such eating disorder is anorexia nervosa, a serious eating problem that chiefly affects teenage girls, says Alexander R. Lucas, consultant in adolescent psychiatry at Mayo Clinic. Lucas discusses this disorder, which is associated with severe weight loss as a result of self-imposed dieting and increased exercise, in his article in PTA Today.

Person with this disorder is usually very well adjusted and highly motivated, but has an irrational fear of being obese, according to Lucas. He says that a family may suspect this disorder in their child if that child:

—Demonstrates a severe weight loss;

—Sees herself as fat, but looks emaciated;

—Suffers from irritability, insomnia, depression, constipation, and feels cold all the time;

—Is obsessive about getting good grades in school;

—And isolates herself from others.

Signs of physical starvation and associated personality changes signal the need for medical evaluation, according to Lucas. Medical treatment for anorexia nervosa includes medical and psychological evaluations, family consultation, and possible hospitalization in some cases. Rehabilitation may take months to years.

Copies of the December-January issue of "PTA Today" are available for $1 each by sending a check or money order (made payable to National PTA) to National PTA, 700 North Rush Street, Chicago, Illinois 60611 (312) 787-0977.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

To whom it may concern: How many of you have read the TeleNews insert that was included with your latest telephone bill? Did you read the paragraph on the back side under "Billing"?

To those of you who missed it, I quote: "Beginning November 28, our bill will separate charges of NWB (Northwestern Bell) and AT&T (American Telephone & Telegraph) long distance calls. Then, starting with the January, 1984 bills, you will get at least two telephone bills, one from AT&T Information Systems for any equipment you may be leasing and one from NWB for all other services. Eventually, you may receive separate bills from all vendors that you obtain service from."

Does this mean you will receive a bill for the telephone line, another bill for the telephone itself, another bill for long distance, one for this and one for that?

Because of the impending breakup of the Bell System, the monthly bill has already been jacked up. They expect another rate increase in January so you can expect your bill to skyrocket even higher.

"Well, I'll cut my bill by jerking out the Bell phones and install the one I ordered from Sears." Fine, but what happens when your Sears phone goes on the blink?

This comes under the heading of "vendor" so wherever you bought your phone is where you'll have to get it repaired.

The phone company has a monopoly on this type of service so you really can't shop around for a better deal. You either take what they dish out or go without.

What would it be like if the supermarkets did this? You go to the checkout counter and pay for any meat products you have purchased. Bread? Sorry. That's two checkouts down. How about produce? Do you send your money to the farmer or will they have another department to handle that? The list could be endless!

But, that's the way your phone bill is going to be handled.

Doesn't this system of billing create an inconvenience for handicapped persons?

How about the people that don't have a checking account? Or, the people that have checking accounts but don't have an "Interest plus checking" type of account. This means you get charged for each check you write.

Because, like it or not, those of you who mail your check in will have to write extra checks for the same service we have grown accustomed to.

You see what this new improved telephone system is going to do?

It's the biggest joke yet dumped on the public.

Anybody who's had a phone go on the blink will know what you have to go through to get it fixed. Oh, no, you don't call the repair crew in TRF. You call an out-of-town number so they can call the TRF crew, I suppose this is to give some poor operator something to do!

A lady I work with had to call an 800 number to receive instructions on how to install her new phone. When she informed the instructor that she did not have the tools he was discussing, he wondered if she didn't have a neighbor that could install the phone for her. Imagine her surprise when she discovered the helpful informant was in California!

And they want more money to improve service even further? What, have they got an information desk in Tahiti? Or is that where the big brass from AT&T and NWB vacation six months a year?

If Alexander Graham Bell was alive today to see what his invention has wrought, he'd really yell, "Watson, come here, I want you!"

Thank you.

Economic Retaliation

Despite discussions, pleas and consultation, it appears likely that the province of Ontario will impose further fees on non-residents who would like to fish Ontario waters. Ontario natural resources minister Alan Pope is proposing a $3 per day fee for each person fishing in Ontario who does not have an Ontario base of operations.

Those who want to camp in Ontario would be exempt from the day use fee, but instead would pay a $3 per day Crown land camping fee. Ontario has also nearly doubled the price of its non-resident fishing license for 1984.

An editorial in the International Falls Daily Journal states: "Barring high-level intervention, there appears to be no way to stop it. And there's really no good reason to believe that high-level intervention will work, either. . . .All the ingredients for a border war are falling into place. Economic retaliation may be the only recourse.

". . . .From the time Pope announced his day-use fee proposal more than a year ago, this newspaper has avoided advocating retaliation by Americans. We have urged cool heads so a sensible solution could be reached. And we continue to urge cool heads.

"We would like to see this program deferred until some Minnesota fisheries propagation and tourism programs can be enacted and analyzed. We would like to see a joint commission appointed to iron our problems and design a course of action.

"But if and when this program is passed in early 1984, we will support economic retaliation. The legislature could handle the matter when it convenes in March. One method we especially like is a toll for all non-resident vehicles on highways leading to the boundary between the state and Canada (the toll booths would be at the border). Another would be to prohibit non-residents coming from a foreign country to bring fish into Minnesota.

"Economic retaliation would be harsh and, sadly, would contribute to the deterioration of relations between the two countries. But it would beat the kinds of retaliation some people have in mind. And it just might make Ontario officials fully realize the negative impacts their program will have on border businesses and residents."

Economic retaliation is a great temptation but a major problem is that it would impact on different people. If the Ontario government imposes and collects the fees, why penalize the Canadian traveler or independent businessman? They are not at fault.

One must not overlook the fact that U.S. visitors to Canada are there at the pleasure of the Canadian government, and that they have no claim to any of the resources of that country. Although tradition may be a strong argument, there is no compelling reason why Ontario or any other province should be overly generous with the exploitation of its resources by non-citizens.

Non-residents therefore have two clear choices. They can choose to pay the fees and continue their sporting endeavors, or they can take their interests and their money elsewhere. The greatest hardship befalls those who have previously had ready access to the resources at virtually no cost (licenses to fish are purchased by the user individually) and now find that increased individual fees will make their services less attractive from a cost standpoint. For the resorters who direct their guests or transport them by launch to Ontario waters for quality fishing, therefore, the honeymoon is over.

A $3 daily user fee probably wouldn't be that great a deterrent to an individual, perhaps, but it would likely be a major consideration for a family. The burden of an added $18 a day for a family of six taking a launch trip is significant. (If the launch driver fishes, as nearly all do, add another $3).

Then recall that the province of Ontario permits only 18 fish per boat regardless of the number of people fishing — and that means half-limits for a charter party of six people. It's no wonder that charter operators are upset and angry over developments of the last several years.

Is there a solution to the dilemma of protecting the businesses of Minnesota and the resources of Ontario? No one has come forth with a cure-all as yet. Maybe it takes something like the fee imposition to get the wheels turning. We should not be too quick to strike back at a friendly neighbor which is seeking to protect its interests and perpetuate one of its valuable renewable resources. We should rather look to development of our own fishery so that it has comparable attraction. Therein lies the potential for striking an eventual equitable bargain.

Visit An Old Friend

Following suggestion on observing the holidays comes through the office of Richard Spyhalski, administrator of Northwestern hospital services in Thief River Falls:

Loneliness and holidays are frequently synonymous for many older people. The holiday period is an especially busy time for most people. In trying to keep pace with the hectic holiday schedule and adhere to a demanding social calendar, many well-intentioned Americans will simply overlook the special needs of elderly relatives and friends during this time of year.

Yet during this season many older people are most vunlernable to loneliness and depression as they are bombarded, through television, newspapers and magazines, by reminders of earlier, marrier times when they themselves were at the center of holiday festivities and gatherings of loved ones.

Most residents of nursing homes are in their eighties, while many elderly who live in independent housing or retirement communities are in their mid-seventies or older. Many of their friends have died and some of their own children may already have died or are not able to visit frequently or easily.

It is easy for these people to be forgotten when so many other attractions vie for attention and time toward the close of the year.

Remember a relative or friend not seen for awhile. Or stop by a nursing home, senior citizen housing complex or retirement community and ask to spend a little time with someone who especially needs to be reminded that someone cares. Visit an old friend this holiday season!

No Privileges

Following editorial is from the Sacramento Bee:

Faced with the prospect of allocating hundreds of thousands of tickets to events in the 1984 Olympic Games, and realizing it would be deluged with countless requests for choice seats, the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee came up with what it thought was a terrific idea: Let the computer process ticket applications on a random, first-come-first-served basis. What could be more democratic, or American? Are you kidding? Now that the applications have been dealt with, and both tickets and regrets sent out to the applicants, LAOOC officials have been hit by a fire-storm of criticism from — you guessed it — their democratically elected public officials.

"Most wanted special consideration and unlimited access to tickets they though they might need," said Peter Ueberroth, committee president, who didn't even get most of the tickets he wanted. Many officials apparently didn't believe it when they were told the organizing committee wouldn't honor such requests, so when the reality sank in, the response was scathing. One California legislator even threatened to hold up measures related to the Games unless he gets his tickets.

So far, Ueberroth and his colleagues are unyielding. Only President Reagan, Gov. Deukmejian, Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley and their spouses will be accorded privileged status, along with members of the Coliseum Commission, who took care of themselves in negotiating lease terms with Games officials, another sore point among public officials.

Ueberroth is negotiating with the International Olympic Committee for some of the 100,000 tickets allocated to that body, which rarely uses even half that number. But even that holds out little hope for the disappointed officeholders. The LAOOC president says any newly available tickets will be given either to deserving athletes or put up for public sale.

It would be nice to conclude from all of this that it marks a victory for the Little Guy, and to the extent that ticket-holders prize seeing the Games above the prospect of a quick buck, that's probably true. Still, as opening day nears and the clamor for tickets builds, one suspects the spectre of the market-place will arise to create one of the liveliest ticket-scalping bazaars in memory.

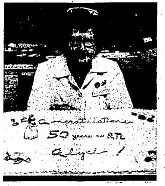
Borrowed Nonsense:

Teacher: "What was George Washington noted for?"

Student: "His memory."

Teacher: "What makes you think he had a great memory?"

Student: "Because they erected a monument to it."



AFTER 50 YEARS as a registered nurse, Mrs. Norman L. (Alice) Olson of Thief River Falls was honored with a celebration of the event at Oakland Park nursing home Thursday. Mrs. Olson earned her degree at Rugby, ND, in 1933 and worked at hospitals in Crookston; LaCrosse, WI; Jamestown and Williston, ND, before coming to Thief River Falls. She has been a part-time worker at Oakland Park for about 14 years, distributing medications and doing other work with the home's 75 residents. The Olsons have a son Bob in Georgia, a son Rick in Thief River Falls, and two grandchildren.

AFTER 30 YEARS involvement with the Land O'Lakes processing plant in Thief River Falls, Frank A. Passa (right) retired recently from employment with the cooperative. He is shown receiving a service plaque from Howard Espenson, Aitkin, manager of the Aitkin and Thief River Falls turkey processing plants, who will also retire in December. Passa was employed by Land O'Lakes from 1953 to 1956 and 1963 until his retirement. From 1956 to 1963 he was a USDA grader at the plant. He was most recently packing and quality control supervisor. Passa was honored recently at the Land O'Lakes Christmas party at the Best Western Inn and was guest of honor previously at a coffee party at the plant. Gifts were presented on both occasions. Espenson was also honored at both events.

Burglary Risk Rises During Holiday Time

Risk of home burglaries and vehicle thefts during the holiday season are greatly increased according to the Minnesota department of public safety (DPS). Main reasons are that many people keep extra shopping money at home and presents under the Christmas tree or on the seats of their vehicles while shopping.

"A suggestion to prevent holiday burglaries is keep presents and other valuables away from windows where they can easily be seen," said Commissioner Paul Tschida of the Minnesota department of public safety. "Another idea is ask neighbors to regularly check your home and report anything unusual to local law enforcement agencies."

Other burglary and theft prevention tips suggested by Tschida for the holiday and all year are:

—Make homes appear occupied while away. Use automatic timers to turn lights and a radio on and off at night. Timers can be placed on lights anywhere in the house, especially the bathroom. However, for fire safety reasons do not leave Christmas tree lights on when away from home.

—Don't keep large amounts of cash at home. No matter where it is hidden, a burglar will probably find it.

—Have sidewalks shoveled, deliveries stopped and mail and newspapers picked up by neighbors while away on a trip.

—Ask the local police or sheriff department for a free home security survey to determine how homes can be made more burglary resistance.

—Always lock all doors and windows. Use and install one inch deadbolt locks on doors.

—Contact the local police or sheriff department to join operation identification - a free property marking program that works to prevent burglaries.

—Help prevent holiday theft from vehicles by placing packages and other valuables in the trunk or other compartment to keep them out of sight. Carry presents instead of putting them in a vehicle if there is no way to conceal them. Also park vehicles in a well lighted area when shopping for presents at night.

Other vehicle theft prevention tips are:

—Always lock the doors, close windows and take the keys with you.

—When shopping or on business, don't park a car in a lot where the keys have to be left. When necessary, only leave the ignition key.

—Don't leave credit cards, vehicle title or other important papers in the glove compartment.

Now's The Time To Cut Your 1983 Tax Bill

This is the time to think about your 1983 income tax return because your last minute maneuvers before the end of the year can save you money, according to the Minnesota society of CPAs.

To help you map out your year-end tax strategy, gather all your financial records for the year and have handy last year's tax return as a guide. Start by adding your income, deductions and exemptions for this year. Then, do an estimate for 1984.

If you find sharp differences between this year and next, it may be to your advantage to shift deductions and income between years to get the best tax break. Generally, you should try to have the most deductions in the year with the highest income.

For instance, if you anticipate an unusually large year-end bonus this year, perhaps you can also move a deduction for charitable contributions into this year to help offset the added income. If you're thinking about buying a car next year, perhaps you can make the purchase sooner, so that any deduction from the sales tax would offset the year-end bonus.

Other deductions might also be easily shifted to your advantage. Do you subscribe to any investment or professional publications? Perhaps you could pay for an early renewal or a multi-year subscription and claim the deduction. What about union or professional dues? Can you prepay any of these? Organizations don't usually mind taking your money in advance. Can you stock up now on special clothing or business supplies for work?

Other deductible expenses that are often flexible include state and local income tax payments, as well as property taxes. If you make estimated tax payments, you can pay the January 1984 installment of your state and local taxes before the year's end. Similarly, you may be able to pay your 1984 property tax bill in 1983 in order to claim a deduction this year.

One of the most important deductions to think about now is the one for medical expenses. This year, for the first time, these expenses must exceed five per cent of your adjusted gross income before they can be written off. It used to be three per cent. Taxpayers have also lost the separate deduction for medical insurance premiums.

If you are already close, try to increase your expenses to exceed the five per cent floor. For instance, if your adjusted gross income is $30,000, only those unreimbursed medical expenses over the $1,500 are deductible. If you have already spent $1,200, you may want to have your routine medical checkup or buy a new pair of eyeglasses before December 31. Perhaps you can take that long-postponed trip to the dentist. Now is the time to act.

If you are having difficulty exceeding the five per cent floor on medical deductions and you are married, consider another strategy: separate returns. This could work to your advantage if one spouse has a larger number of medical expenses. If you can't exceed the five per cent floor jointly, then try it on one income. When calculating for separate returns, keep in mind that it carries the highest tax rate, and you'll lose the 10 per cent marital deduction for working couples. That's 10 per cent of the salary of the lower paid spouse, with a maximum deduction of $3,000. It's always a good idea to figure out the tax both ways to see which will save you more.

Now that you have some ideas about timing your deductions for the best tax break, think about shifting income into next year. If you own a small business, consider delaying billings until after the first of the year. If you are a sales representative working on commission, you can delay the closing of a deal so that your commission will be part of next year's income. If you are a salaried employee, you may be able to persuade your boss to modify the year-end bonus plan, so bonuses aren't received until after December 31.

Ideally, tax planning should result in a permanent tax savings. Sometimes however, it results in merely deferring the payment on part of the current year's tax liability until next year. But this still gives you the interest-free use of tax dollars.

President Of Farm Bureau Is Reelected

Merlyn Lokensgard, St. Peter area farmer, was unanimously reelected president of the Minnesota Farm Bureau federation (MFBF) and Affiliated companies at the MFBF annual meeting held recently in Bloomington.

Reelected to his fourth two-year term, Lokensgard, in his address to the delegates and members attending the function, challenged them to answer a fundamental question of today's agriculture.

"I'm challenging you as farmers, and as Farm Bureau leaders. How can we in agriculture feed those starving people in the world, and yet allow the economics to work?

"I see the television stories about a famine in Africa," he said, "and it pains me because I know we can feed them, and yet our government tells us to cut back on production to remain a viable farmer. I know there are problems in distribution, internal politics and everything else. But, we must have an answer, and I'm asking you to find it," Lokensgard concluded.

Midwest Co-op To Offer AI Class In Fargo

THIEF RIVER CLINIC EXPRESSES APPRECIATION

The staff of the Thief River Clinic appreciates the many cards and words of sympathy that have been received since the death of Dr. Duane J. Davidson. Dr. Davidson was a great asset to the clinic and our community for many years. He will be missed by clinic co-workers and patients alike.

Hopefully another physician will soon be added to the Thief River Clinic to enable us to continue to supply comprehensive and conscientious health care for the entire family.

Every effort to have full time medical care available will be made. We look forward to serving our patients through the years ahead.

RR Retirement Benefit Pay Is Changed By Act

Railroad retirement solvency act of 1983, now law, contains a number of modifications to insure solvency of the retirement system and prevent large reductions in current benefit payments.

One of the major provisions which affects current railroad retirees was deferral of the next tier two cost-of-living increase until January 1985. In addition, the act provided that the dollar amount of the next five per cent of tier one cost-of-living increases be deducted from the tier two benefit. Accordingly, the three-and-one-half per cent tier one increase scheduled for January 1984 will not be reflected in benefits checks because of the tier two decrease. The remaining one-and-one-half per cent will be deducted in January 1985.

Cost-of-living offset affects all employee and spouse annuities beginning before January 1, 1984, and survivor annuities beginning before December 1, 1983. It will affect some spouse and survivor annuities beginning after these dates.

While there will be no cost-of-living increase in January 1984 for most railroad retirement annuitants, there will be no benefit decrease. However, for those railroad retirement beneficiaries covered by Medicare, the January 1 check will reflect a $2.40 a month premium increase as the basic Medicare premium rises from $12.20 to $14.60 per month. This will result in the benefit check being reduced by that amount.

Anuitants whose checks include social security payments will get some increase.

Sports Editor

A telephone call last week took us to task concerning the coverage given to the girls' sports programs in Thief River Falls, particularly concerning the Lincoln high school basketball team.

We were reprimanded for the lack of "publicity" the girls received in comparison to the size of the headlines and articles given the boys' basketball and hockey teams.

The caller was fully convinced the girls were being slighted. We argued otherwise. Neither of us convinced the other side they were wrong.

Specifically upsetting to the caller was the fact that a 50-16 win for the girls over Roseau that made the Prowlers 3-0 received a much smaller headline Monday than did a Wednesday story of a 43-23 loss to Warren that ended their season-opening winning streak. Losses, the caller said, should be minimized while the wins should be publicized.

First of all, the word publicity has a bad connotation for those involved in the news (sports) department. We like to think we deal with newsworthy material. If we feel the material is of interest to the public, we'll use it. Publicity belongs in the advertising department.

And increased coverage for wins while hiding the losses is complete contrary to the role the media feels it fills. Cynics might mention that under that format, some less-than-successful teams might find themselves bumped right off the sports page.

While we rarely, if ever, "slam" or publicly criticize a high school athlete or athletic team for poor play, a proper job wouldn't be done if a sub-par performance or a loss were ignored.

Trying to balance the coverage between the numerous sports is difficult at best. A wide variety of factors will go into the amount of type or space a team may receive in any one publication. With the crowded winter schedule we very, very seldom leave town for a road game. There's always more than enough going on here to keep us busy. We make a very concerned effort to attend to as many homes games of all the teams as humanly possible. Obviously, if we're there in person the coverage becomes more detailed — thus longer. And generally, the longer the article, the bigger the headline.

And, too, the size of the crowd has an influence on coverage. Not always, but often times, a crowd will measure how much interest there is in the particular event. We try to serve those interests. It's often argued that "you give us more publicity and we'll attract bigger crowds." There again, we don't see ourselves in the publicity business. Girls athletic programs have improved by leaps and bounds since they were fully introduced into the sports line-up about 10 years ago. At the time the coverage was minimal because that's the way we saw the interest. As the programs improved, the crowds grew larger and we like to think the coverage has followed a similar pattern.

But, hey, we're naturally biased. To get a view from the other side, Prowlers' coach Tom Schafer and team co-captains Paula Wilkens and Shari Larson were contacted and asked their opinions — good or bad — about the coverage their team has received.

"Frankly, I'm pleased with not only the newspaper, but now the radio coverage," said Schafer, who has been the Prowlers' head coach for six years. "In my first four years as head coach, I had no broadcast interviews," he explained. "This year I think I've been interviewed twice for the radio, we've had a game broadcast on the radio, plus we've been on TV (KTRF's delayed tape broadcast on channel 3) and I think they're planning on some additional broadcasts."

"I think the newspaper coverage has probably improved over the years. At our games, you cover us very well, and you print what I report when we're on the road. I don't think you give us any less coverage than anyone else."

Schafer said he found nothing wrong with the headline size in regards to a win or a loss. "We're not going to hide things," he said.

Our general policy is not to interview high school athletes. They aren't particularly quoteable with lots of yes and no answers to your questions, and they tend to feel uncomfortable in that position. Coaches are our source of information. We did, however, want to get the impressions from Wilkens and Larson as a voice for the team since the caller gave the impression the girls themselves were upset with the coverage.

Wilkens and Larson, though, said otherwise. "I think it's all right," said Wilkens. "It's okay," added Larson.

Neither thought they were being slighted, and neither thought it would be right to minimize losses while playing up the wins.

Schafer did say, however, and we will have to plead guilty on this account, that this column has generally placed a great deal of emphasis on the boys' sports at the expense of the girls. The girls are mentioned, but not nearly as often as the boys. It's something that has to be corrected.

Actually, it's a no-win situation all the way around. Some Thief River Falls residents might complain because stories from Goodridge, Newfolden, Middle River, etc. crowd their teams out of headline space. We try to explain that we attempt to serve an area of northwestern Minnesota, not just the city of Thief River Falls. On the other hand, those in Goodridge, Newfolden, Middle River, etc. might argue for a bigger piece of the pie, only to be told that it's a Thief River Falls paper trying to serve the surrounding area as well.

We work hard at it. Naturally we can't expect to make everyone happy. But it still hurts when we're scolded. Maybe sub-consciously we'll increase the girls' coverage, but you will still see a loss and a win reported in what we feel is proper perspective. Sometimes that loss is, in our opinion, simply more newsworthy than a win.

Miscellaneous

+ Mahnomen has applied for membership into the Heart O'Lakes Conference for football in 1984. A unanimous vote is needed by current league members Barnesville, Breckenridge, Frazee, Pelican Rapids and Perham to admit the Indians, who played as a Class B independent this past fall after their domination of the old Pine-to-Prairie Conference caused that league to disband.

THIEF RIVER FALLS wing Tim Bottem (6) shoved the puck past Fargo South goalie Tom Burtness, but it rolled through the goal crease in the second period of Saturday's high school hockey game played at the sports arena. Bottem did score moments later on a power play, though, increasing the Prowlers' lead to 5-0 at 6:14 of the period. Bottem, Mitch Semanko and Ryan Bakke all scored twice as the Prowlers defeated the Bruins 7-2 for their first win of the 1983-84 season after three season-opening losses. They'll be idle until Tues., Dec. 27, when Thief River Falls visits Roseau.

Prowlers Pick Up First Win, 7-2

Tim Bottem, Mitch Semanko and Ryan Bakke scored two goals each Saturday as a dormant Thief River Falls offense came to life in a 7-2 high school hockey win over Fargo South.

It was the first win for the Prowlers after three season-opening losses, including frustrating back-to-back one-goal setbacks to Section 8 rivals Fergus Falls 3-2 and Bemidji 2-1.

"They gave themselves an early Christmas present," smiled Thief River Falls coach Wendell Grand. "I felt they moved the puck a little better tonight, and we played well defensively — not only our defensemen, but our forwards as well."

Thief River Falls dominated most of the play for two full periods in accumulating a surprising 6-0 lead against a team that had raised a few eyebrows with a 5-0 victory over Grand Forks Red River the night before. The six goals nearly duplicated the Prowlers' total offensive production of their three previous games.

"We generated some scoring chances by moving the puck better than we have been," explained Grand. And unlike the Fergus Falls and Bemidji games, the puck finally seem to bounce their way, he added.

A perfect example of how the bounces can work for you, mentioned Grand, came just one minute into the second period. Trying to protect an as-of-yet unsafe 2-0 lead while killing off a penalty that occured in the final minute of the first period, the Prowlers collected a pendulum-swinging shorthanded goal that opened up a 3-0 gap.

Steve Wiskow shot the puck wide of the net to start the play, but it bounced off the back boards, caromed through the goal crease behind Fargo South goalie Tom Burtness and landed on Semanko's stick in front for an easy goal.

"That third goal was really a big goal," confirmed Grand. "The momentum swung in our favor on that goal. Wiskow and Semanko worked hard on that play and the puck, fortunately, bounced our way for a change."

For the night, the Prowlers finished with two power play goals and two more while they were shorthanded.

Rick Spong tipped in Gary Cornell's slap shot in front to start the scoring at 9:40 of the first period, just seven seconds after a Fargo South penalty had expired.

An apparent quick whistle took a goal away from the Prowlers at 13:41, but a quick 10 seconds later Bakke took a perfect feed in front for a power play goal and a 2-0 lead at 13:51.

Semanko scored twice in a 3:06 span to start the second period, getting his shorthanded goal at the one-minute mark, then beating Burtness with a hard slap shot from 20 feet out at 4:06.

Bottem jumped on a loose puck for a power play goal at 6:14 and Bakke got the Prowlers' second shorthanded goal of the night with a strong individual effort at 9:49 as he got by the Fargo South defense and shoved the puck past Burtness for a 6-0 bulge.

Third period got a little ragged. Thief River Falls goalie Steve Solheim saw his shutout disappear at 5:30 when Greg Campbell of the Bruins scored on a scramble in front, slipping the puck under Solheim. Jim Honl shot one through the netminder at 7:48 to cut the deficit to 6-2, but Bottem scored from in front on a power play to close it out at 12:34.

Thief River Falls will be idle until Tues., Dec. 27, when the Prowlers drive to Roseau.

At Park Rapids . . .

Lincoln Girls Beaten 49-35

Tracey Alberg and Orla Honhstadt combined for 39 points Saturday as Park Rapids defeated Thief River Falls 49-35 in girls high school basketball action.

It was an inside-outside punch by the sharp-shooting Alberg, who hit 23 points from the outside as the Thief River Falls defense collapsed on the 6-2 Honhstadt, who had 16 points on the inside in her first start since suffering a broken hand.

"Having someone that big on the inside really makes things happen," pointed out Thief River Falls coach Tom Schafer. When the Prowlers defensed her, they left themselves vunerable from the outside, and that's where Alberg got most of her 11 field goals. It was a gamble the Prowlers had to take, he said.

Park Rapids grabbed a 13-4 first quarter lead, held on to a 23-16 halftime spread, but broke it open with a 41-23 third quarter cushion when the host Panthers scored four easy baskets by breaking the Prowlers' press.

Michelle Olson scored 15 points for the Prowlers, mostly from long range.

Schafer praised the play of Olson, plus the defensive work against Honhstadt by Michelle Puetz and Colleen Cullen. "They did a real good job against her," he explained.

Thief River Falls fell to 3-2 with the loss. The Prowlers play Strandquist Thursday at 8 p.m. in the first round nightcap of the four-team, two-day Marshall County Central invitational tournament. The host Nordics play Grygla in the 6:30 p.m. opener. Consolation and third place games will be played Friday at 6:30 and 8:30 p.m.

Park Rapids shot 47 per cent from the field Saturday night (21-for-45) and 31 per cent at the free throw line (7-for-22). Thief River Falls shot 33 per cent from the field (14-for-43) and 58 per cent at the line (7-for-12). The Panthers had a slight 27-23 rebound edge and the Prowlers topped the turnover charts 18-17.

Semifinals Tonight . . .

Goodridge Has Tourney Games

Semifinals will be played tonight (Monday) in the eight-team, three-day Goodridge high school holiday basketball invitational tournament, with finals scheduled for Tuesday.

First round quarterfinals were played Saturday when host Goodridge out-scored Redlake 72-65, Strandquist edged Oklee 50-49, Grygla got by Gonvick-Trail 49-45 and Plummer handled Warroad 66-42.

Today's games included the consolation semifinals this afternoon matching Warroad vs. Gonvick-Trail and Oklee vs. Redlake, while tonight's championship round semifinals will feature Plummer vs. Grygla at 6:30 and Goodridge vs. Strandquist at 8:15.

Consolation round will be completed with two games, Tuesday afternoon, with the third place game scheduled for 6:30 p.m. and the championship game planned for 8:15.

Plummer 66, Warroad 42

Plummer jumped out to a 16-4 first quarter lead en route to a 66-42 first round victory over Warroad.

First Plummer win by more than 20 points in eight years included a 35-10 halftime cushion and a 53-23 third quarter spread.

Gene Fisher scored 20 points to lead the winners, while Tim Gagner added 16 and Eric Eskell 10 for the 3-2 Cardinals. Scott Concannon of Warroad led all scorers with 22 points.

Grygla 49, Gonvick 45

Tony McLean scored 22 points as Grygla knocked off Gonvick-Trail 49-45.

Jeff Klein added 10 points for the Eagles, who led 8-7 at the end of the first quarter, went into halftime tied at 22-22 but emerged with a 34-30 third quarter edge that proved to be the winning point spread.

Mike Birkeland and Jeff Minton had 12 and 11 points, respectively, for the Bulldogs.

It was the first win of the year for Grygla after three season-opening losses.

Strandquist 50, Oklee 49

Strandquist overcame a 22-11 first quarter deficit to shade Oklee 50-49.

Oklee maintained a 32-22 halftime spread, but Strandquist rallied for a 40-39 third quarter lead and the two teams played to a 10-10 fourth quarter stalemate.

David Moyer had a game-high 19 points for the Warriors, with Dean Nelson adding 11. Kevin Enerson scored 14 points for the Bobcats, with Richard Hendrickson getting 13. Enerson's last second 18 foot jump shot hit the front of the rim and bounced away.

Goodridge 72, Redlake 65

In the tournament's highest-scoring first round game, host Goodridge outlasted Redlake 72-65 as Tony Wiseth and Scott Groven combined for 48 points — 24 apiece.

Goodridge had quarter leads of 22-18, 41-31 and 53-47, but fell behind briefly midway through the third quarter before coming back to win it.

Ross Parnow also hit double figures for the winners with 10 points as Goodridge evened its record at 2-2 for the year.

Duane Cobenais of Redlake had a tournament first-day high 27 points. Teammate Sean Lussies scored 21.

Northwomen Lose Normandale Game

Beth Kahmann, a sophomore guard from Bird Island-Lake Lillian, scored 34 points Saturday to lead Normandale past visiting Northland 65-57 in a women's community college basketball game played at Bloomington.

Normandale led 33-24 at halftime, and that nine-point edge wound up as an eight-point victory.

Northland coach Deb Jacobson said it was an even match-up — except for Kahmann, who hurt the Northwomen both offensively and defensively.

"It was a combination of our inability to cash in on numerous fast break opportunities in the first half and our inability to block out and prevent the easy second shots on defense," explained Jacobson. "Talent-wise we were very even."

Northland shot 33 per cent from the field (24-for-72) and had a poor 38 per cent game from the free throw line (9-for-24). Normandale shot 38 per cent from the field (30-for-80) and 56 per cent from the line (5-for-9).

"It was a good experience for us," noted Jacobson about the rare one-game trip to face a team from the strong Central Division.

Northland, 4-2, will host an alumni game tonight (Monday) at 6 p.m. and will be in Grand Rapids Tuesday for a 7 p.m. game against Itasca.

Plummer Turnovers Lead To 75-45 Argyle Victory

Plummer turnovers — 49 of them — cost the Cardinals dearly Friday in a 75-45 high school basketball loss at Argyle.

Host Eagles shot in front 20-10 in the first quarter, made it 37-19 at halftime and carried a 53-29 cushion into the final eight minutes.

Fourteen different Argyle players put their names in the scoring column, led by David Durand with 18 points and Ray Safranski with 14. Gene Fisher scored 14 points for Plummer.

Plummer shot an impressive 56 per cent from the field, but got off just 34 shots between turnovers, making 19 of them. The Cardinals shot 44 per cent from the free throw line (7-for-16). Argyle shot 49 per cent from the field (34-for-69) but just 33 per cent from the field (7-for-21). Plummer had a 25-21 rebound edge. Argyle lost the ball 25 times on turnovers.

"We shot well," mentioned Plummer coach Jim Baron, "but we didn't get that many shots. We got into a running game with them. I warned them not to, but they still did it."

Fisher 61
Goodridge 47

Brad Jordahl scored 15 of his game-high 29 points in the fourth quarter Friday as Fisher broke away from Goodridge for a 61-47 Polar Conference decision.

It was close until the final period. Fisher had quarter leads of 12-11, 24-21 and 34-31 before out-scoring the visiting Huskies 27-16 in the fourth quarter.

Most of the damage came, explained Goodridge coach Dan Brinkman, after the Huskies' Ross Parnow fouled out of the game early in the final period. He defensed the 6-3 Jordahl well for most of the night, but in his absence the Flyers' top scorer had a field day.

Scott Groven scored 21 points for the Huskies, with Tony Wiseth adding 10.

Goodridge shot poorly, hitting 22 of 57 attempts from the field (38 per cent) and just three of nine free throws (33 per cent). Fisher shot 44 per cent from the field (23-for-52) and 71 per cent at the line (15-for-21).

20-8 First Quarter Leads To 66-48 Victory...

Spuds Lead From Start To Finish In Win Over TRF

Moorhead got off to an 8-0 headstart and had a 20-8 cushion by the end of the first quarter Friday that ultimately wound up as a 66-48 high school basketball victory over Thief River Falls, spoiling the Prowlers' 1983-84 home opener.

"They came out mentally prepared and we came out flat," explained Thief River Falls coach Tom Hunt. "I though we were capable of playing much better ball than what we showed tonight."

Results left Moorhead with a 2-1 record while Thief River Falls fell to 0-3. The Prowlers are back home again Tuesday against Argyle.

"I thought we did a pretty good job," said Moorhead coach Chuck Gulsvig after the victory. He said the Spuds' goal was to get off to a fast start, and they did just that, with their quickness opening the doors both offensively and defensively.

It was 6-0 just 1:04 into the game to prompt a quick Thief River Falls time-out. But moments later the Spuds' Dave Hamlin came up with a steal and a fast break lay-up for an 8-0 spread.

Thief River Falls managed to get it down to 10-6 midway through the period, but back-to-back turnovers by the Prowlers ignited a 10-point run by the Spuds over a three-minute span that opened up a 20-6 gap before Scott Fowler's basket broke the Moorhead press with 21 seconds left.

Moorhead's lead dwindled to eight points on numerous occasions in the second quarter, but Thief River Falls was never able to get any closer. It ended 34-22 when the Spuds' Steve Quenette left the crowd buzzing the Prowlers shaking their heads by hitting a shot from midcourt at the buzzer. The Prowlers' Jeff Hamerlinck made two free throws with two seconds left, but the Spuds hurried the ball in play and Quenette threw it up from just behind the half-court line and the thing went in.

Quenette also broke it open in the third quarter when he hit consecutive short jumpers off the fast break after back-to-back Thief River Falls turnovers to make it a 16-point ball game, 42-26, with 5:09 left.

The Prowlers were never closer than 14 the rest of the way, trailing 50-36 at the end of the third quarter. They opened up three 20-point spreads in the final eight minutes for their biggest lead.

Quenette, a 6-3 senior guard, was the game's high scorer with 20 points. Tim Hill, a 6-0 senior guard, added 14 and Kevin Leines, a 6-6 senior center came off the bench to contribute 10 to the Spuds' total. Tim Kruse, a 6-3 senior forward, had 10 points and was the only Thief River Falls scorer in double figures.

Thief River Falls shot just 37 per cent from the field (19-for-51) after a 31 per cent first half (8-for-26). Moorhead finished at 40 per cent for the game (29-for-73). Both sides shot 62 per cent from the free throw line, with the Prowlers 10-for-16 and the Spuds 8-for-13. Moorhead had a 32-28 rebound edge and Thief River Falls topped the turnover figures 23-20 as both sides had trouble at times controlling the ball.

"We're very disappointed in our offense," mentioned Hunt. "We just didn't read the keys and react to the pressure like we were supposed to. Give credit to their quickness, though. They're the quickest team we've faced."

Varsity Game Time Changed For Basketball

All Lincoln high school varsity boys and girls basketball games will start 25 minutes after the completion of the junior varsity game instead of the 8 p.m. starting time listed on the schedules, it was announced last week by Thief River Falls athletic director Russ Smith.

Junior varsity games maintain a 6 p.m. starting time. Varsity games, moved back from 7:30 to 8 p.m. starting times this winter, have now been shifted to 25 minutes after the junior varsity game because too much of a time lapse had developed between the end of the preliminary contest and the scheduled varsity starting time, said Smith.

New varsity game times will be approximately 7:45.

Cardinals' Jody Pahlen Joins 1,000-Point Club

Jody Pahlen cracked the 1,000-point barrier Thursday for the Plummer girls high school basketball team, but her 10-point performance wasn't enough to avert a loss as the visiting Eagles won 53-48.

Pahlen, a 5-7½ junior forward who has been a starter for the Cardinals since the eighth grade, hiked her career scoring total to 1,009 points. And with the bulk of this season yet to be played, along with her entire senior year in 1984-85, that point total undoubtedly will go much higher.

But Pahlen was the only double figure scorer Thursday as the Cardinals trailed the Eagles at the quarter stops 13-8, 29-18 and 42-34. Bonnie Safranski scored 21 points and Karl Michalski had 14 for the winners, who held off a Plummer rally at the end. The Cardinals were within three points and were at the free throw line for a bonus opportunity with 20 seconds left but failed to capitalize on the opportunity.

Plummer had the better shooting percentages, but Argyle made more shots at the free throw line and from the field. The Cardinals shot 42 per cent from the field (18-for-41) and 55 per cent at the free throw line (12-for-22). Argyle shot 35 per cent from the field (20-for-57) and 48 per cent (13-for-27) from the line. The Eagles had a slight 32-31 rebound edge.

Pahlen, who needed 11 points coming into the game to join the prestigious 1,000-point club, reached that plateau with about three minutes left in the third quarter. The game was stopped briefly at that point when she was given a standing ovation from the Plummer crowd, was presented with the game ball and received one-dozen roses.

"Jody's not a real pure shooter," explained Plummer coach Rick Koivisto, "but she's been improving every year. She gets a lot of her points on drives to the basket."

Koivisto described Pahlen as an unselfish player who doesn't over-emphasize her consistently high scoring figures. In addition to her basketball skills, Pahlen is also a straight-A student.

Pahlen is one of four non-seniors in the Plummer starting line-up that also includes freshmen Janelle Konickson and Robin Brantl; sophomore Sheila Jaeger and senior Sheila Sorenson.

Plummer, 3-3, will be idel until Thurs., Jan. 5, when the Cardinals resume their schedule after the holiday break with a game at Climax.

Clearbrook 51
Grygla 42

Grygla's record fell to 1-4 Thursday when the Eagles lost a 51-42 game to the Clearbrook-Gonvick cooperative program.

After leading 10-6 and 26-20 at the first two quarter stops, Grygla fell behind 35-33 at the end of the third quarter and lost ground in the final eight minutes.

Debbie Klein, with 10 points, was the only double figure scorer for Grygla, scheduled to face host Marshall County Central Thursday at 6:30 p.m. in the opening round semifinals of the Newfolden Christmas invitational tournament.

It was a 21 per cent shooting night that did the Eagles in this time. They were just 18-for-84 from the field.

"Shooting has not been a problem until this game," mentioned Grygla coach Mike Gast. "We had some good shots, but we were just cold."

Grygla was 6-for-11 from the free throw line (54 per cent). Clearbrook-Gonvick was 23-for-73 from the field (31 per cent) and 5-for-14 from the line (35 per cent).

Gast praised the play of freshman Nikki Lian, who scored nine points as a replacement starter for Kari Klamar, sidelined with an ankle sprain.

Middle River 53
Greenbush 27

A strong Middle River defensive effort limited Greenbush to just one first half field goal Friday as the Skippers collected a 53-27 win on the road.

Middle River had quarter leads of 13-2, 36-6 and 44-14 en route to a 5-0 record.

Paula Rantanen poured in 30 points to lead the Middle River offense, and also shut down the Tigers, top scorer — Gretchen Roese — on defense. Jody Christofferson added 12 points to the Skippers attack.

Four-team, two-day invitational tournament at Warren awaits the Skippers this week. First round pairings Thursday will find Middle River playing Alvarado at 7 p.m. and Hallock going against host Warren at 8:30. Friday's schedule features the consolation game at 7 p.m. and championship game at 8:30.

Bemidji Wins Swim Meet

Traveling team trophy didn't travel very far Saturday when the host Lumberjacks won the five-team Bemidji high school relays invitational swimming meet.

Bemidji finished with 42 points, followed by Park Rapids with 31, Thief River Falls 28, Fosston 16 and Moorhead 15.

It was the 1983-84 season opener for the Prowlers, and head coach Jay Forney said he was well-satisfied with the Thief River Falls showing. "For the first time out, I think the guys did a nice job," he explained, giving special recognition to the three winning efforts the Prowlers had in the 200-yard backstroke, 200-yard butterfly and diving events.

Bemidji won five events, with Moorhead picking up one first place finish.

Thief River Falls will participate in the Park Rapids triangular Thursday beginning at 6 p.m.

Park Rapids won the junior varsity portion of Saturday's meet with 32 points, followed by Thief River Falls with 22, Bemidji 21, Fosston 7 and Moorhead 0.

Thief River Falls junior varsity entrants were winners in the 200-yard backstroke, 800-yard freestyle and 300-yard individual medley.

BEMIDJI STATE center Del Harper took the ball on the baseline and went to the basket as Northland community college defender Jon Neumann looked on during the second half of Wednesday's basketball game played in Thief River Falls. Harper scored 16 points for the Beavers and Neumann had 12 for the Northmen, with the BSU JV emerging a 69-53 winner.

At Minneapolis CC Tonight...

Northmen Lose To Bemidji JV

Going into Wednesday's game against the Bemidji State University junior varsity, Northland community college basketball coach Chet Engelman said it was his defense that he was worried about as the Northmen prepared for the visiting Beavers.

As it turned out, Northland's defense was fine — sometimes even great. But it was the Northland offense that went to pot in a 69-53 nonconference loss that dropped the Northmen to 4-2 for the year.

Lowest scoring game in recent Northland memory was some 46 points below the 99-point average the Northmen brought into the game. The defense, on the other hand, held the Beavers to just below the 71-point average the Northmen carried.

Ice-cold shooting did Northland in. They were just 25-for-67 from the field, a chilly 37 per cent night that found them missing a number of close-in shots, then fire way off target from outside.

Bemidji's size — two 6-6, two 6-5 and a 6-1 in the starting line-up — had something to do with it, acknowledged Engelman.

"That's the first time we've played anybody that big this year," he explained, "and it affected us. We didn't hit shots we should have made, and we took some shots we shouldn't have put up."

Only effective Northland scorers were sophomores Kyle Ramsey with 25 points and Jon Neumann with 12. Seven Northmen carried double figure scoring averages into the game, but they were the only ones to make it Wednesday. Ramsey, who had three slam dunks on first half breakaways, kept Northland close at the start with 16 first half points. Neumann enjoyed his best game of the season with a 6-for-10 night shooting, plus eight rebounds.

Northland led early, sitting on a 20-14 advantage with 11:45 left in the first half. But the Northmen hit just three baskets the rest of the way and found themselves trailing 30-26 at halftime.

It got away from the Northmen when they were outscored 20-6 in the first 11½ minutes of the second half, and they were never closer than 10 points the rest of the way. Hitting nine of ten free throws late in the game, Bemidji opened up a 19-point, 69-50 gap with 1:36 left before Ramsey scored twice off a Bemidji technical foul — called when the Beavers started play with six men on the court following a time-out.

Steve Burns, a 6-6 sophomore forward from Clarissa, led a balanced Bemidji attack with 17 points, with 6-6 Bruce Henning getting 16, 6-5 Del Harper 16 and 6-6 Eric Hexom 12.

Bemidji got inside for a 56 per cent shooting night (29-for-52). The Beavers were 11-for-19 at the free throw line (58 per cent), with the Northmen going 3-for-5 (60 per cent). The size advantage gave Bemidji a big 47-27 rebound edge. The visitors topped the turnover charts 22-13.

Engelman was philosophical when the one-sided affair was finished. "The loss won't hurt us," he said. "I think we learned some things tonight. I think we'll be okay."

Northland is involved in the Minneapolis community college invitational tournament tonight (Monday) and Tuesday. The Northmen play Willmar at 6:30 tonight while host Minneapolis takes on Austin at 8:30. Winners and losers meet Tuesday in the third place and championship games. That will be it for the Northmen until Jan. 7 when they have a rematch at Bemidji State.

DNR NEWS

Department of Natural Resources obtained 142,000 Atlantic salmon eggs and 679,000 Chinook eggs from fish returning from Lake Superior to spawn in the French river this year.

Richard Hassinger, DNR fisheries chief, said the eggs came from 68 Atlantic salmon and 173 Chinook salmon take in the French river traps.

Atlantic salmon averaged 7.5 pounds and the Chinooks 12.0 pounds. In addition to the eggs taken from fish in the French river, the DNR obtained 492,000 lake trout eggs from Isle Royale and another 271,000 lake trout eggs from operations elsewhere on Lake Superior.

Hassinger said the French river hatchery is currently incubating 679,000 Chinook eggs and 142,000 Atlantic salmon eggs. In addition, the hatchery is rearing 14,000 Donaldson rainbow fingerlings and 211,000 Kamloops rainbow fingerlings.

DNR Lake Superior fisheries supervisor, John Spurrier at French river, said angling of Chinook salmon was good this fall in Lake Superior tributaries. Some of the better streams were the Cascade, Devil Track, Temperance and Brule.

From August through October, angling for both trout and salmon was generally good in major North Shore streams, said Spurrier, and predictions are that fishing should be even better in 1984.

Department conducted a trout and salmon creel census on Lake Superior from June 1 to September 30 showing 62,175 caught. Combined preliminary figures of fish caught for boat and shore fishing are as follows:

Lake Trout — 39,000; Coho Salmon - 15,000; Chinook Salmon - 4,600; Rainbow Trout - 3,000; Atlantic Salmon - 175; Pink Salmon - 400.

Estimated catch of over 62,000 trout and salmon compares with the estimated catch of 27,000 in 1982.

Mustangs Are 42-16 Winners Over Eagles

Oklee-Plummer upped its dual meet record to 3-0 Thursday with a 42-16 high school wrestling win over East Grand Forks Sacred Heart at Oklee.

Mustangs coach Charles Bishop was most happy with the way his team came through in the middle weights, winning three of four matches from 138 through 167 pounds where the Eagles are strongest.

Highlight of the match was at 155, said Bishop, where Troy Gustafson of Oklee-Plummer edged previously unbeaten Mark Kerr of Sacred Heart 6-3. Kerr decisioned Gustafson in post-season play last year. It was a 2-2 stalemate after one period Thursday, with Gustafson taking a 3-2 lead into the third period when he quickly put Kerr on his back for three points and a 6-2 cushion.

Oklee-Plummer will take on East Grand Forks Tuesday at Plummer to close out the Mustangs' pre-holiday schedule.

Swim Opener Is Postponed On Thursday

Strong winds, causing blowing snow and poor visibility, forced postponement of two Lincoln high school athletic events Thursday.

Season-opening swimming meet here in the Franklin middle school against Grand Forks was erased, along with a scheduled trip to Crookston for a freshman basketball game.

Thief River Falls' swimming season opener was set back to Saturday when the Prowlers were scheduled to compete in the Bemidji relays. Thief River Falls freshmen, 1-2 for the year, will host Warren in their next start Tuesday at 4:15 p.m. in the city auditorium.

Huskies' Game At Goodridge Is Postponed

Weather forced postponement Thursday of a scheduled Goodridge high school girls basketball game against Fisher in the Huskies' gym.

Goodridge, 1-3 for the year, will be in action now until Thurs., Jan. 5, when the Huskies resume their schedule after the holiday break with a game at Alvarado.

Lincoln Girls Win JV Game At Park Rapids

Brenda Russell scored just before the buzzer in overtime Saturday to give the Lincoln high school junior varsity girls basketball team a 41-39 win over Park Rapids.

It was a 12-12 game at the end of the first quarter and remained deadlocked 22-22 at intermission. Park Rapids went ahead 30-27 at the end of the third quarter, but the game was tied at 37-37 as regulation time ended.

Russell scored 18 points to lead the winners, now 4-1, with teammate Shawn Hume adding 10.

It was a 26-21 loss for the Lincoln freshman in their season opener Saturday at Park Rapids.

Moorhead JV 49-33 Winner Over Lincoln

Moorhead defeated Thief River Falls 49-33 Friday in junior varsity high school basketball action.

It was the first loss in three games for Thief River Falls, trailing at the quarter stops 12-6, 22-13 and 31-21.

Kevin Nelson and Tracy Peterson had eight points each to lead Thief River Falls in scoring.

HIBBING CENTER Tom Fredrickson acted as a screen in front of Northland goalie Jay Boomgaarden, then jumped in the air to allow a shot from the point by teammate Don Quirk get by in the second period of Saturday's Minnesota Community College Conference (MCCC) hockey game played at the Thief River Falls sports arena. Quirk's goal at 8:08 made it 5-1 and the Cardinals went on to post a 12-2 victory. It was a weekend sweep for the visitors, who won Friday night's series opener 10-2.

Cardinals Beat Northmen 10-2, 12-2 . . .

Hibbing Sweeps Hockey Series From Northland

Northland's status as an unbeaten Minnesota Community College Conference leader was shattered in a pair of one-sided losses to Hibbing over the weekend as the Cardinals overwhelmed the Northmen in the two-game MCCC hockey series by the look-alike scores of 10-2 and 12-2 at the Thief River Falls sports arena.

Hibbing lived up to its billing as an MCCC favorite this winter by winning three of four games on the Cardinals' "western" road swing to the University of Minnesota-Crookston and Northland in successive weekend assignments. Northland, meanwhile, fell to 3-2 and the Northmen will have until Jan. 6 to mend their bruised egos that were built up with a season-opening upset of UMC, plus a sweep over Mesabi. The Northmen will be idle until Jan. 6-7 series here vs. Rainy River.

"We were just a totally flat hockey team this weekend," offered Northland coach Tony Dorn, Jr. "Hibbing is a good hockey team, and they capitalized on every opportunity we gave them. They beat us in everything all weekend; they beat us on shots, they beat us to the puck and they beat us on the scoreboard."

Hibbing coach Frank Catani, on the other hand, figured his team accomplished most of its goals in the Friday night-Saturday afternoon series. "I thought we passed the puck around nice. I think our depth showed. I think we carried it to them. The scores indicate we controlled play most of the weekend."

Hibbing	10
Northland	2

Northland missed some early scoring opportunities, then didn't get on the scoreboard until the third period in Friday night's 10-2 loss to Hibbing.

Ross Rosati, a sophomore second line wing from Eveleth, had a three-goal hat trick for the Cardinals, who built a 4-0 first period lead and had a 5-0 cushion entering the final 20 minutes. Don Quirk, a sophomore third line wing from Chisholm, scored twice.

Ladd Bjugson scored at the 32-second mark of the third period and Bob Rockwood scored at 2:45 as Northland cut the gap to 5-2, but Hibbing pumped in five goals over the last 10 minutes to break it open.

Hibbing ended with a 54-26 shots-on-goal edge.

Hibbing	12
Northland	2

Saturday's matinee rematch was even more one-sided as Hibbing out-shot Northland 62-25 en route to a 12-2 rout.

Tom Fredrickson, a first line freshman center from Hibbing high school, scored three goals and collected four assists for the Cardinals. Sophomore defenseman Jon Katalinich and sophomore wing Ross Rosati added two goals each.

Fredrickson started the scoring at 3:38 of the first period with a low ice-hugging shot from close-in. Mike Sobtzak scored on a long rebound at 9:41, Katalinich picked one up when Northland goalie Jay Boomgaarden mishandled his shorthanded shot at 13:51 and Rosati finished off a nice passing play at 18:47 to make it 4-0 as the first period ended with a 22-4 Hibbing shots-on-goal edge.

Northland got on the scoreboard when Bob Martin's hard slap shot from the face-off circle to the right of the Hibbing net found its mark at 2:21 of the second period, but Don Quirk beat a stick-less Boomgaarden at 8:08 and Fredrickson scored from behind a screen at 10:15 for a 6-1 cushion.

With a 4-on-3 power play, Northland's Todd Graslum put in a rebound off the boards just 49 seconds into the third period, but the Cardinals finished it off with six straight goals, including Fredrickson's third on a two-man power play rebound at 16:33.

Hibbing's depth (three lines vs. Northland's two lines) even carried over into the nets where the Cardinals used a different goalie at the start of each period with no discernible difference in performance.

DNR hotline

1. I'm concerned about the aspen logging in the Paul Bunyan State Forest and the affect on the area and deer hunting. What is the Department of Natural Resource's plan for the area?

There are timber sales active throughout the Paul Bunyan State Forest. These sales range from 20 to 80 acres in size, designed to minimize the impact in any one area. Approximately 1,000 acres of aspen are available for sale each year in the forest. There are 44,500 acres of aspen type in this forest. These sales areas are well distributed throughout the forest. The cutting of this mature aspen will improve the deer habitat in the forest by providing more diversity of types.

Due to the overmature condition and age of the aspen timber type, an accelerated harvest program is planned over the next 15 years. However, all cutting is planned under a system of sustained yield management to assure a continued supply of wood in the future. The public is encouraged to stop in and review the cutting plans at any District or Area Forestry Office. George Miller, silviculturist.

2. I understand that this fall was excellent for picking mushrooms, where can we find information on edible mushrooms?

Many mushrooms are to be found throughout the growing season in Minnesota. The person willing to learn several of these can enjoy mushrooms through the warm months. The first thing to do is to get a good mushroom book and learn to identify several of the common edible mushrooms. Most bookstores will have several books from which to choose. Another good way to learn one or two is to go out with a competant mushroom hunter and find out how they identify them. Rember, there are no foolproof methods for determining which are edible so a person must learn to identify them. During warm moist periods, many mushrooms will appear to pop up overnight. In the fall, look for Shaggy Manes along forest roads. Earlier, the Sulfur Shelf mushroom can be found growing on oak trees. Remember, learn to identify them before attempting to pick mushrooms for food. Never try any that you are not sure of. Paul Rundell, regional resource coordinator.

Department of Natural Resources has suggested that sportsmen who have wild game and fish in their freezers might be willing to donate some of their bag to the "Wild Game Share Program".

Under the program, wild birds, other game and fish fillets are given to the Community Food Bank which distributes food to more than 80 emergency meal centers in the Twin Cities metro area.

Last year, sportsmen provided 5,000 pounds of meat and fish — enough for 15,000 meals. Donated game is used in prepared meals served by public and private agencies providing food for the needy.

Four collection points have been established to receive the donated game and fish: the three Burger Brothers retail stores located in Edina, Bloomington and Brooklyn Center and the Greater St. Paul Community Food Bank.

Burger Brothers stores are located at 9833 Lyndale Avenue South in Bloomington, 4402 France Avenue South in Edina and 5927 John Martin Drive in Brooklyn Center. The Greater St. Paul Community Food Bank is at 344 South Robert Street in St. Paul.

Donations should be frozen and labeled. Freezer trucks provided by Kemps Ice Cream will be at all locations to collect and preserve the game and fish.

For additional information contact Glenn Nyquist at 542-2318 or James Warner at 542-2338.

Sparby Explains Value Of State Computer Use

Computer revolution which has overtaken offices and corporations across the country has quietly arrived in Minnesota state government, according to State Representative Wally Sparby of Thief River Falls, who recently toured the state's central computer facilities.

"What I saw there was truly impressive," he said. "We are in the middle of a quiet revolution, and I think Minnesota citizens should be aware of it. The state has extensive resources to aid in improving the quality of service to Minnesota citizens."

Every month, for example, the state prints 60 boxes of medicaid cards cut and printed in its central facilities. This is done in 17 hours on an IBM 3800 laser printer using information stored in the computer. The entire state payroll is done in two and a half hours. This speed and efficiency saves the taxpayers money.

By using a centralized computer system, said Sparby, the amount of time needed to store and retrieve information is only a fraction of what it would be otherwise. The current uses also include storage and distribution of drivers license information anywhere in the state and storage and use of tax data.

"The central computer floor in the Capitol complex is like something out of a science fiction movie," Sparby said. "In addition to the high speed printer, there are offices of programmers and trouble shooters working around computer terminals. There is a room with a color coded screen that monitors all incoming information to the main computer, as well as a library of magnetic tapes. The computer itself — the main frame — is kept in a climate controlled room."

But the state's involvement with high technology is not limited to the central information system. The information services bureau (ISB) of the department of administration, which oversees and coordinates the state's high tech functions, also is responsible for telecommunications and office automation.

"Office automation developments — word processors, micro computers, electronic mail — all are by-products of the computer revolution, and they greatly improve office efficiency," Sparby said. "The tight budget problems of the past few years which reduced the number of state employees increased the workload. Office automation goes a long way toward solving that problem."

Because office automation involves the use of micro-computers, the ISB supervises office automation for state agencies. It is currently in the midst of a study assessing future office needs.

Micro computers are also used by some state agencies whose smaller information needs can be handled by a smaller unit than the central computer. In any case, the ISB must approve all purchases of micro computers by state agencies, and it will provide follow-up if it is requested.

"The ISB provides training on computer equipment to any state agency," Sparby said. "It also advises on the purchase and use of hardware and software, not only to other state agencies, but to local governments as well."

Perhaps the greatest impact the ISB will have in the immediate future is on telecommunications. "The fast pace of technological improvements plus the court ordered breakup of the Bell System are having an extraordinary impact on telecommunications," he said.

"For example, the state currently buys bundles of telephone lines throughout the state to use for its own phone system and for access to the central computer from the entire state. With the breakup of the Bell System, the state may have to look at another way to make those hookups."

In addition to voice and data hookups, the telecommunications division of ISB also provides teleconferencing anywhere in the state. (Teleconferencing was used by several state universities to offer courses for credit after hours in distant locations.) It also provides operator service for the state's own phone system.

Recently, the telecommunications division intervened in regulatory hearings on telephone rates with the result that a proposed private line rate increase was not implemented. The division was also influential in establishment of a 911 emergency telephone service which serves two million residents of the seven county metropolitan area.

"For the services it provides, Minnesota's state information system is a bargain to the taxpayers," said Sparby. "The ISB is funded totally on the fees it charges other state agencies; there is no duplication of costs. Furthermore, the total state expenditures for data processing compare favorably with other states. Data processing expenditures in other states range from 0.4 per cent to 1.3 per cent of the budget. Minnesota's expenditure is 0.9 per cent. The range of data processing expenditures among selected large corporations in St. Paul is 1.3 per cent to 2.5 per cent."

Sparby is a member of the House government operations committee which will be reviewing and assessing legislation affecting the state information system, and ways to improve it.

"We are always looking for ways to improve the system to deliver the service more quickly and at less cost to the taxpayer," he said.

CAROLS ROSE visibly from the mouths of the Lincoln high school girls chorus as they sing at the Christmas tree lighting ceremony on Thursday evening at Elks Park. With the wind chill dropping temperatures to about 30 below zero, the ceremony was kept brief, and no time was wasted in getting back to the chamber of commerce office where hot chocolate and cookies were served. About 80 people turned out to watch the ceremony, which was the first held in the city.

Apply Early To Get Emergency Loan By Spring

Farmers in Pennington and Marshall counties should make application for emergency loans early this winter, in order to receive their loan funds before spring planting.

Disaster designation has been granted to Pennington county for crop losses suffered in 1983 as a result of excessive rain, heat, and high winds. Last date that applications can be received for the 1983 disaster loan program in Pennington county is May 18.

Marshall County has not yet received a disaster designation for the 1983 crop year, but did receive disaster designation for the 1982 crop year, for which applications can still be accepted until February 12.

To qualify for an emergency loan, farmers must have suffered at least a 30 per cent loss in either their cash crop or feed crop enterprise, and must be unable to obtain necessary credit from other lenders. For emergency loans up to $100,000 the interest rate is five per cent. Loans from $100,000 to $500,000 carry an interest rate of eight per cent. Amount that any farmer can receive is limited to the amount of qualifying crop losses that he has suffered up to a maximum of $500,000.

Farmers in Pennington county and those in Marshall county residing east of Highway 32 should contact the Thief River Falls Farmers Home Administration office for further information.

Teresa Johnson Wins Styling Event At AVTI

Teresa Johnson of Thief River Falls won first place in a hairstyling contest conducted recently among first year students at the Thief River Falls AVTI cosmetology department.

Johnson's design featured a single French braid moving from center front to center back of her model's head, with tiny glass beads tucked into the braid for accent.

Second place went to Laurie Benson, East Grand Forks; third place to Lisa Austin, Crookston; and fourth place to Debbie Glynn, Gonvick. Styling was judged by other students who have expertise in use of braids in hair styling. There were 19 students involved in the competition.

Competition included 45 minutes for planning and practice and one hour to complete the design. Objective was to design a long hair style, balance it, apply ornamentation and strive for total neatness.

Instructor Maxine Mottram said the contest resulted in excitement, great feelings of satisfaction and competitive attitude among the students as well as dramatic designs. She complimented the 19 juniors for their ingenuity, patience, concentration and planning.

Safety Ideas For Holidays Are Suggested

Minnesota safety council suggests that people can keep the magic in this year's holidays by celebrating safely. These days and nights are times to spend with friends and loved ones, sharing the joy the year has brought. Don't spoil the holiday by becoming a statistic!

The safety council estimates that between five and seven persons may die in Minnesota traffic accidents over the Christmas holiday and between four and six more persons may die on Minnesota highways during the New Year's weekend. More than 55 per cent of persons killed last year on Minnesota highways were involved in alcohol-related crashes.

One solution to the accident problem is the "designated driver" program. If the celebration includes alcoholic beverages, choose one person as "designated driver" who will refrain entirely from drinking alcoholic beverages, then drive everyone home safely. He or she should remember to fasten the safety belt, and make sure the other passengers do too!

Ambulance Service To Change Dec. 31

Beginning at midnight on December 31, operation of ambulance service in Thief River Falls will be transferred from Northwestern hospital services to Life Star ambulance system based in Hill City. Life Star purchased the ambulance equipment from the hospital for $57,522 through an agreement reached with the hospital board committee earlier this month.

Sale of the service by the hospital resulted from anticipated operating losses and the inability of the Pennington county board of commissioners to provide sufficient subsidy to make up the difference. The hospital had requested a $56,0000 annual subsidy for 1984 and the board offered $25,000.

Arrangements for the sale were made by a hospital board committee headed by Chris Twomey, chairman of the board of trustees. Others on the committee were Art Tranby, Clyde Christensen, Dr. Jerome Bray and William Hogan. Two potential purchasers met the criteria established by the hospital as being able to provide acceptable ambulance service for the community. Also considered acceptable was Jim Carlson of Milbank, SD.

According to Robert Stevens, associate administrator at the local hospital, the final decision was based on response times, previous operational histories and other factors relating to service expectations. The sale price was based on inventory cost of items sold and was not a competitive bidding situation.

When the change-over takes place at midnight December 31, the service will continue to operate out of hospital facilities on a temporary basis. Life Star is seeking suitable facilities elsewhere in the community, preferably a garage for vehicle and equipment storage with apartments for full-time attendants to reduce response time. At the start of service, ambulance drivers will have to take calls at home and drive to the hospital to answer the ambulance call.

Jim Osier of Hill City will be manager of the service here. Hired as ambulance attendants so far are Don Johnson, a nationally registered paramedic who was employed at the hospital from 1979 to 1981, and Butch Lewellin, an emergency medical technician.

Johnson said that two attendants will be with the ambulance any time it responds to calls. Persons needing ambulance service may still use the telephone number listed in the telephone directory under Ambulance Service and Northwestern Hospital Ambulance Service. The number is 681-8444.

Bruce Christensen of Aitkin is owner of Life Star ambulance systems which operates services at Aitkin and Hill City. He said the company is looking for emergency medical technicians (EMTs) as well as EMT intermediates and EMT paramedics who are currently certified and may be willing to work on a part-time basis for the service.

Christensen noted that the company is willing to set up any refresher courses that may be needed for these people to maintain or renew certification. A class can also be organized for those who do not hold a current certification card but are interested in becoming EMTs. Persons interested may contact Don Johnson at 681-2146 or Butch Lewellin at 681-4388

NEWEST SLED in the Arctic Cat line, the El Tigre AFS, was introduced to the public in Alexandria this past weekend, at a snowmobile race which was one of the preliminary meets for the World Series race to be held in Thief River Falls in February. Innovative design of the suspension system on the sled gives it over seven inches of vertical travel, and is intended to improve handling over rough terrain, such as that encountered in snowcross racing. Limited production of the machine began this week, to build 50 sleds for testing and marketing purposes. Although the company has been deluged with requests for the AFS, Ole Tweet, vice president of marketing, says that distribution will be limited, noting that the company is still "playing it cautious" and will base next year's production run on advance orders made through dealers.

Kostrzewski Heads County History Group

Wholesale changes were made in organization of the Pennington county historical society at the annual meeting conducted last week at the Thief River Falls city auditorium meeting room.

Gary Kostrzewski was elected president to succeed Inga Geving, who has headed the county organization for a number of years. Dean Paskewitz was elected vice president to succeed Margaret Weigelt, Richard Lytle was named secretary to succeed Libby Jones and Ted Hellie was elected treasurer to succeed Marv Enerson.

Elected to the board of directors were Vern Lindquist, Bernard Huot and Cal Lindberg with retiring board members including Odin Hanson, Randall Noper and Jesse Vedum. Lindquist and Huot are from St. Hilaire.

Continuing their board service are Frank Armstrong, Gordon Peterson, Robert Stroble and Orville Trontvet. Membership rates were continued at $5 per year ($3 for senior citizens) and it was voted to conduct two open house days at the Pennington Pioneer Village during the summer months of 1984.

Program for the evening included slides shown by Dean Paskewitz. Lunch was served by Mrs. Geving who will continue as an advisor to the organization.

85 Model Arctic Sleds Put On Line

In a limited way, Arctco Inc. began production of its 1985 model snowmobiles this week. That production run however, was limited to only 50 copies of its 1985 El Tigre AFS, said to be the most advanced production snowmobile ever to carry the Arctic Cat name.

Ole Tweet, vice president of marketing for Arctco, says that the limited production run on the AFS is being made for two basic reasons: (1) to allow field testing of the innovative A-frame suspension system which gives the AFS its name, and (2) to generate enthusiasm and excitement over the new line of sleds which will be introduced later next year.

Tweet notes that the AFS in the name is an acronym which can stand for either A-Frame Suspension or Arctic Front Suspension. Although the sled also incorporates a number of other innovative features, this is the one that has snowmobile enthusiasts the most excited, and they were already excited about the return of the El Tigre to the snowmobile market.

Readers of Snowmobile magazine chose the 1984 El Tigre as the most significant snowmobile of the current model season, giving it 36 per cent of the total votes. Brand loyalty played a big part in that vote, of course, with 85 per cent of those votes for the El Tigre being cast by owners of Arctic Cat sleds. This was the highest brand loyalty rating ever exhibited in the annual poll, reflecting a sentiment that people were glad to have the "Cat" back. However, 15 per cent of those votes were also cast by owners of other brands.

Since the major competition in that poll, Yamaha's Phazer and Polaris's Indy, already had some form of sophisticated front suspension, the AFS design should make the El Tigre even more competitive, both in the marketplace and on the snow.

Improved handling is the purpose behind the AFS system, and this is accomplished by utilizing cantilevered, inboard mounted, coil springs over shocks, giving low unsprung weight and a progressive rising rate suspension, providing seven inches of vertical travel.

This basically means that the suspension works harder as the going gets rougher, providing a more stable ride than the old style leaf spring arrangement. In design, it is very similar to the front

Liquor Store Purchase Divides TRF City Council

At a special meeting held Tuesday noon in council chambers at city auditorium, Thief River Falls city council voted to purchase the former Consumer's Coop building, to be used as the municipal off-sale liquor store.

That decision drew heated discussion, but when brought to a vote, was passed five to one, with Mayor Bob Carlson casting the lone dissenting vote. Aldermen Bill Penning and Don Goodrich walked out of the meeting before its completion.

Recommendation to purchase the building was made by the liquor committee, consisting of Chairman Milan Borsheim, and Aldermen Jim Womack and Ken Murphy.

Borsheim noted that the committee had been considering moving the liquor outlet to the downtown area for several years, having considered numerous other locations and plans for expansion at various times. He stated that they had been negotiating for about a year with the board of directors for Consumer's Coop on the former gas station at the corner of Second Street and Atlantic Avenue.

Noting that they had been informed by Si Hanson, chairman of the board of Consumer's Coop, that they would have to decide this week, due to a request to lease the building by a private party, Borsheim said the committee decided to bring the matter before the full council on whether to buy the building for a negotiated price of $90,000, plus a payback of $4,435 in taxes paid on the property for 1983.

Representatives of the senior citizens group questioned why they were told earlier that the building would be too expensive to renovate for use as a senior center, yet could be considered suitable for use as a liquor store. Borsheim claimed he couldn't recall such statement being made.

David Kildahl, consulting engineer, reported that he had examined the building, finding it to be structurally sound, although he noted that the waterproofing on the roof would have to be replaced. He estimated that renovation for use as a retail outlet could cost anywhere between $30 to $50 per square foot, depending on how much insulating was done. The building was estimated to contain 2,100 a square feet of retail space.

Alderman Murphy noted that there were some serious problems with the present liquor outlet, which does not allow enough space for proper display or storage of merchandise, also presenting difficulties in keeping it clean. He stated that although he was not particularly enthusiastic about the city being in the liquor business, if they were

Polish Family Observes Christmas In New World

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

Two years ago on Christmas Eve, Wieslawa Rymsza went to midnight mass in Poland and prayed that no harm would come to her husband. She had learned that day, after two weeks of worry and searching, that he had been arrested and was interned at Zabrze prison for his leadership in the labor movement Solidarity.

This Christmas Eve she will spend with her husband Andrzej, and eight year-old son Rafal, in a small apartment in a foreign country where the customs and the language are unfamiliar. They will be together, warm, well fed and free from fear of midnight arrest and further separation. And they will go to midnight mass as a family and share in the only thing they have — each other.

For Andrzej and Wieslawa the city of Greenbush in northwestern Minnesota holds warmth which negates the cold of a harsh Minnesota winter. The people of two churches — Bethel Lutheran and Blessed Sacrament Catholic — are serving as co-sponsors for the Rymsza family. Sponsorship entails providing clothing, furnishings for the apartment and some financial assistance. The family is entitled under federal refugee assistance to Medicaid and food stamps.

To some extent, the Rymsza family is a victim of circumstance. To a greater extent, they are testimony to a spirit of independence and self will that can not be entirely understood by anyone who has not experienced their situation.

Their story was unfolded through the assistance of Richard Novacek of Greenbush who served as interpreter for the Times interview. The family stayed with the Novaceks for a brief time after first arriving in the United States from Poland on Thanksgiving day, less than a month ago. They now live in a comfortable apartment in the former creamery building in Greenbush, which has been remodeled for rent-subsidized housing.

Andrzej attended school for the normal eight years in Poland, and later was trained by the government to be a coal miner. The training lasted three years, and in return for the training, he was to work for three years in the underground coal mines. It is dark, dirty and dangerous work, but the pay is nearly twice the average wage for workers in Poland.

For 15 years he labored in the mines, working so far underground that it took him an hour to go from the surface to a half-mile depth and through the mine shafts to the area where he worked. Then he became involved in the union movement known as Solidarity and was elected by other workers to a position of leadership. He didn't seek the position, but neither would he refuse to serve as a representative of his fellow workers.

Labor unrest increased and strikes took place. Solidarity fell into disfavor with the government and open confrontation took place. Martial law was declared and Solidarity was outlawed. Militia — described by Andrzej as neither police nor army — served at the bidding of the government to enforce the martial law.

On Dec. 13, 1981, Andrzej left for work and found the militia waiting when he got to the mine. Along with many other leaders of Solidarity, many of whom were taken from their homes during the previous night, he was arrested and interned in Zabrze prison. Other prisoners had been moved from the prison and it was used for Solidarity leaders only. It was guarded with machine guns at each corner and had an outer perimeter which separated prisoners from the outside.

For two weeks Wieslawa was unaware of what had happened to her husband. From other wives whose husbands had been arrested she learned of the mass arrests, but the militia nor the government would give her any information. Finally she went to the prison and learned that he was a prisoner. She went to a neighbor's house with Rafal and later went to midnight mass at the church, praying to the patron saint of Poland for her husband's safety.

The next day she and the wife of another prisoner made up small packages of food and took them to their husbands at the prison. They were to be allowed an hour to visit, but the day was busy and the visit was cut to half an hour.

During the 11 months which Andrzej spent in prison, he was allowed only one visit a month from his wife. On those visits she could bring him only three kilograms (6.6 pounds) of food. After he had been interned for five months, the American Red Cross and church relief groups were able to provide additional food for the prisoners.

Andrzej could have been released from prison earlier if

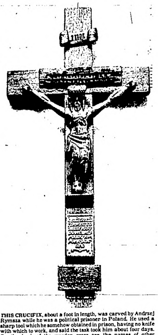
CHRISTMAS CARDS received by the Andrzej Rymsza family since their arrival in Greenbush from Poland help to brighten their holidays here. Andrzej, 38, his wife Wieslawa, 32 and their son Rafal, 8, arrived from Poland on Thanksgiving day under sponsorship of Bethel Lutheran and Blessed Sacrament Catholic churches of Greenbush. They have had no contact with families which they left behind in Poland. The sign in the background now hangs in their apartment in Greenbush and was displayed at a welcome celebration on their arrival. The Rymszas speak no English and the Christmas cards include several duplicates. Interpreter Richard Novacek explains that there were only three designs of Polish Christmas cards available in Greenbush. While this Christmas is being spent in a strange land among strange customs and an unfamiliar language, it is free from fear of arrest and a future without hope for employment which the family faced in Poland.

CARVED FROM COAL, this effigy of a coal miner was brought from Poland by Andrzej Rymsza who spent 15 years of his life working in the underground coal mines of Poland. He was forced to leave the country when the government would no longer permit him to work because of his association with the Solidarity labor movement.



THIS CRUCIFIX, about a foot in length, was carved by Andrzej Rymsza while he was a political prisoner in Poland. He used a sharp tool which he somehow obtained in prison, having no knife with which to work, and said the task took him about four days. On the back of the wooden cross are the names of other Solidarity union leaders who were interned at the prison with him. The work of art was one of the few possessions which the Rymsza family took with them from Poland and now hangs on the wall of their apartment in Greenbush.

At the guest book was the Mike Madden family, friends of the groom. LuAnne Hall, a friend of the bride, was in charge of the flowers. The wedding programs were distributed by Jessica McDonald, a niece of the bride.

The evening of rehearsal, the groom's parents hoasted a supper for 25 guests at the home of their friends, Mr. and Mrs. Chuck Albrecht in West Des Moines.

The bride is a graduate of Anita high school and the American Beauty school. She is employed by Guardsman Life insurance company. The groom is a graduate of Lincoln high school and is associated with Beltone Hearing Aids. He also assists with the Des Moines Buccanneers hockey team.

After a wedding trip to Minneapolis, the couple is at home in West Des Moines.

Prior to the wedding, the bride was honored at three bridal showers, the first at Gaurdsman Life insurance company, the second hosted by the maid of honor, and the third at the Methodist church in Anita.

Halbasch And Aandal Marriage Vows Spoken

Marriage vows were exchanged at Redeemer Lutheran church in this city on October 15 by Jane Lynn Halbasch and Daniel LeRoy Aandal.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Halbasch of Thief River Falls. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Aandal, Goodridge.

Rev. Luther Anderson officiated at the double-ring ceremony witnessed by approximately 450 relatives and friends. The prelude included piano and organ duets by organist Kristi Gerardy, and pianist Paula Adamson. "Thanks Be To Thee" was played for the bridesmaids' processional, and the traditional wedding march, as the bride was given in marriage by her father. During the ceremony Jan and Diedre Nordin sang "Two Candles," and "Gift of Love," and the Redeemer choir sang "Song of Ruth," and "Cornerstone." Bruce Halbasch, brother of the bride, was the reader.

Candleabra with white candles and lavender bows graced the chancel. Matching bows marked the pews.

For her wedding, the bride selected a white bridal gown of crystal organza fashioned with bishop sleeves and a chapel-length train. Venice lace trimmed with bodice and waistline and ruffled Chantilly lace formed the stand-up collar and bordered the hemline. Vertical bands of lace graced the skirt. Her headpiece was a brimmed hat with tulle bow, matching lace and seed pearls. She carried a silk cascade of white gardenias, lavender roses, white stephanotis, babies' breath and ribbon streamers. Her gold bracelet belonged to her maternal grandmother.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Jeff Hendrickson, a sister of the bride. Other attendants were Kathy Gebhart and Nancy Hendrickson, friends of the bride, and Christi Halbasch, a sister-in-law of the bride. Their lavender gowns with a sheer overlay complementing the bodice, featured ties at the waistline. At the neckline, they wore gold necklaces, gifts from the bride. They carried baskets of asparagus ferns and lavender roses, accented by lavender streamers. In their hair, they wore combs with lavender flowers and babies' breath.

Personal attendant was Julie Johnson, a friend of the bride.

Flower girl was Jessica Brekke, a cousin of the bride. She wore a lace trimmed, white batiste gown, sashed at the waistline, and carried a basket similar to those carried by the bridesmaids. Her gold necklace was a gift from the bride. The rings were carried by Ryan Halbasch, a nephew of the bride. Like the groom, he wore a white tuxedo with tails.

Don Aandal, Grand Forks, N.D., attended his brother as best man. Groomsmen were Gary Aandal, brother of the groom; Murray Dicken, a friend, and Wayne Halbasch, a brother of the bride. The ushers were Jeff Hendrickson, brother-in-law of the bride; Paul Storhaug, Tim Anderson and Roger Rogalla, friends of the groom. All wore black tuxedos, white shirts with winged collars, bow ties, and lavender and white boutonnieres.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Halbasch selected a lavender, long-sleeved street-length dress. The groom's mother wore a multi-stripe, street-length dress. Their identical corsages were of lavender and white roses.

Honor guests were Gladys Hamre, grandmother of the groom, and the couple's godparents.

A reception followed in the church fellowship hall. Hosts and hostesses were Bruce and Trish Halbasch, brother and sister of the bride; and Alvin and Pearl Wold, friends of the couple. At the guest book were Bruce and Judy Machal, brother-in-law and sister of the groom.

White daisies and greenery centered the serving table, highlighted by a four-tiered wedding cake baked and decorated by Margaret Rupprecht, a friend of the family. The cake, which featured a stairway and lighted water fountain, was cut and served by Helen Saatzer and Alice Lappegaard, aunts of the bride. Pouring coffee were the groom's aunts; Barbara Picolet and Bev Hamre.

The gifts were carried by Tracy and Travis Aandal, Brenda Machal and Melinda Heaton. Waitresses were Denise Anderson, Heather Adamson, Nicole Anderson, Melinda Heaton, Brenda Machal and Tracy Aandal. The flowers were pinned by Elaine Grovum and Vivian Brekke.

Following a wedding trip along the North Shore and to Duluth, the couple is at home in Thief River Falls.

The bride is a 1981 graduate of Lincoln high school and a 1982 graduate of the local AVTI school of practical nursing. She is employed at Northwestern hospital. The groom, a 1979 graduate of Lincoln high school and a 1982 graduate of the Thief River Falls AVTI school of carpentry, is self-employed. Photo, Alice Hofstad, Plummer

Frankincense And Myrrh Studied By Campanula Club

"Flowers mentioned in the Bible," the Campanula garden club study topic for the year, highlighted the meeting of the club held Wednesday at the home of Geneva Overum.

To correspond with the Christmas season, the source of the perfumes and incense brought by the Wisemen, was studied. It was noted that frankincense, a tree similar to the mountain ash, has pink, star shaped flowers with lemon-colored centers. Myrrh is a shrub with pale yellow pea-like blossoms. Both frankincense and myrrh are used in making incense. Presenting the study was president Ruth Holmes, who also presided at the meeting.

Following the reports by secretary Eleanor Tornes, treasurer Olga Johnson, and good cheer chairman, Bernice Knutson, the members selected the month which they will serve as hostess. The members also gave Geneva Overum a summary of this year's topics which will be included in the club's history book. The 1984 membership cards were distributed by Olga Johnson.

Nine members attended the meeting. They responded to roll call by participating in the program by giving a reading, poem, story or song. A gift exchange followed. A festive Christmas lunch was served by Olga Johnson, Ellen Peterson and Geneva Overum.

Grief Support Group To Discuss Death And Coping

Grief Support group will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m., at the Fireside room at the United Methodist church.

The meeting is open to anyone grieving the loss of a loved one. Those having a difficult time coping with the holidays are especially welcome. According to a recent area seminar on Understanding Grief, "there is no detour around bereavement, except to get it out by letting it come out. Time alone will not heal. It is what is done within time that helps heal or keeps the person from healing. Grieving is not a weakness, it is a part of saying good-bye."

The purpose of the local group is to help the bereaved come to terms with the death. The meeting is led by local laymen who have lost loved ones by death. There are no memberships or dues. People of all church denominations may attend.

Christmas Noted By Chat-Chew Homemakers

Chat and Chew homemakers Christmas party was held December 13 at the home of Mrs. Kenneth Murphy.

The event began with a noon potluck luncheon with all 11 members attending. A gift exchange followed. Each member also received a fabric bird ornament from Marion Williams; a plate of candy from Vi Sullivan and a wooden Christmas tree from Wanda Murphy.

The brief business meeting included a report on the Homemakers council meeting. Presenting the report was Mrs. Murphy.

The party concluded at 3:00 p.m., with dessert and coffee.

Doll House On Display At White House

by Ink Mendelsohn
Smithsonian News Service

Many American families will enjoy a Christmas tree in the house this year. But a trip to the white house may be necessary to enjoy a house in the Christmas tree.

This year, along with other ornaments, colorful and historic Bliss doll houses will be nestled among the branches of the white house Christmas tree. The Margaret Woodbury Strong museum, which has one of the world's largest doll and doll house collections, will assist in decorating the traditional blue room tree. On moving day, Bliss houses and a load of miniature furniture will leave Rochester, N.Y., the museum's home, and head straight for the executive mansion.

Journey of the Bliss doll houses to the nation's capital began in the late 19th century. In those year, toy manufacturers in America and abroad produced doll houses and other playthings in quantity out of lithographed paper over wood. Miniature works of the R. Bliss manufacturing company of Pawtucket, R.I., were some of the most diversified and widely popular in America, as evidenced by the number and variety of sizes that can still be found.

Bliss name has lived on for a very good reason — it was almost always lithographed right on the doll house along with the bricks and stones, window frames and doorways and eye-appealing gingerbread ornamentation. "R. Bliss" was usually found under the front door.

"Historians love a piece of the past that is signed," doll house historian Flora Gill Jacobs observed, "and so do collectors." One of the first doll houses she acquired was a Bliss seaside cottage, found 30 years ago far from the sea in West Virginia. Today, its home is on "Bliss Street" with other Bliss buildings in the Washington Dolls' house and toy museum in the nation's capital. Thirty years ago, Jacobs paid eight dollars for the doll house. Bliss doll houses, popular with collectors, are valuable real estate today.

Toy trade magazine, Playthings, described the Bliss line in 1907: "All were made in American designs to suit the tastes of American children." The first Bliss doll house known to have been produced was the "fairy doll-house" advertised in the 1889 Bliss catalog as "the best fifty-cent doll-house in the market." As years went by, the fairy doll-house magically grew into a Bliss mocrocosmos. There were houses of all types, shops, churches, firehouses, armories, stables and warehouses.

Lilliputian world of Bliss reflected the life-sized world and the changes taking place in it at the turn of the century. Bliss catalog advertised a 12-story skyscraper in 1901, just a few years after such towers arrived on the full-size architectural scene. Bliss skyscraper sold for 10 cents.

A dime had real purchasing power back then, but parents felt the Bliss playthings were worth the money as both pastime and learning experience. In that more traditional day, little girls learned about the complexities of running a household from the Bliss doll house and its accompanying furniture. And small businessmen were in the making as little boys played grocer.

A Bliss grocery store, circa 1895, features instructive lithography in a window showing cuts of meat, there is an apple barrel with a sign indicating that apples are 15 cents a peck and pickles are 10 cents a dozen. Along with staples such as flour, butter and lard, there are stove polish and bottles of blueing.

Stove polish and blueing are household products of a bygone era. It is an era that stands still on R. Bliss' miniature Main street. Although the last known entry of the R. Bliss manufacturing company appeared in the 1935 Pawtucket and Central Falls city directory, the small world of Bliss lives on. This Christmas, a corner of it can be seen at the white house when Main street comes to 1600 Pennsylvania avenue.

Marvin Firm Profit Sharing Is $2,957,996

(Editor's Note: Following information was excerpted from an article in this week's edition of the Roseau-Times-Region.)

Nearly three million dollars, $2,957,996.08, was pumped into the economy of Roseau County Saturday when the Marvin profit sharing bonus was paid to a total of 1,227 employees in the new building in the Marvin complex at Warroad.

The record profit sharing total came on the heels of a year which saw a record 53 per cent increase in the Warroad plant's sales (to $68.3 million) and $6.6 million sales at the Ripley, TN. plant for a total of over $76 million.

The forecast for the year ahead is sales of over $90 million, an increase of 35 per cent at Warroad and another $10 or $12 million at Ripley to push the Marvin total over the $100 million mark.

The Ripley plant exceeded expectations this year and the floor space previously utilized for window manufacturing is to be converted to terrace door manufacturing and an additional 100,000 square feet of floor space will be added there, doubling the size of the plant.

Added to these projections is a more aggressive advertising campaign which will feature inserts in major magazines which is anticipated to boost the Marvin image throughout the entire market field.

George Marvin told the audience that Marvin's has purchased 22 new tractors and ten new trailers last spring and have more set for delivery soon. They will load at the 32 loading doors in the new building (56 tractors and 87 trailers in all) which covers five acres at the Warroad site.

While the Ripley plant expanded from 38 to 84 employees last year, the Warroad plant has added hundreds. Of the 1,245 employees at Warroad, 787 are men and 458 are women with the whole having an average age of 39. The oldest is Frank Knochenmus at 83, the youngest is Autumn Tyler, 18. They are 78 married couples employed.

The changing scene in the Marvin enterprise also includes a new addition, Marvin Windows of Courtland, New York, a wholesale jobbing headquarters which was organized in mid-March under the direction of Jake Marvin and Ralph Nicholas, manager. Their sales from August 1 through November 30 were $965,000, and projections are for $2,000,000 in 1984.

In his opening remarks at the meeting, Frank Marvin revealed that if all the lumber in Warroad plant has used since the late forties was converted into brick molding casing, it would reach to within 1,000 miles of the moon or go around the equator almost nine times.

Jake Marvin outlined the changes at the Ripley plant, emphasizing that the estimated 100 per cent increase in volume became instead more than triple at $6,864,000 during 1983.

He cited the sales performance and the plant management for increased sales and being able to meet production deadlines. He noted that Warroad will continue to supply wood parts for the Tennessee plant, stating "there is not another millwork plant anywhere in the country that could have supplied parts, in the required quantities, with virtually no notice as to the ultimate volume."

The plant, he said, is expected to "come very close to our capacity in 1984." The plant addition is being made to protect delivery commitments to customers. It is to be completed in late 1984.

George Marvin told the audience that the move into the new building at Warroad will be made in the spring with the loading, jamb extensions, casemaster, casemaster clad, single hung and other departments being in on the move.

A lot of new equipment is to be put into production in the new building also. "There will be four more cut-off saws, a new edge-gluer, a 'finger jointer. . . an automatic insulated glass line will be set up too." He said the glass line will be, next to the building, the biggest single purchase the company will ever have made. "It will make a dual seal window unit and it will have to be located in an area that is temperature and humidity controlled," he indicated.

A Class grinder from West Germany is to be added (it will grind wood scraps and chew them into chips and sawdust and put them in the boiler fire box). Another grinder, from Sweden, is to keep saw blades sharp.

There was a rousing cheer from the employees when Company President W.S. Marvin announced the profit-sharing total of $2,957,996. He said he felt they should reach the three million dollar figure next year and noted that the average profit-sharing sum paid out this year was $2,410.75 which came from a covered payroll of $16,952,951.84.

PASTORS: RICHARD LARSON, ROGER HANSON AND CLIFFORD KALMOE

AMONG THE MANY Polish-speaking residents of the Greenbush community is Richard Novacek (left), who served as interpreter during a Times interview with the Andrzej Rymsza family. The Rymszas arrived a month ago from Poland and do not speak English. A coal miner for 15 years in Poland, Andrzej worked underground and earned the equivalent of $58 per month — about twice the normal wage of other workers. His involvement with the Solidarity labor movement led to his imprisonment for 11 months and his eventual firing from his job. He could no longer find work in Poland and was granted an exit visa (a one-way passport) by the Polish government which was anxious to have Solidarity leaders leave the country. Mrs. Novacek (second from left) has a Scandinavian background and doesn't understand Polish. Andrzej holds the crucifix he carved while interned in the Polish prison.

Odometers To Be Checked By Safety Dept.

In an attempt to identify motor vehicles which are brought into Minnesota with altered odometer readings, the driver and vehicle services division of the state department of public safety will begin checking vehicle histories when they are registered in the state.

Mike Ryan, deputy registrar and inspections supervisor in the division, said if an odometer alteration is detected, the buyer of the vehicle and the seller will be notified. He said the division will recommend that the two parties get together to conciliate the problem.

Ryan said the new program will work the same as one used in Wisconsin and recently adopted in Iowa. Attempts will be made to contact the previous out-of-state owner of the vehicle in addition to the licensing agencies in the state of origin. Minnesota automobile dealers association has pledged their support of the policy to check vehicles for odometer alterations. "We hope to provide the consumers protection and limit the marketability of altered vehicles in Minnesota," Ryan said.

Vehicle with an odometer alteration can have an inflated price of several hundred dollars. Wisconsin's experience in tracing vehicles with altered odometers is that the alterations are made by an out-of-state dealer. It is then sold to a dealer in Wisconsin who in turn sells it to a retail buyer.

Stangeland To Host Meetings On Dairy Plan

Congressman Arlan Stangeland will host two meetings for area dairy farmers to explain new regulations for the "paid diversion" program in the first week of January.

"The regulations for this program will be released at the end of December," he said. "Farmers will have until January 31 to enroll in the program. These meetings should help them to decide about the program.

The first meeting will be held at the Detroit Lakes area vocational-technical institute (AVTI) on Tuesday, January 3 at 1:30 p.m. Dairy farmers from Becker, Clay, Otter Tail, Wilkin, Wadena, Hubbard, Clearwater, Mahnomen, Norman, Polk, Pennington, Red Lake and Beltrami counties were especially invited to this meeting.

The second meeting will be held at the Melrose VFW Post on January 4.

"We have scheduled these meetings at 1:30 in an attempt to avoid conflicts with morning and evening milkings," Stangeland said.

Joining the congressman at the two meetings will be the ASCS extension directors who will administer the new program, USDA county extension agents and a staff member from the House agriculture committee.

"To enroll in the program, farmers will have to write specific plans on how they will control milk production," Stangeland said. "That includes how many cows they plan to sell, and what months they intend to sell them."

He encouraged dairy farmers to attend the meeting. "It is essential that farmers understand this complex program," Congressman Stangeland said.

"For example, if dairy farmers have greatly expanded their production in the last 15 months, it would not be prudent for them to enroll in the program because they would have to reduce production greatly to qualify for the paid diversion. On the other hand, it is vital that most other dairy farmers participate in the program if it is to succeed," he concluded.

85 Model Sleds Introduced By Arctco, Inc.

suspension system used on most modern automobiles. Although these are sometimes referred to as "independent front suspensions," Tweet notes that nearly all such systems are connected by sway bars, making them technically less independent than the old leaf spring arrangement.

Matching the front suspension system is a new long-travel, slide rail rear suspension system, providing over seven inches of vertical travel. Handling is also improved by keeping the machine light in weight, by using an aluminum tunnel, and a rubbery TPR material for the belly pan and nose cone.

Power for the sled is provided by a 500 cc, liquid-cooled, twin cylinder Spirit engine, driving a molded rubber track through an RPM sensing drive clutch.

Design of the new sled is credited largely to the creativity of engineer Dennis Zulawski, although it reflects the combined efforts of the entire engineering department, under the direction of Roger Skime, vice president of engineering. Dave Thompson also had a hand in the effort, and is credited with the design of the gold trim which accents the sleek, black machine. They share credit with a number of other people who contributed skills and ideas to make the sled a reality.

Several Arctic employees worked late into the night on Friday in order to get one of the sleds completed so that it could make a public debut at a snowmobile race in Alexandria over the weekend. That race was one of the preliminary meets at which drivers were competing for an opportunity to drive in the World Series snowcross race planned for Thief River Falls on February 25 and 26. Tweet reported that there were thousands of people at the race, noting that they were "five and six deep around the sled, and climbing all over it most of the time."

"I'd say the debut was a success," he added. "It generated a lot of interest and enthusiasm."

In spite of numerous requests over 300, so far, from racers and dealers who would like to take immediate possession of one of the sleds, Tweet said that they wanted to test it thoroughly before it goes into regular production. "Most of the 50 sleds we're building now will be staying right in this area so that we can test them," he said. "The remainder will be distributed to dealers all over the United States and Canada so that they can be tested under as wide a range of conditions and terrains as possible."

"Of course, we also want it to be exposed to as many people as possible as a way of generating enthusiasm for the entire 1985 line. It may be our top sled, but it's not the only one," he says. Lineup for next year will also include the Pantera, a luxury sport machine; the two seat Panther; a reintroduced Jag; and "back by popular demand" the Kitty Cat, a sled designed for children.

Tweet notes however, that the company is "still playing it cautious," and will base their production run only on the number of sleds ordered in advance through dealers. "Most people are just going to have to wait until next year to get one," he says with a smile.

STEEL FRONT END assemblies were being welded up last Friday in preparation for a short startup of the Arctco Inc. assembly line this week, in order to produce 50 examples of their newest snowmobile, the El Tigre AFS. An innovative new suspension system on the sled is generating a great deal of interest in the machine, and the limited run on the 1985 model is being made to allow complete testing and create enthusiasm for the new line.

Scholarships Are Offered By The Air Force

U.S. Air force is offering full scholarships to students in medicine and osteophathy, according to First Lieutenant Roger Kalonick, air force health professions representative.

First. Lt. Kalonick is accepting applications for the health professions scholarship program from students currently enrolled, or accepted for the next entering class, at an accredited professional school. Applicants must be United States citizens, of good moral character, and physically qualified for an air force commission.

Those selected will receive payment of full tuition and required educational fees; personal reimbursement for books, small equipment items and supplies required for the course of study pursued. They will receive an orientation, medical school schedules permitting, of the air force medical service for 45 days a year as a reserve second lieutenant with full pay and allowances; and a $570 monthly stipend for the 10½ months each year that scholarship winners attend school.

This is a very competitive program. Interested individuals should contact First Lt. Kalonick at (612) 331-8216 (collect calls are accepted) for further information and application details.

The average heart attack victim waits three hours before deciding to seek medical help, according to the American Heart association. As a result, each year 350,000 people die of a heart attack before they reach the hospital.

November Milk Production Up For 14th Month

November milk production in Minnesota estimated at nearly 93.2 million gallons reflected an increase of one-half of one per cent from the previous month, but nearly a six per cent gain compared to a year ago. Number of milk cows on the line held at 890,000 for the 14th straight month, according to agriculture commissioner Jim Nichols.

Estimated milk marketings last month raised to almost $45 million the total of federal assessments taken out of Minnesota dairy farm gross income in the past seven and one-half months. The November contribution, just short of $8 million, was the largest monthly kickback to Uncle Sam thus far.

Commissioner Nichols said that the latest production estimates, particularly the stable cow numbers, show that Minnesota dairy farmers were continuing to defer decisions on cutting back production although both the old and the new federal dairy price support laws are cutting their milk checks. He said this indicates that debt servicing cash flow remains a problem, along with the fact that the dairy herd now is in the increased production and efficiency cycle.

November was the 15th straight month that average milk production per cow in Minnesota achieved new all time highs for the month. Last month's average of 104.7 gallons per cow was 12 per cent higher than two years ago and a 25 per cent increase in the past 10 years.

Minnesota milk production for the first 11 months of 1983 is estimated at 1.14 billion gallons, a three per cent increase compared to a year ago. National milk production this year was four per cent higher than in 1982.

Nationally, only 10 states, including Minnesota, reported fewer milk cows in production this November than two years ago. Comparisons to 1982 are not available as only quarter estimates of the dairy industry were issued by the U.S. department of agriculture last year.

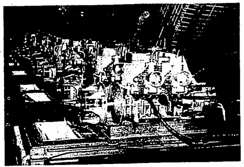
Program Gives Knowledge Of Foreign Policy

Nationwide program to increase the understanding of American foreign policy and to influence policymakers is being offered by the foreign policy association. This non-partisan, non-governmental group sponsors a program called "Great Decisions '84" and includes a paperback book which gives background and data on the eight current major topics of American foreign policy.

Some of the 1984 issues will involve U.S. security and world peace, international debt crisis and China and the U.S. This program also includes local discussion groups, lecture series offered by community organizations and course credits given by universities.

"The Christian Science Monitor" will be publishing articles on the eight issues during February and March, and public radio and TV will be running related programs during this time.

Teacher guides and discussion handbooks are provided by the foreign policy association. For more information on how to take part in this national program, please contact the Pennington county extension service at 681-2116.



ENGINES were lined up on a bench last week, awaiting startup of the Arctco Inc. assembly line for a short preproduction run to assemble 50 examples of its newest snowmobile, the El Tigre AFS. Engines are liquid cooled, 500 cc, twin cylinder Spirits, manufactured by Suzuki, and transmit power through a comet RPM-sensing drive clutch.

Needlework Is Featured At Winter Shows

Needlework will again be a special feature at the women's seminar at the Red River Valley winter shows in Crookston, Wednesday, February 22. This non-competitive exhibit will include needlework from the talents of people from all of northwest Minnesota, and that means you or that creative someone you know.

Rules are basically the same as last year. Any kind of needlework made with a needle with an eye, crocheted or tatted will be welcomed. It should be complete, ready to use, labeled with name and address and identified as from a kit, adapted from a kit or original.

Articles should be entered at the armory in Crookston on Tuesday, February 21 from 3 to 7 p.m. or they may be brought to the extension office prior to Friday, February 17, and the county extension agent will get them to Crookston. Articles can be taken after the Wednesday program.

Workshop On Meats To Be Held Dec. 28

A meats training workshop will be held December 28th at North Dakota state university, Fargo, ND. The objective of the workshop will be to teach and inform interested persons on species, wholesale and retail cuts of meat, muscle and bone identification and to provide teaching aids.

The workshop will run from 9:00 a.m. until 4:00 p.m. For further information call the Pennington County Extension Service at 681-2116.

Applications For Fuel Aid Are Accepted

Northwest community action will take energy assistance applications at the local intake sites during the month of December. Anyone wishing to apply for energy assistance must make an appointment.

Appointments can be made by telephone on Monday mornings between the hours of 8 a.m. and 12 noon. In East Marshall county call Karen Skadsem at 222-3309. Applications for energy assistance will be taken until May 31, 1984.

Ordinances Should Be Clearly Written

Zoning ordinances should be carefully written to eliminate ambiguities that could be the basis of potentially costly lawsuits, according to Robert W. Snyder of the University of Minnesota. Snyder is a land economist for the agricultural extension service.

His warning was prompted in part by a November decision by the Minnesota supreme court interpreting the language in a Minneapolis zoning ordinance in favor of a landowner — a church in southwest Minneapolis with an attached monastery — rather than the city.

Decision of the court, which affirmed a district court ruling, was based on the definition of the word "monastery." The city and the church each submitted a definition of the word and the court sided with the church. According to Snyder, who is also an attorney, it is more common for courts to rule in favor of landowners than regulatory bodies when interpretation of an unclear ordinance is at issue.

"This is just the latest in a series of cases in which the regulatory body was declared in the wrong because of the language in ordinances," he explained. Ordinances can contain terms that are ambiguous, an entire ordinance may be subject to differing interpretations, or multiple provisions in an ordinance may present internal inconsistencies.

"Many of these ordinances are poorly edited and should be carefully gone over and revised to make their intent clear," he added, "preferably by someone familiar with zoning law. Over and over I see courts rule in favor of the landowner because an ordinance was unclear. If they are made more clear, all the parties know what is expected and permissible."

Snyder said that rewriting ordinances to eliminate ambiguities can make them longer and more difficult to follow, but not necessarily so. Definitions should be as close to customary use as possible. Exlusions can also be drafted into the ordinances.

Clarity in ordinance language is becoming increasingly important, he said, for several reasons. Many townships are adopting ordinances for the first time and are not families with the process, there are more and more ordinances in existence as communities deal with increased housing and business needs, and landowners are becoming increasingly familiar with zoning laws and more inclined to challenge those laws if they think they will win.

Another very important incentive for municipalities to rewrite ordinances to minimize the possibility of lawsuits is the recent reinterpretation of an old federal statute that may cause municipalities losing such suits to pay the legal costs of bringing suit. "Up to now, the landowners had to pay their own legal costs; now, if landowners become aware of this federal statute and think they have a good case, they'll be more likely to bring suit," Snyder said.

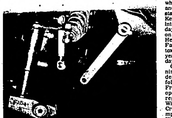
BUFFING UP one of the sleek new hoods for the El Tigre AFS, Arctco Inc. employees Bert Gjovik and Casey Kayser got the newest sled in the Arctic Cat line ready for its public debut in Alexandria last weekend. A short preproduction run of the 1985 model is being made this week to build 50 sleds for testing and limited distribution. Hoods for the new design feature a rubber nose cone and belly pan to reduce damage from impacts and reduce weight. Gold trim on the hoods also utilizes a new press-cut type of decal which more closely approximates a painted on design.



CLOSE-UP look at the front suspension system on the Arctic Cat El Tigre AFS, with skis removed, shows the resemblance to systems used on modern automobiles. Designed by Dennis Zulawski of Arctco Inc., the system has generated a great deal of interest among snowmobile enthusiasts, and the 1985 model sled is being introduced this year in very limited numbers to allow testing and assist in marketing efforts.

Saying Thanks Increases Joy To Gift Giver

The holiday season is one in which the expression, "It's more blessed to give than to receive," is joyfully demonstrated. It's also appropriate that the sender's generosity be remembered in a thank-you note.

"It's important that the thank-you be conveyed as soon as possible following the giver's kindness," says Larry Salvaggio, product manager for stationery at a major greeting card company. "But too often sending the note is delayed because the receiver just doesn't know what to write."

He offers the following hints that make sending a thank-you note easier:

—Write the note within a few days of the receipt of the gift, while details are still fresh in your mind.

—Describe the moment when the gift was received. Tell the person who sent the gift how you felt when you opened it.

—Explain how the gift will be used — and be specific. Let Aunt Minnie know the first occasion when the sweater will be worn, for example.

—Jot a note about what the gift meant to you, or mention how it reflects the giver's personality. Try something like, "Only you would have known that we'd be up all night Christmas eve wrapping presents, and I'd be too tired to cook a fancy breakfast. But thanks to the breads you sent, the morning was perfect for everyone — including me!"

—Set the gift in front of you to nudge a comment or two describing it. "It looks like a sled, Grandpa, but it sounds like laughter. I can see the twins from the window right now and they're having the times of their lives."

—Personalize the thank-you note with a photograph of the gift as it is opened or is being used by the receiver.

"Sincerity and originality are the keys to writing a thank-you note," Salvaggio says, "and it will make the person who gave you the gift as happy as you were when you opened it."

Wheat Ass'n. Reelects Five At Convention

Minnesota association of wheat growers held its eighth annual convention in Moorhead recently, reelecting president Harry Howard, Warren; first vice president Don Loeslie, Warren; second vice president Gordon Sonstelie, Winger; and at-large directors Marvin Zutz, Red Lake Falls, and Charles Evenson, Fergus Falls.

About 305 association members and others attended the meeting to hear about and discuss concerns of the wheat industry for the upcoming growing season, and for the 1985 farm bill which will be debated in congress in the coming year.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

Wishing you a Merry Christmas from Korea. I'm several months into this adventure. It all began in July when I arrived at Camp Casey, headquarters of the 2nd Infantry Division. Casey is located about 25 miles north of Seoul in the middle of the country between east and west coasts and 20 or so miles south of the demilitarized zone. We call it the DMZ or the 'Z'. The division is located at numerous base camps throughout the northwest part of Korea. Part of the division is on the DMZ. The U.S. has two outposts in the DMZ, plus is the big brother to the joint security area in Panmunjom. We spent a great deal of our time in the field getting good at our mission in order to let the bad guys know we can outsoldier them.

Korea is a very pretty country. The people are hard working and moving into the 20th century very quickly. Language and customs are difficult for the westerner. Also the food is a bit exotic for most mid-westerners. I've had several opportunities to travel both by helicopter and train and all of Korea is mountains. In the summer it's green and beautiful, but in the winter it's brown and ugly. There wasn't a fall. The trees went from green to brown to bare. The Japanese cut down the trees during all the many years of their occupation. As you might imagine tree planting is bigtime in Korea. The soil is poor, at least on the mountains, so the vegetation, is generally small and colorless.

The main preoccupation for Americans in Korea is bargain hunting. Many of the designer clothes sold in the states sold in the states are of Korean manufacture. A word of caution: Korea is also the country that generally "gets things almost right". Translation, all bargains are seconds. The businessmen are Harvard graduates with an MBA. They saw us coming. The most run-down bargain shop will charge the highest price, while the nice looking shop has to sell for less to get customers. Its the American-way in Korea.

One of the most difficult adjustments is the time difference between the U.S. and Korea. Seoul is 14 hours ahead of Washington and 15 hours ahead of Chicago. Our Monday morning is your Sunday afternoon. That means NFL football at 4 a.m. on Monday morning — some things never recover from the jet-lag.

Camp Casey is located in the town of Tong-du-Cheon, named by a French Korean no doubt, meaning bottom of the 'lake? (That's an insider for the folks from Wisconsin). We affectionately call it TDC or the VILLE. It is a typical GI town, with bars, pawn shops and plenty of places to spend money. The real TDC is called second market (by us, not the Koreans) and that's where the open air market is located plus the town's one department store and super market. To Koreans, being close to the DMZ is like being on the frontier and things are very rustic. We (the good guys) in the division are here to keep them (the bad guys) up north. We do this by being in good physical shape, practicing our trade in the field, and plenty of firepower demonstrations. I think it's the noise that keeps the bad guys up north, or they like going to the field less than we do. Normally it's pretty safe over here because both armies, north and south, participate in the agriculture of their own nation. It's hard to fight a war when your army is planting or harvesting the crops.

The visit of the President was a big time event. He didn't visit Casey. He was in what we call the western coridor. So although the visit was big time news over here we, like you, watched it on TV. Speaking of TV, we get the Today Show a day and an hour late. Even though the show comes via satellite, the 15-hour time differences gives us Monday on Today on Tuesday in Korea, with the time given on the Today show as seven minutes past the hour of seven, with our time as seven minutes past 6 a.m. Life wasn't easy on the frontier and now I understand why. Let me close by wishing one and all a super holiday season. We'll have a jump on each and everyone of you. Korea is the first stop on Santa's schedule and I've got all the bargains.

Merry Christmas. . .

Sincerely,
SP4 Mark Appel

NEW COMPUTER for Franklin middle school in Thief River Falls was provided this week through Dwight's Hartz supermarket in Thief River Falls. Dwight Tangquist is shown with students Andrea Erickson (right) and Jenny Haugen as they try out the new unit. Both students have had an introduction to computers through the ExCEL program and were winners in a computer programming contest. Dwight's Hartz earned the computer through a fall promotion offered by General Foods. Jim Fremstad, instructor in the ExCEL computer program, said the Atari 1200XL unit will fit well into the school's existing equipment.

Stolen Cars No Bargain Despite Prices

Cars are no longer just stolen by joyriders. Professional car thieves are pros at altering vehicle identification and supplying counterfeit documents for stolen cars that are often sold at rockbottom prices, says the automotive information council (AIC).

While being offered a luxury car for an unbelievably low price may be tempting to some, buying a "hot" car is no bargain. If the police discover that a person has purchased a stolen vehicle, the auto is automatically impounded and the buyer isn't able to recover either the car or the money spent on it.

To avoid being stuck with a stolen vehicle, AIC recommends these tips when buying a used car:

(1) Deal only with a reputable dealer or an individual you know and trust. Be on your guard if a seller has no fixed address or phone number.

(2) Be very suspicious if the price of a car offered is substantially lower than normal, such as $2,000 for a late model luxury car.

(3) A fresh paint job on an almost-new auto may indicate a coverup by theieves.

(4) Don't buy a car that doesn't have all the proper paperwork. Check the car's vehicle identification number (VIN) with the VIN listed on the title.

(5) Avoid a deal if the seller absolutely demands cash.

(6) Always obtain a receipt for the sale, which both parties have signed.

Federal bureau of investigation's uniform crime report indicates the peak theft year in the United States was 1980 when 1,114,651 vehicle were stolen. In 1983, 1,048,310 vehicles were stolen, representing a 2.4 per cent decrease from 1981 when 1,073,988 vehicles were stolen. These statistics underscore the size of the auto theft problem in the U.S., says AIC.

Drunk Driving Revocations Increase In Mn.

Alcohol related driver license revocations in Minnesota have increased sixfold over the past 16 years, according to information compiled by the Minnesota department of public safety.

These positive results are reflected in traffic accident reports which show that in 1967 there were 5.17 fatalities per 100 million vehicle miles traveled in the state, while in 1982 that rate — one of the best indicators of actual safety on highways — was only 1.98. There was a similar improvement in the number of alcohol related driver license revocations which totaled 5,977 in 1967 compared with 36,024 in 1982. Preliminary figures show 34,130 revocations through October this year.

While there has been a long range trend toward greater numbers of DWI arrests which frequently lead to driver license revocation, the major reason for the increase is Minnesota's administrative license revocation system implemented in 1976. Administrative revocations provide that an intoxicated driver risks loss of license upon arrest and conviction, or through the actions of the commissioner of public safety when the driver either refuses or fails at alcohol concentration test.

Loss of license is a proven effective deterrent to driving while intoxicated (DWI). A Minnesota survey of drivers' perception of DWI punishment revealed that 90 per cent of those surveyed thought license revocation was very important "in discouraging drivers from driving if they happened to have too much to drink." A slightly smaller percentage (88 per cent) called jail sentences a very important deterrent.

Recent national highway traffic safety administration report summarized the Minnesota situation stating that the likelihood of DWI arrest is nearly seven times greater in Minnesota than it is nationally. The report also indicated that the ratio of penalties imposed on apprehended drunken drivers is higher in Minnesota than any other state in the nation.

Your Personal Statement Can Help In 1984

Year-end is a good time to take stock of your financial situation and draw up a personal financial statement. This will give you a good idea os where you stand and get the new year off to a good start, says the Minnesota society of CPAs.

Personal financial statement can help you with your tax and retirement planning, budgeting, investing, and getting bank loans. It's a tool that can help you plan for growth and achieve your goals. After you've done it once, it'll be a cinch to update.

Personal financial statement tells you what you are worth. Your net worth is the excess of what you owe. If you owe more than you own, as many people do these days, you have a negative net worth. In that case, a personal financial statement is especially important because it will help you design a plan to change that situation.

To start writing a personal financial statement, list all that you own — your assets — in a single column. Items include cash on hand or in deposit accounts, commissions, bonuses, IOUs, investments, and any other money that you will be receiving before the end of the year. In addition, include the current value of your home, furnishings, cars and other belongings that could be converted to cash. Similarly, you will also put on the list the cash surrender value of your life insurance and the vested interest you may hold in your employer pension plan.

Alongside each item, list the date and purchase price. This will help you compute any capital gain or loss if you sell the asset.

In another column, list all your liabilities — what you owe. It might be unpleasant but include all your debts and outstanding bills, such as charge accounts. Don't forget your tax obligations, the unpaid balance on your mortgage and any bank loans outstanding.

Add up the two columns and subtract the liabilities from the assets. The result is your net worth. To get a clearer picture, however, it is necessary to go one step further and determine what changes there have been in your net worth over the past year.

Once again, make two columns. In one column, list figures for any increases in the market value of your assets or any securities over the last year. List increases in salary, savings, gains on sales of assets, increases in the market value of securities and additions to your equity in profit-sharing plans. Now compare it with decreases in assets during the past year to determine any progress. Decreases may include losses in the value of assets, taxes, and interest expenses.

In simplified terms, you now have a document similar to what a CPA uses — a two-fold statement consisting of a balance sheet and a funds statement. However, there are some fine points which are worth taking time to review.

For instance, if your financial statement covers not just you but your spouse and other members of your family, be sure to make a clear distinction between those assets and liabilities that are solely yours and those that are shared. Likewise, if property is held in joint tenancy, or as community property, specify that in the statement.

In addition, if you have money tied up in closely-held businesses, show it in single amounts. Don't try to break down a company's financial situation within your statement. That will only blur the picture. If you have an individual retirement account (IRA) or a Keogh retirement account, list the cash value minus the penalty you would have to pay if you withdraw the money today.

Hopefully, your financial statement won't yield unwanted surprises. With any luck, it should provide a realistic starting point from which you can begin an examination of your investments, insurance, savings and retirement programs.

Banks Alert Customers On Withholding

Thief River Falls banks have alerted customers who have earned interest or dividends that those earnings could be subject to withholding by the Internal Revenue service is certain conditions are not met.

Roger J. Reuter, president of Norwest bank, said that under the present federal income tax law, individuals who have not provided their financial institutions with their correct social security numbers could be subject to both a $50 penalty and 20 per cent withholding on interest and dividends starting on Jan. 1, 1984.

The financial institutions asked customers to certify in writing that the social security number on file with the bank is correct. Customers must do this by signing a "W-9" form and returning it to the bank by December 31.

Individuals who do not have a social security number must apply for one immediately, indicate on the form that application has been made and send the number to the bank as soon as it is received.

Reuter said that "a certain amount of confusion" over the tax requirements exists because most people know that the controversial TEFRA law, which would have withheld 10 per cent of interest and dividends, was repealed last August. He pointed out that individuals who earn interest and dividends now are obligated to conform to the requirements of the new interest and dividend tax compliance act of 1983.

That law requires that 20 per cent of interest and dividends be withheld and paid to the IRS when any of the following conditions exist:

+ A customer fails to furnish the financial institution with a social security number;

+ The IRS notifies the financial institution that an incorrect social security number has been furnished;

+ The IRS notifies the financial institution that interest and dividend income has been under-reported or reported incorrectly;

+ A customer who opens an interest-bearing account after Jan. 1, 1984, refuses to certify that he or she does not owe any withholding.

In those cases in which there is 20 per cent withholding, the money is sent to the IRS and credited to the customer as income tax paid, thereby reducing the amount owed on April 15 or when the tax return is filed.

SERVICE AWARDS were presented to two officers of Production Credit Association at a recent Christmas dinner, in recognition for 20 years of employment with the Thief River Falls office. Lapel pins set with two emeralds and a diamond were presented by Dona Rock, chairman of the board, left, to Loan Officer Curtis Brandt (top photo) and President Harlow C. Johnson (bottom photo).

M. Feldstein Cools Down On Gov't. Deficits

by Walter W. Heller
'U' M Economist

Feldstein flap — the furor over the painfully candid public statements by Reagan's economic adviser — seems to have cooled down. Martin Feldstein has pulled in his horns and treasury secretary Donald Regan has admitted that huge deficits can be hazardous to our economic health.

But let's not lose sight of five vital points about deficits that Feldstein — an able and courageous conservative — nailed down with both logic and numbers.

First, his numbers show that much of the ballooning deficit since 1980 can be traced directly to Reagan initiatives. Record tax cuts, defense boosts and interest payments swamp his cutbacks in the non-defense budget.

Second, we cannot "grow out way out of those deficits." The "structural deficit" (the deficit that persists even at full prosperity) is likely to grow just as fast as the cyclical deficit shrinks," says Feldstein. Under present laws, his numbers show a trillion dollars worth of deficits in the next five years.

Third, it's very risky to wait until 1985 to take the cure on these deficits. It risks higher interest rates, higher inflation, a lopsided recovery, slower growth and tougher sledding for the rest of the world. His message: We must act now.

Fourth, budget cuts alone can't do the job. Tax increases have to be part of the cure. Feldstein said: "I am convinced that the advantages of reducing the budget deficit outweigh the disadvantages of the proposed increase in tax rates." He urges action on the tax program Reagan sought last winter: a nearly $50 billion-a-year hike in income and oil taxes, to go into effect in 1985 if big deficits persist.

Fifth, Feldstein rejects the claim "that any rise in tax revenue would simple lead to more domestic government spending. . ." he states that, "There is, in fact, no basis on either experience or logic for believing that additional tax revenue at the present time would serve only to finance increased spending." In his November 30 speech before the Tax Foundation in New York, he backs that up with hard facts and figures.

In short, Martin Feldstein has done us all a service with his honest appraisal of the sources, dangers and cures for the mega-deficits problem.

Sports Editor

One of the spectators on hand for Saturday's Thief River Falls vs. Fargo South high school hockey game in the sports arena was Lincoln graduate Jeff Ulrich, now an assistant coach of the Des Moines Buccaneers, a Junior A team in the United States Hockey League (USHL).

Ulrich was in the midst of a scouting trip for the Buccaneers, keeping an eye out for available talent among the area high school seniors. He also watched Roseau play Bemidji and saw Little Falls skate against Red Lake Falls before heading back to Iowa, where he works under Des Moines head coach Ivan Prediger.

This is Ulrich's second year as an assistant coach after a two-year playing career with the Buccaneers, who recruited him off the Mankato State University campus in his freshman year.

His four-year association with Des Moines and the USHL has him sold on the Junior A program, often times used as an option for players out of high school who didn't get that hoped-for college scholarship offer. Two years of Junior A hockey may home their skills to still get that shot at college hockey, they're told.

"It's a great opportunity for the kids who don't have a scholarship offer," explained Ulrich, who said the team will arrange housing and job opportunities for the players, who have a 48-game USHL regular season schedule that runs from September to April. There's also post-season play leading to the national finals, a league all-star game, plus a trip for a select group of all-stars to Switzerland for an international tournament. Eligibility rules simply say a player can't be 20-years-old before the season starts. That would mean two years of Junior A competition for most high school graduates.

Des Moines' league rivals include the Dubuque Fighting Saints, St. Paul Vulcans, Waterloo Black Hawks, Sioux City Musketeers, Austin Mavericks, Bloomington Junior Stars and the North Iowa Huskies out of Mason City. Des Moines, with a population of about 250,000, averages some 2,500 fans per game—best in the USHL, says Ulrich.

It's good hockey, Ulrich reports. Fall try-outs bring up to 70 players into camp, with rosters pared to 21 for league play. There are even trades between the teams, ala-major league sports. A number of USHL products annually receive those hoped-for scholarship offers, with a few even attracting National Hockey League or Olympic team attention.

It can be a rough league, acknowledged Ulrich, although steps have been taken to clean up the rough stuff. A fighting rule, which used to allow players two fights per game before they were banished, has been toughened. Aggressive players are still a sought-after commodity, though, admitted Ulrich, who said the USHSL, like most hockey leagues, is very offensive-minded.

"It's a lot faster than high school hockey," Ulrich explained. "The kids want the goals for the attention. You average 40-to-45 shots per game."

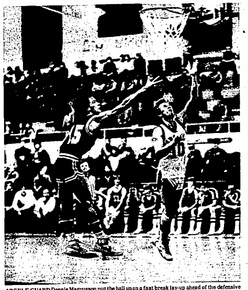
In scouting for talent, though, Ulrich looks for more than just goal-scorers. "I look mostly at what the player does without the puck — if they back-check, things like that," he noted.

A 1983 Lincoln graduate, defenseman Jeff Storhaug, has been a steady player for the Buccaneers, mentioned Ulrich. "Jeff is doing very well for us," he said. "He's our most consistent defenseman. He's a little shy yet taking control of things because he's a rookie, but he's improving all the time. Mostly we've got offensive defensemen. Jeff does a nice job. He has a lot of potential."

Ulrich said he really enjoys coaching, and looks forward to an opportunity to serve as a head coach in the USHL someday. He gets a taste of it this winter when he directs Des Moines in their four games against Sioux City since Prediger, by a league rule following an altercation in the stands last year, is barred from coaching the Buccaneers against the Musketters.

Miscellaneous

+ Section 8 high school hockey publicist Frank Fee of Crookston says the top six teams in Section 8 at this point of the 1983-84 season are: 1. Roseau; 2. Crookston; 3. Fergus Falls; 4. Moorhead; 5. Thief River Falls; 6. Warroad.



ARGYLE GUARD Donnie Magnusson put the ball up on a fast break lay-up ahead of the defensive effort by Thief River Falls' Jeff Langan during Tuesday's high school basketball game played in the Lincoln gym. Magnusson scored 20 points to lead the Eagles past the Prowlers 66-48. Langan led the Prowlers with 10 points.

Eagles Shoot 63 Per Cent From Field . . .

Magnusson Leads Argyle To 66-48 Win Over TRF

Argyle shot a blistering 63 per cent from the field, and senior guard Donnie Magnusson had a hand in 19 of the Eagles' 29 baskets as they upended Thief River Falls 66-48 Tuesday in a high school basketball game played at the Lincoln gym.

Magnusson hit double figures for the first time this year for the 4-0 Eagles with an impressive 20-point night that included 10 field goals, along with 9 assists and 5 steals.

"He runs the show," said Thief River Falls coach Tom Hunt in praise of the 5-7 lightning-quick Magnusson. "He has great court sense. He did an excellent job for them."

Magnusson has been playing varsity ball for the Eagles since his freshman season. "That's his best game this year," explained Argyle coach Warren Keller. "I don't think there's anybody any quicker with a basketball around here."

It was close for a while. A three-point play by junior guard Mark Bondy on a rebound basket and a free throw gave Thief River Falls a 10-7 lead with 1:29 left in the first quarter, but Argyle's David Durand slipped inside for a basket, then Magnusson canned a long jumper from the corner after a Thief River Falls 10-second violation in the backcourt to give the Eagles an 11-10 edge at the end of the first quarter.

A rebound basket by forward Tim Kruse gained Thief River Falls a 19-19 tie near the midway mark of the second quarter, but that's the last the Prowlers saw of the Eagles, who rattled off 10 straight points over the next two minutes for a 29-19 spread with 1:57 left in the half. That was during a string of seven straight Argyle field goals without a miss. The Eagles led 31-23 at intermission, with a certain 10-point cushion cut to eight when Bondy made an unlikely length-of-the-court basket at the buzzer.

Magnusson had a steal and a lay-up with four seconds left and the Prowlers hurried the ball in play. Bondy took the pass just a few feet in-bounds and threw a line-drive straight through the hoop.

Thief River Falls then started the third quarter with a long jumper from the side by Jeff Langan, a press-breaking basket underneath by Jeff Hamerlinck and a single free throw by Kruse to cut the gap to 31-28. They wound up 6-for-8 from the field for the period, but still came out of it trailing 47-36 because Argyle was 8-for-10, including a drive by Magnusson and a bucket on the inside from Durand in the final minute that opened up the Eagles' biggest lead of the night.

Pace quickened on both ends at the start of the fourth quarter, but then the Eagles' spread offense went into effect, leading to numerous easy lay-ups as the Prowlers gambled and lost defensively in trying to catch-up. Net result was a string of 11 straight Argyle points that produced a 60-40 difference with 3:10 to play.

"We lost our composure," said Hunt. "They waited for us to break down defensively, but had to gamble. You don't play to stay close, you play to win. We did what we thought we had to do to win. I know we're capable of playing better ball."

Durand shared some of Magnusson's post-game praise in the Argyle lockerroom after the 6-0 junior forward-center scored 19 points. Langan, a 6-0 senior forward transfer student from Goodridge, led the Prowlers with 10 points.

Argyle was an eye-opening 29-for-46 from the field (63 per cent). Thief River Falls was just 18-for-60 (30 per cent). The Prowlers were 12-for-19 from the free throw line (63 per cent) where the Eagles were 8-for-14 (57 per cent). The smaller Eagles finished with a 23-17 rebound edge, a fact that brought a great deal of satisfaction for Keller, and the Prowlers topped the turnover figures 20-17 — a high number for the Eagles, who always present ball-handling problems for the opposition with their hounding defense.

Thief River Falls is winless in four starts.

Argyle jumped out to a 12-4 first quarter lead en route to a 50-38 junior varsity high school basketball win over Thief River Falls Tuesday.

It was the second loss in four starts for Thief River Falls, behind 26-17 at halftime and trailing 41-25 after three quarters.

Kevin Nelson and David Onkka had eight points each for Thief River Falls. Shannon Hunstad scored 13 for Argyle, with Doug LaFond, Joel Robertson and Preston Stoltman getting 10 each.

Rick Nelson Named New Northland Head Coach

A poorly-kept secret became an official appointment Monday when Northland community college named Rick Nelson as the new head football coach for the Northmen, succeeding John Helley, who resigned at the end of the 1983 season.

Nelson, 26, will step down as football coach of the new Grygla - Goodridge co-operative high school program to accept the Northland position. He is a 1975 Oklee high school graduate, a 1977 Northland graduate and a 1979 Bemidji State University graduate who also attended Moorhead State.

He began his coaching career as head basketball coach at Goodridge while serving as a student-teacher during the 1978-79 season. Nelson joined the Goodridge faculty the following year, serving as the Huskies' head football and basketball coach.

Advent of this year's Grygla - Goodridge co-operative football venture found Nelson appointed as head coach of the Blue Devils, who finished 8-1, losing only a 14-8 last-minute decision to Plummer in the second week of the 1983 season. The Huskies rebounded to win seven straight games, but still had to settle for second place in the North Tri-County Conference behind the unbeaten Cardinals.

As Grygla-Goodridge head football coach, Nelson gave up his Goodridge basketball coaching position this winter.

"We're very pleased to have someone like Rick to head our football program," said Northland provost Ken Wiebolt in the official announcement of Nelson's appointment earlier this week. "I'm sure his knowledge of the area players and his contacts with the area coaches will be a big value to our program."

Nelson's name surfaced as a Northland coaching candidate almost immediately after Helley's resignation in late October. It was confirmed some time ago that he would be the new coach of the Northmen, although the news of the appointment was delayed until Monday.

While Nelson has enjoyed his association with the Huskies, then the Blue Devils, and has helped turn a struggling football program into a winner at the high school level, he eagerly looks forward to the challenge awaiting him at Northland, where the team has never had a winning season in eight years of football.

"I think of it as a coaching opportunity," said Nelson. "It's an opportunity to direct a college football program playing with kids from a 50-to-75-mile radius of Thief River Falls. It's a challenge of turning it into a winning football program."

It's the northwestern Minnesota high school products that Nelson will actively recruit. He admits a late-December appointment of a head coach puts the Northmen behind, says area rival University of Minnesota-Crookston, in the battle for the available local football talent, but he promises to work hard in the coming months to make up for the lost time.

"We're going to sell the kids on the opportunity to play football and to receive the degrees we have available here," explained Nelson. "We'll actively promote both the Northland and AVTI educational and athletic opportunities," reminding prospective recruits that students at the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical institute are eligible to participate in the Northland athletic programs.

"We're definitely behind in recruiting," admitted Nelson, "but I've already been out twice in the last couple of days, and we'll be beating the bush for players after the First of the Year. Our basic recruiting area," he noted, "will be The Times' trade area." Special emphasis, he said, would be made toward convincing more Thief River Falls players to play for the Northmen, who traditionally haven't had a great deal of success in recruiting the home-town football player.

Rich and his wife Donna are Thief River Falls residents.

Nelson becomes the fourth coach to head the Northmen. Chet Engelman served as head football coach when the sport was introduced at Northland in 1976 and coached them again in 1977 before giving way to Irv Smith, who coached Northland in 1978 and 1979. Helley stepped in for the 1980 season and served through the 1983 campaign.

Cardinals Edge Huskies 57-55 For Goodridge Tournament Title

Plummer used two-point wins over Grygla and host Goodridge to win championship honors in the Huskies' eight-team holiday high school basketball invitational tournament, which completed its three-day run Tuesday.

A 66-42 first round winner over Warroad Saturday, Plummer came up with a 34-32 semifinal victory over Grygla Monday, then collected a 57-55 championship game decision over Goodridge Tuesday to close out the 12-game event.

Grygla rebounded from its semifinal setback to beat Strandquist 49-39 for third place honors. Strandquist fell to Goodridge 61-50 in Monday's other semifinal match-up.

An all-tournament team selected by a vote of the coaches (who could not vote for players on their own team) included Tony McLean, Grygla; Kevin Enerson, Oklee; Russ Fisher, Plummer; Duane Cobenais, Redlake; plus Tony Wiseth and Scott Groven, Goodridge.

Warren Tvedt connected on a close-range shot with 10 seconds left as Plummer endged Grygla 34-32 in Monday's semifinal doubleheader opener.

Grygla, ahead by five points earlier in the final period, failed to set up a well-executed last shot attempt, and Lon Englund's hurried long range jumper was off the mark as the game ended.

Plummer won despite making just nine field goals. The Cardinals opened up a 9-2 first quarter lead in the low-scoring affair, managed to hang on to a 13-8 halftime edge, but fell behind 24-22 as the third quarter ended.

"It was their defense that dictated the whole ball game," pointed out Plummer coach Jim Baron in respect for the swarming Grygla defense. "Offensively Grygla is patient, but defensively they double-team you all over the place."

Tony McLean of Grygla was the game's high scorer with 12 points. Tvedt had 11 for the Cardinals, along with 11 rebounds as the winners' charts showed them with a definite 38-19 advantage on the boards against the smaller Eagles. Plummer, though, topped the turnover charts 27-13.

In the end, it was the Cardinals' free throws that won it. Plummer was just 9-for-30 from the field (30 per cent), but 16-for-28 at the free throw line (57 per cent). Grygla was almost the opposite, 15-for-56 from the field (42 per cent) but only 2-for-7 at the line (29 per cent).

Goodridge was finally able to shake persistent Strandquist in the fourth quarter to lay claim to a 61-50 semifinal win.

It was close throughout the Goodridge owning narrow quarter leads of 13-11, 23-21 and 42-40.

"We finally started hitting some easy shots in the fourth quarter that we missed earlier," explained Goodridge coach Dan Brinkman.

Junior Tim Wayne, who normally fills the role of the sixth man off the bench, saw extended playing time when the winners ran into foul trouble, and he responded with an outstanding effort, said Brinkman, that netted him 8 points, 22 rebounds, 8 blocks shots and 3 steals. Goodridge wound up with a big 60-34 rebound advantage.

Scott Groven scored 17 points to lead a trio of double figure scorers for the Huskies, with Tony Wiseth getting 12 and Mike Scheef 10. Dean Nelson and Dave Moyer gave Strandquist a fine outside-inside attack, said Brinkman, with 16 and 13 points, respectively.

Goodridge finished with a 29-for-78 night from the field (37 per cent) and a 3-for-10 game at the free throw line (30 per cent). Strandquist shot 20-for-52 from the field (38 per cent) and 10-for-23 at the line (43 per cent).

Grygla came up a winner in the third place game, 49-39 over Strandquist.

Strandquist started with an 11-9 first quarter lead, but Grygla went ahead 21-19 at halftime and stretched it to a 33-23 third quarter cushion.

"We started a little slow in the first quarter," confirmed Grygla coach Vern Johnson, "but we played well down the stretch. We made some key free throws that saved us."

Wayne Byklum scored 19 points and Tony McLean added 10 for the winners. Dave Moyer and Dion Larson scored 13 and 11 points, respectively, for Strandquist.

Grygla won despite shooting just 28 per cent from the field (16-for-57). Strandquist shot 38 per cent (15-for-40). The Eagles shot 46 per cent from the free throw line (13-for-28) where the Warriors shot just 15 per cent (3-for-20). Grygla forced 20 Strandquist turnovers while losing the ball just six times. The losers had a 45-40 rebound edge.

Grygla is 2-4 for the year.

Plummer	57
Goodridge	55

Plummer built up a seven-point lead with three minutes left, then held on for a 57-55 championship game win over Goodridge.

Instructions to hold the ball and look for the good shots were carried to the extreme, explained Plummer coach Jim Baron, whose Cardinals went into a freeze that nearly proved fatal.

Goodridge, though, let a shot at victory slip away during a frantic final minute when the Huskies failed on three occasions to score when they had possession while trailing by a single basket. A final shot by Scott Groven was off target, and the Cardinals' Eric Eskell grabbed the rebound to preserve the win.

"It's great," said Baron in response to the question how the once victory-starved Cardinals felt after winning a tournament trophy. "It was great for the kids. They wanted to cut down the nets, but they're kind of expensive so we talked 'em out of that," he laughed.

Goodridge led early with a 16-15 first quarter edge and a 28-26 halftime advantage, but Plummer went ahead 42-41 at the close of the third quarter.

"We were shaky in the first half offensively," admitted Baron, "I think we were a little anxious. "We played a lot better in the second half. We did an excellent job defensively in the second half; that was the key, I think. I felt if we could hold them under 60 we could win it, and we did."

Plummer's defensive work helped check Goodridge on a 38 per cent shooting night, but Huskies' coach Dan Brinkman was bemoaning numerous close-in shots his team missed.

"Anytime you get that close and don't pull it off, it's frustrating," he noted, "but it all comes back to our shooting. You can't expect to win very many games shooting like we did."

Warren Tvedt led the winners with 16 points, while Duane Franklund added 11 and Eric Eskell 10. Ross Parnow scored 14 for the Huskies and Tony Wiseth hit 11.

Plummer was 23-for-47 from the field (49 per cent) and 11-for-22 from the free throw line (11-for-22). Goodridge was 22-for-58 from the field (38 per cent) and 11-for-21 from the line (52 per cent). The Huskies had a 30-30 rebound edge but also topped the turnover figures 19-14.

Tournament results left Plummer with a 5-2 record while Goodridge went to 3-3.

Thief River Falls youth hockey teams enjoyed another fine weekend, winning five of six games.

Coach Dale Wennberg's Pee-Wee B team improved its record to 7-1 with a 16-1 victory over Bagley and a 4-2 win over Hallock.

Single goals by Lynn Skibicki, Mitch Wilebski, Shoan Nelson and Grant Larson gave coach Scott Bergland's Bantam B team a hard-fought 4-3 win over Hallock Friday. Saturday, Thief River Falls defeated Bagley 9-1 to improve the team's record to 5-1-1.

Coach Rory Anderson's VFW Bantam A team split a two-game series with the Saint Boniface Saints, losing 10-1 Saturday and winning 6-3 in a Sunday rematch. It was only the second loss in 27 games for the Saints. Thief River Falls led 2-0 after one period on goals by Jon Matson and Blair Lund, with Lund's second goal giving Thief River Falls a 3-1 lead after two periods. A pair of third period goals by Steve McGann and a single tally by John Thompson sealed the big win. Goalie Shayne Anderson had 31 saves for the winners, now 4-3.

Thief River Falls teams will be in Crookston Thursday, with the Pee-Wee B game set for 11 a.m.; Eagles Pee-Wee A team will play at 1 p.m.; Bantam B at 3 p.m.; and VFW Bantam A team will play at 5 p.m.

Northmen Lose In Finals 72-58

Northland won an opening-round 83-76 semifinal decision against Willmar, but lost a 72-58 championship game verdict to Minneapolis in the four-team, two-day holiday invitational basketball tournament played Monday and Tuesday at Minneapolis community college.

Tournament split left Northland with a 5-3 season record. The Northmen will wait until Sat., Jan. 7, to resume post-holiday competition.

Northland's Kyle Ramsey was named the most valuable player award winner in the Minneapolis tournament, and was joined on the all-tournament team by teammate Rodney Scales. Rest of the squad included Elvis Thomas and Alan Starr of Minneapolis, Brian Roberts of Willmar and Tony Lindahl of Austin.

Northland starters did all the scoring Monday as the Northmen got by Willmar 83-75 in the tournament semifinals.

Kyle Ramsey led the Northmen with a 25-point, 14-rebound night, while Rodney Scales scored 21 points and grabbed 20 rebounds; Jon Neumann had 19 points and 8 rebounds despite foul trouble; and Shorty Johnson contributed 12 points, 9 rebounds and 5 assists.

"All-in-all, the kids played pretty well," mentioned Northland coach Chet Engelman. "We didn't get much off our bench this time, but the others came through for us."

Northland started with an 18-7 lead five minutes into the game, but were caught at 30-30. Ahead 41-39, Northland scored six straight points over the final 79 seconds of the first half to go into intermission with a 47-39 edge.

Most of the second half was played at a slow pace, reported Engelman. The Northmen held on to a 73-70 lead with 3:57 remaining before Scales scored, then Johnson hit back-to-back shots to open up a 79-70 gap with just 48 seconds to play.

Northland shot 44 per cent from the field (34-for-77) and 71 per cent at the free throw line (15-for-21). Willmar shot 41 per cent from the field (31-for-25) and 61 per cent at the line (14-for-23). The Northmen finished with a 56-44 rebound edge and topped the turnover figures 18-16.

Ahead 38-32 at halftime, Northland wilted in the second 20 minutes when Minneapolis out-scored the Northmen 40-20 for a 72-58 championship game win Tuesday night.

"We blew it," admitted Northland coach Chet Engelman. "We got a little tired in the second half. They have a nice team, but I think it was more of a case of us losing it instead of them winning."

Kyle Ramsey of the Northmen scored 27 points, hiking his tournament total to 52, and teammate Shorty Johnson hit 17. But no other scorer hit double figures for the Northmen, who have been getting good scoring balance. Frontliners Rodney Scales, hurt by early foul trouble, and Jon Neumann combined for just 13 points, and guard Kevin Sanders didn't score.

Jeff White led Minneapolis with 29 points, with Alan Starr getting 17 and Bernard Haynes 10.

Northland shot only 39 per cent from the field (18-for-46). Minneapolis, an 84-50 first round winner over Austin, shot 41 per cent (32-for-78). Northland shot 71 per cent at the free throw line (22-for-31) and Minneapolis shot 73 per cent (8-for-11). The Northmen had a 43-40 rebound edge and also had more turnovers, 28-12.

Nordics Beat Tigers 69-61

Four Marshall County Central scorers hit double figures Tuesday as the Nordics defeated Stephen 69-61 in high school basketball action at Newfolden.

It was just the second outing, and win No. 2, for the Nordics as coach Ron Ueland spaced his early season schedule to accomodate a promising, but inexperienced ball club that has five juniors among the eight players who play regularly.

"We feel we beat a real good Stephen team," said Ueland. "We were real pleased."

Marshall County Central led 17-16 at the end of the first period, fell behind 32-29 at halftime, but went ahead 52-45 in the third quarter.

"Apparently we wore them down," explained Ueland. "Sooner or later our pressure defense takes its toll on them. They make a mistake and we capitalize."

Kevin Boe led a balanced offensive attack for the winners with 16 points, while Chad Swan scored 14, Ken Krohn 13 and Randy Dahl 12. Dan Schindele scored 22 and Scott Gratzek 20 for the Tigers, but they were the only double figure scorers for the visitors.

Marshall County Central shot 44 per cent from the field (30-for-68) and 43 per cent from the free throw line (9-for-21). Stephen shot 49 per cent from the field (28-for-57) and 56 per cent from the field (5-for-9). Rebounds were even at 29 apiece. Stephen topped the turnover figures 28-17.

After playing just two games in the first month of the season, the Nordics' schedule will pick up next week when they play three games in the eight-team Thief River Falls holiday invitational tournament. Marshall County Central plays Roseau Tuesday at 3 p.m. in opening round action.

MCC Invitational Is This Week . . .

Nordics' Defense Shines In Victory Over Rabbits

Marshall County Central defense continues to steal the spotlight following the Nordics' 46-21 victory over Tri-County Monday in a girls high school basketball game played at Newfolden.

Carrying a 3-1 season record, the Nordics are giving up just 34.2 points per game. In their last two starts they've given up just a total of 33 points.

"We played real good defense," confirmed Marshall County Central coach Tom Mjelde after Monday's win over the Rabbits. "I thought we played one of our best defensive games of the year."

Marshall County Central had quarter leads of 8-2, 22-12 and 30-15 as Shelly Anderson scored 12 points and Becky Knutson had 10.

It wasn't a real great night offensively, admitted Mjelde, whose team shot 32 per cent from the field (22-for-67) and just 25 per cent at the free throw line (2-for-8). Tri-County shot 21 per cent from the field (8-for-38) and 50 per cent at the line (5-for-10). Marshall County Central owned a 37-21 rebound advantage, giving Tri-County just three offensive rebounds. The Rabbits led the turnover department 20-13.

It'll be tournament time for the Nordics this week as they host a four-team, two-day Marshall County Central Christmas Invitational tournament Thursday and Friday.

In Thursday's opening round semifinals, Marshall County Central plays Grygla at 6:30 p.m. and Thief River Falls is matched against Strandquist at 8.

Friday's schedule features the first round losers in the consolation game at 6:30 p.m. and the first round winners in the tournament championship game at 8.

Same format will be followed in the Warren Invitational where Thursday's first round semifinals find Middle River playing Alvarado at 7 p.m. and Hallock going against Warren at 8:30. Friday's consolation game is set for 7 p.m. and championship game at 8:30.

DNR NEWS

DNR Warning

Joseph Alexander, Minnesota Commissioner of Natural Resources, says there is a campaign being mounted by certain legislators and special interest groups to sell off large tracts of public land in the state.

"Some of these people are philosophically opposed to public land ownership," he said, "and some undoubtedly have other motives."

Push to sell off large parcels of forest lands and other public holdings began in earnest two years ago when tax revenues failed to meet state spending plans.

Almost immediately, said Alexander, public land opponents urged the sale of state owned land to help raise funds to balance the budget.

"It was pointed out by our department and others that monies raised by this scheme would fall far short of meeting budget needs. We also emphasized that such sales would not solve future problems of revenue shortfalls."

Aside from lands acquired for state parks, wildlife management areas and other heavily used and intensively managed public lands, most of the lands in current state ownership have a history of exploitation and neglect from previous private owners followed by tax forfeiture, resulting in the state or counties owning the land — frequently for the second or third time.

It is for this reason, said Alexander, that the cry to "get public lands back on the tax rolls" is received with a certain skepticism, even cynicism, by those familiar with the subject.

Almost assuredly this pattern would be repeated if the public lands were sold again, he said, and the state would again end up with title to the lands, stripped of their timber and other natural resources of monetary value which would have been removed by the previous private owners.

Alexander pointed out that the state and counties are in fact continually selling selected public lands deemed suitable for agriculture, including commercial production of wild rice and future timber harvesting.

However, he noted that frequently in the past when the DNR has been asked to offer a tract for sale, the prospective purchasers are only interested in buying those parcels with mature timber which can be harvested immediately and reject lands with young trees or commercially unmarketable species.

In addition to these considerations, said Alexander, are the values of these lands to the public for hunting, camping, hiking, fishing and other outdoor recreational past times.

"While it is not easy to place a price on these benefits," said Alexander, "they are no less real and should not be taken away."

"The recreational use of these lands also stimulates the sale of outdoor equipment, food and other items, creates jobs and produces tax revenues," he said. "Furthermore, revenue from the sale of timber and other receipts from these lands are shared with the counties and local units of government."

In many cases, he noted, these receipts exceed the taxes being paid on similar sized privately owned parcels of land in the same county.

Snowmobile Races Slated For St. Paul

Minnesota United Snowmobile Association will present its second annual St. Paul Winter Carnival snowmobile speed and drag race nationals on Lake Pahlen in St. Paul in early January, it was announced by race officials this week.

Drag races will begin at 10:30 a.m. Sat., Jan. 4, and the speed runs begin at 12-noon Sun., Jan. 5.

Driver and spectator response to the first races held last Jan. 29-30 exceeded everyone's expectations, say officials. Amateur and professional snowmobile racers competed in 133 drag race heats (four machines per heat on a 750-foot track) and some 400 speed runs in two lanes were held over the quarter-mile distance. Approximately 5,000 spectators each day watched the action.

Professional speedster Tom Earhart of Gun Lake, Mich., set a new quarter-mile world speed record of 150.75 miles-per-hour on his modified Polaris snowmobile last year, and he will be back this winter, say officials.

Speed runs and drag races include 24 machine classes from "stock" unmodified snowmobiles through "open-mod" machines (about anything goes). Grassroots snowmobilers of legal age, both male and female, may participate. An advance race information packet will be mailed to anyone interested in participating who calls the Winter Carnival hotline at (612) 941-2501. Races are sanctioned by the International Snowmobile Racing Association.

REPORT from the GOVERNOR

by Gov. Rudy Perpich

As 1983 comes to a close, I believe it's a fair comment to conclude we have turned an important corner in Minnesota.

After several years of veering from one crisis to another in state government, along with bad news on the economic front, we have turned the corner and are headed in the right direction.

The year came to an end with a flurry of major business announcements, demonstrating a confidence in Minnesota and confidence in Minnesota workers. Ford Motor Company announced a major expansion of its truck facilities in St. Paul, Apache Corporation announced it would keep its headquarters in Minneapolis. ETA decided Minnesota will be the headquarters for its new supercomputer company.

There are many other plans for business expansions, but business leaders in some cases are reluctant to make public announcements. The point is that Minnesota is NOT becoming an empty desert of closed factories and boarded-up businesses.

There have been moves of businesses to other states, and I regret that it has happened. But such moves go on all the time. We tend to forget about companies and move INTO Minnesota.

I am convinced there is a new spirit of cooperation among business, labor, government and education — a feeling that the future of Minnesota depends on people working together, not engaging in running battles.

That's not to argue we have achieved all our goals. We still have problems with taxes (they ARE too high in some brackets), we must deal with unemployment compensation costs, and we must take a hard look at whether we are operating too many state institutions. But we are making progress.

For example, Commissioner Steve Keefe of the Department of Labor and Industry tells me the new workers' compensation law has produced positive results. Insurance companies are beginning to offer competitive rates, and the number of litigations is dropping.

Steve Economist Bill Toal says we have gained about 44,000 jobs since last December. I know of at least another 11,000 jobs expected to be created from projects that received approval for industrial revenue bond financing through September 1983.

The Secretary of State's office reports that, through November 1983, there were 7,458 new business incorporations; an increase of 1,030 or 16 per cent, over the number recorded by this time a year ago.

Other states now are being forced to adopt tax increases, and some legislatures, have been in special sessions late this year to deal with budget problems. Southern states, where education is now the hot issue, are going to have to raise taxes to pay for improved schools. In Minnesota, we have long put a high priority on education, and that, in part, determines our tax levels. But we also "bit the bullet" on taxes early this year, and as a result our state government was running on an even keel when the national economy turned around.

Here is the list of business expansions known to us. There probably have been many more we haven't heard about.

Nov. 21 — ETA Systems announces supercomputer company, expanding from 100 jobs to 400 by 1986.

Nov. 21 — Northland Companies break ground for $40 million regional technology park in Brooklyn Park, with potential for 400 jobs; another 800 jobs possible at a computer merchandise "supermarket."

Nov. 19 — H.B. Fuller Co. dedicates $12 million research and development center in Vadnais Heights.

Nov. 18 — Apache Corporation announces it will retain its headquarters, and 400 jobs, in Minnesota.

November 18 — Koch Refineries announce $200 million expansion at Rosemount refinery, adding 150 jobs plus as many as 500 construction jobs.

Nov. 6 — IBM opens national ad campaign for at least 200 jobs at its Rochester plant.

Oct. 21 — Stroh Brewing Co. takes over Olympia Brewery in St. Paul, retaining 400 jobs.

Oct. 20 — Ford Motor Co. announces $250 million expansion, 250 jobs.

Oct. 18 — Rasjo Torv of Sweden reaches agreement on pilot peat productin at Zim, creating about 20 jobs.

Oct. 13 — $20 million renovation begins in International Market Square (former Munsingwear plant in Minneapolis), with potential for 390 jobs in merchandise mart.

Oct. 8 — Instant Web Printing of Eden Prairie dedicates $3.5 million expansion, with employment to increase by 450 over two years.

Sept. 30 — Honeywell, Inc. dedicates new research and development center, part of a three-phase, $43 million building expansion.

Sept. 8 — CUB Foods announces 1,300 jobs at six more warehouse food stores to be constructed in the Twin Cities area.

Sept. 7 — Star Technologies, Oregon-based manufacturer of specialized computers, announces it will locate its research and development center in Brooklyn Park, employing 75 to 100 people.

Sept. 7 — IDA of Moorhead announces expansion of its mobile telephone manufacturing facility, adding 28 jobs over the next three years.

Aug. 9 — Telex opens new $900,000 plant in Rochester to manufacture hearing aids.

Aug. 1 — Artco resumes snowmobile production in former Arctic Cat plant at Thief River Falls, employing 90 people.

July 12 — Prudential Insurance Company announces shift of 1,300 jobs to the Twin Cities over the next 18 months, in a consolidation of regional offices.

July 12 — Final permits approved for Northern States Power company's Sherco 3 plant at Becker, providing 1,000 construction jobs over the next 4½ years.

June 8 — Livestock Energy Systems holds open house at new Worthington facility.

June 6 — Comserv Corporation dedicates new $10.3 million headquarters in Eagan.

May 27 — Watlow Electric Manufacturing Co. breaks ground for $3.5 million expansion in Winona, with potential for 400 jobs in five years.

May 16 — Biosorb, manufacturer of seed-coating process, opens new facility in Eden Prairie after move from North Dakota.

April 22 — Skin Technology, subsidiary of Lec Tec, opens in Eden Prairie.

March 24 — American Bell dedicates new $4.4 million headquarters in Minneapolis.

March 10 — St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press dedicates new $44 million printing facility.

Polish Family Has Christmas In New World

he had signed a card professing his support for Poland's president Jaruzelski. He refused to sign such a card. On July 22 women who had been kept prisoners at Goldap prison were released. Andrzej and other prisoners were released Nov. 26, 1982, and he believes it was the visit by the Pope and the Pope's pressure on the government to release the prisoners that resulted in his being freed.

On January 1, 1983, he was permitted to return to work. While he was in prison he was still carried on the worker role and his family received about half his normal income. After three months in the mines he took the side of a worker he felt was being mistreated. The worker was fined and Andrzej was fired. He appealed the firing and was given a hearing. The ruling was that he had no cause to be fired and some minor compensation was paid, but he was not allowed to return to work.

With 15 years of seniority gone and stripped that accumulation of pension rights, and facing a future with no possibility of getting a job, he went to the United States embassy. The Polish government was rather eagerly granting exit visas to Solidarity leaders as encouragement for them to leave the country. Andrzej and Wieslawa decided they would leave and try to find their future outside of Poland. Under present conditions they can never return.

With them when they left they were able to take only some clothing and small personal belongings. Even the normal $10 per person in cash which is allowed to leave the country was not permitted for them. They left without money into a foreign world where they were at the mercy of others.

When they left Poland, they knew they would be going to the United States. But they went first to a camp near Frankfurt, Germany, for processing through the Intergovernmental Committee for Migration. They were in Germany for six weeks until Lutheran Social Services secured Bethel Lutheran church of Greenbush as a sponsor for them. The processing in Germany normally takes only about 10 days.

Joan Hill of Lutheran Social Services in Minneapolis stated in a telephone interview that the Rymsza family was one of some 60,000 Poles processed for immigration to the United States last year, about 15 per cent of which were placed by Lutheran Social Services. She said the organization handles placement regardless of religious affiliation, having arranged sponsors for Buddhists, Pentecostals, Shintoists, followers of Islam and numerous other religious beliefs.

"We are here to help people," she said. "There are so many more people needing help than we are able to provide sponsors to give help. We stress self-sufficiency as soon as possible for immigrant families, and we find that they are extremely industrious people who quite often are willing to do the jobs that many Americans avoid doing." Local arrangements for the Rymsza family were handled by resettlement worker Georgine Lutz of the Moorhead office.

She said churches provide the best form of sponsorship, although other groups have also been sponsors. It requires a commitment to provide from $1,500 to $1,800 cash outlay plus donated clothing and other items from the time a sponsored family arrives until it reaches self-sufficiency, Hill said. Any groups or churches interested in being sponsors may receive more information from her by calling toll-free 1-800-582-5260.

Both Andrzej and Wieslawa are from large families. He has two brothers and five sisters and she has two brothers and four sisters. His mother, now age 72, also remains in Poland. His wife's father, 65, is retired and on pension but her mother, 58, still works. Retired people are provided a pension and free rent in government housing.

Wieslawa was somewhat taken aback by the availability of goods in area stores. In Poland each family had a card to be used for purchase of restricted items on a monthly basis. Each person was entitled to purchase about six pounds of meat per month and about the same amount of all fats such as butter, margarine or lard. Soaps, sugar and similar hard to get items were also rationed.

"In America," Wieslawa said through the interpreter, "all you need is money!" In other words, the merchandise is available for those who can buy it.

She pointed to a pair of boots which she purchased in Poland and which were imported from Malta. They cost more than Andrzej's mother's entire month's pension, although they were not of exceptional quality and others in Poland were offered for much higher prices.

The family has been provided with furnishings for the apartment, including a television set. Rafal is enrolled in second grade and all members of the family are receiving English tutoring an hour a day. They have many Polish people in the area with whom they can speak easily.

He hopes to find word soon, but since there is obviously no demand for coal miners in northwestern Minnesota, he will have to find other use for his skills.

In his interpreting, Richard Novacek was led to believe that the family preferred to spend Christmas Eve alone as a family and to attend midnight mass. They are invited to the Virgil Gryskiewicz home of rural Greenbush for Christmas dinner. Rafal sees many toys in the stores and is hoping for a good Christmas, but his parents have no money to spend for gifts.

There will apparently be no contact with their families back in Poland. Wieslawa contacted an aunt in Michigan after arriving here, and she in turn wrote to her family in Poland to tell them the Rymszas had arrived. They believe it may take a month for the letter to reach relatives after arriving in Poland because the mail is censored. Wieslawa worked in the post office and knows how the mail piles up.

The Rymszas are thankful to their sponsors and that they were able to come to a country which holds future promise for them. The future also holds promise of something else — another son or daughter for Andrzej and Wieslawa. Her American doctor says the baby is due on March 5. The expectant father isn't confident of the accuracy of the prediction.

"When the stork comes, he comes," he laughed.

Plan A Safe Holiday Party For Everyone

If you will be entertaining in the traditional manner — with wine, beer or other spirits — these tips can help you plan a safe, successful party.

(1) Serve appetizers before drinks.

(2) Do not serve salty foods. They make one thirsty.

(3) Serve hearty appetizers like French bread with cheese, deviled eggs, finger sandwiches, cocktail meatballs and franks.

(4) Keep alcoholic beverages out of guests' sight. Do not let them serve themselves.

(5) Do not push drinks on your guests.

(6) If guests should drink too much, do not let them drive home. Call a taxi for them if necessary. DWI's are expensive.

(7) Plan a party theme around games or other entertainment that will share the spotlight with your festive foods and beverages.

(8) Stop serving beverages 45 minutes before the end of the party.

(9) Serve a variety of alternative non-alcoholic drinks for guests who prefer them or may wish to switch.

(10) As host or hostess, it is up to you to set the spirit of the party — and where spirits are concerned, not too much and not too many.

Holt 4-H

Holt 4-H club meeting was held December 16 at 7 p.m. There were 17 members, 17 adults and four visitors present. Meeting was opened by president Jim Fick, flag pledges were said and roll call was answered by "What do you Want For Christmas?" Treasurer's report was read by Wayne Garthus and approved. There was no old business.

New business was to start thinking about a community pride project. Dean Garthus made a motion to adjourn the meeting and Angela Syverson seconded it. Gifts were exchanged, Christmas carols were sung and there was a potluck supper.

Several AVTI Programs May Be Probationary

Thief River Falls board of education accepted the AVTI budget request for 1984-85 at its meeting Tuesday evening with the understanding that new state guidelines may put several programs at the vocational-technical institute in jeopardy.

Several programs at the AVTI — including carpentry, farm management and practical nursing — currently have enrollment below state guidelines and could be subject to termination of state funding if enrollments don't reach minimums within a year.

Enrollments are based on ration of instructors to students and many programs have had the ratio increased in state standards from one teacher to 12 students to one teacher to 17 students. Classes below those stated minimums are considered probationary for the current year, according to Supt. Robert Block.

Following presentation by Kenneth Froschheiser, Thief River Falls chief of police, a resolution was approved to cooperate with local law enforcement authorities in Operation Child Print. The program is a voluntary child identification plan under which children are fingerprinted and their identification cards are retained by the parents. The prints would be important in the case of abducted or run-away children.

Under the program, children in kindergarten through fifth grade will be fingerprinted with parental permission in the schools. Children in sixth through 12th grade will be fingerprinted at the law enforcement center with a parental permission slip.

Brief meet and confer session was held to change the AVTI school calendar. January 2 had been scheduled as a class day but is a legal holiday on which school may not be held. The change was made to provide for no school on January 2 but to hold classes instead on Presidents Day in February.

Approval was given to repeal a lengthy list of obsolete and non-applicable material from the school district's policy manual which had not been updated since 1971. Policies on special education, data privacy and school facilities use were approved as presented.

A letter sent to the TRFEA suggesting a number of dates for a budget review session was distributed but no date has been set for that meeting. State department of education evaluation of the AVTI was accepted and the objectives stated were adopted as part of the five-year work plan, providing time and finances are available. Most of the deficiencies noted in the evaluation have been or are being corrected.

Authorization was given for the Lincoln high school Prowler hockey team to join a hockey conference for the 1983-84 school year with the system to be reviewed in May of 1984. Other teams which would be in the conference would be Fergus Falls, Detroit Lakes, Moorhead, East Grand Forks, Crookston and Warroad. Bemidji, Roseau and several other area schools declined membership in the conference.

Preliminary discussion was held on the suggestion that school board elections be moved from May to coincide with the general elections in November. An advantage would be the normally larger turn-out of voters which should provide a better consensus of voter opinion. Disadvantages mentioned included tendency to associate school board membership with political party affiliation and the difficulty in arranging election procedures where school district and other voting area lines differ.

Authorization was given for the administration to pursue acquisition of the necessary funds through state sources to enable the school district to purchase an existing hangar at the regional airport from the city of Thief River Falls. The hangar would be used for expansion of the AVTI airframe and power plant program facilities.

Extra-curricular assignments approved were Ev Marshall, Lambert Brunkhorst, and James Solsten, assistant musical directors; Patricia Johnson, Thespians club; and Sally Wiltse, assistant boys swimming and diving coach.

Hired were Patricia Malberg, TRM instructor at Northrop; Ned Blodgett, AVTI auto mechanics instructor; Arlene Jagol, clerical aide at Washington; and John Lindahl and Michael Trateng, skating rink attendants. Resignations were accepted from Ed Sisler, area vocational agriculture coordinator, and George Hestekind, crossing guard.

Leo Ruberto was approved as the district's equal opportunity compliance officer to succeed Dr. William Corliss. Approval was given to post for a two-hour TMH management aide position at Lincoln, a management aide position at Mark Twain and a special needs tutor position at the AVTI.

Next meeting is scheduled for January 9 at 7:30 p.m. in the board room.

Council Buys Midland Bldg.; To Move Store

going to provide a service to their customers they should "do as good a job of it as possible."

Alderman Penning objected to the location, stating that he didn't feel enough study had been given to expansion of the present site or building of a new store on a different location. Goodrich objected also, stating that he didn't feel enough time had been spent in planning, or information presented on costs of renovation and remodeling. "How can be buy something when we don't know what it's going to cost?" he queried.

Womack noted that they would have to request funds in order to have an architect prepare cost estimates and formal drawings, noting that they had not been given enough time for that.

Mayor Carlson also objected to the location, questioning problems caused by parking across from the fire hall and locating it so close to a church. City Attorney Bob Wurst noted that legally, only licensed liquor operations (which the city is not) were restricted to being within 300 feet of a church or school.

An attempt was made by Penning to kill the issue, with a motion to return it to committee for further study. This was voted for by Goodrich and Mayor Carlson, but defeated by the other five members of the council. Alderman Ambrose Wysoski commented that the committee had spent a lot of time before making its decision, and said he felt they should not be disappointed.

After defeat of the motion, Alderman Don Goodrich put on his coat and walked out, claiming that he had to get back to work. Alderman Penning was right behind him, stating that he wanted "no part in the matter."

Motion to approve the committee recommendation was then made by Borsheim, and passed, five to one, with Mayor Carlson casting the lone dissenting vote. After the vote, Carlson stated that he would not cooperate in any way with council's decision claiming that the vice-chairman (Ambrose Wysoski) would have to sign the documents. He referred to the purchase as "buying a pig in a poke," stating that not enough consideration had been given to the negative aspects of the location and the costs involved. He promised that he would pursue his objections through whatever means were available.

In other business, the council approved a permit for a public dance at the National Guard Armory on December 29, featuring two local rock and roll bands. Permit was applied for by Tom Lummis.

Washington Report

Sen. Dave Durenberger

Christmastime

Now that my children are all grown — with the exception of Danny, a high school junior who already has passed my 6-foot, 3-inch height — Christmas has become even more special for my family.

Charlie, my oldest, is away at college; David, my second son is in Minnesota; Michael, my third son, is about to leave for Marine boot camp; and Danny, the youngest, always is involved in one activity or another. It isn't often the whole family is together anymore.

The Christmases that we could count on waking up together on Christmas morning and attending church together on Christmas Eve are soon to be a thing of the past.

My family has grown, and now the holidays are a time to orchestrate who is coming home when, what day Penny and I pick them up at the airport or bus depot, and "how long do you get to be home?"

The time that they are at home and we are all together is a wonderful and special time and it makes the holiday season even more special.

Every year Penny and her mother have a tradition — they get together at our house and make Christmas cookies — for two solid days! Or as Penny puts it, "we turn the house into a Christmas cookie factory." They make all the traditional holiday cookies and then hide them in a usually futile effort to save a few for holiday visitors.

Christmas Eve Penny makes a Swedish dinner, which has become the traditional holiday supper at our house. We have Swedish meatballs, Swedish sausage and rice pudding.

What follows dinner is our usual scramble to find the boys their dress shoes and a suit jacket they haven't outgrown. And then we're off to attend the Christmas Eve service.

We come home, and when Penny's parents arrive at our house, we exchange gifts. Even the dogs, Heidi and Baron, get a gift — "chew bones" — thanks to my sons!

The best gift of all, of course, is having my family all together and in good health — and that we are able to celebrate Christmas in a free country with peace in our land.

I was notified by a legal document that arrived in the mail the other day that I was almost rich — well, sort of.

An elderly woman in California passed away recently, leaving a sizeable estate. In her will, she left all her belongings and her estate to her last living relatives.

However, there was also a line in her will in which she seemed to make a bequest to "Ronald Reagan and Republican Senators — $200.00."

Well, as it turned out, when the will was dictated, the woman only intended that a letter be sent to President Reagan and all Republican senators. The 5-digit number was intended to be a zip code. However, in transcribing her will someone put in a decimal point and dollar sign, changing 20000 to $200.00.

Just think, if I hadn't fought the 9-digit Zip so hard, it may have read "Ronald Reagan and Republican Senators — $2,000,000.00!"

Easy come, easy go.

To retain the fresh flavor of yogurt, store it in the refrigerator at 40 degrees F. Peak flavor can be maintained for 10 days or longer at this temperature. If stored for longer periods or at a higher temperature, the acidity may continue to increase resulting in a sharper flavored product, but it's still edible. Separation is normal for yogurt. Simply stir the liquid back into the yogurt and enjoy it.

Please Call Us Is Theme For Cancer Service

"Please Call Us" is the theme of the American Cancer society's service and rehabilitation program, according to Ginny Kruse, service chairman of the society's Pennington county unit.

"A variety of services and helps are available without charge to Minnesota residents, with physician's approval," she said. "The goal of the society's service and rehabilitation program is to ease suffering and whenever possible help the cancer patient return to normal living."

Mrs. Kruse listed the services that are available to cancer patients in the community as including information and guidance, information regarding ACS programs and assistance in locating other community, medical and social resources; sickroom equipment for loan to private homes, such as hospital beds, siderails, wheelchairs, walkers, canes, lambs wool, urinals, bedpans and commodes; assistance with transportation to and from treatment centers; medical dressings and gift items including sponges, underpads, patient gowns and wigs.

Other American Cancer society programs offer practical and psychological aids to people who have had breast cancer, bowel or bladder surgery or larynx surgery. Services of homemakers or housekeepers can be provided by society on a limited basis.

These aids are made possible by the efforts of American Cancer society "Crusaders" who raise the funds for the programs, Mrs. Kruse says. "During the past year, the society gave help to more than 9,000 Minnesota cancer patients. We want to help everyone who needs it." She encourages anyone wanting more information about this program to call her at 681-5301 or 964-5646.

Local Cancer Unit Offers Sickroom Help

More cancer is being controlled and more cancer patients are living longer, according to Ginny Kruse, service chairman of the American Cancer society's Pennington county unit.

American Cancer society places priority on offering assistance to these cancer patients and one of the most helpful aids available is loaned sickroom equipment.

Families of cancer patients may apply to the society for hospital beds and siderails, wheelchairs, commodes, walkers and other items which make it easier for patients to be cared for in their homes.

"Too often families are unaware that they can get this assistance from the American Cancer society," she said. "This help is available in every county in Minnesota, and is supported by voluntary contributions to the society. Our service and rehabilitation program is designed to help as much as possible with the care of cancer patients and assist them to return to normal living."

Anyone interested in the variety of services available from the Pennington county unit may call her at 681-5301 or 964-5646.

Fake Champagne Wins University Taste Testing

by Jeanne K. Hanson
University News Service

Champagnes without alcohol came up sparkling in the first large-scale taste test of alcoholic and alcohol-free beverages, with three non-alcoholic brands outscoring some of the best domestic champagnes in a University of Minnesota research project. Wines with and without alcohol were rated about the same, but near beers lost big to the real thing.

Three taste tests, conducted by food science and nutrition professor Zata Vickers for the University of Minnesota's office of alcohol and other drug abuse programming, were designed to determine whether alcohol-free drinks are tasty enough to be appreciated along with their alcoholic counterparts at home parties, restaurants and bars. "We want to reduce alcohol abuse and drunk driving by broadening people's choices," said Jim Schaefer, director of the alcohol program.

"The taste tests show that there's merit in promoting non-alcoholic beverages for their drink qualities alone," Schaefer said. About 100 University of Minnesota students aged 19 to 29, recruited from several places on campus and by random calls to numbers in the student directory, participated in each of the taste tests. Both problem drinkers and teetotalers were screened out of the tests. Subjects sat in individual booths, sampling the alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks, presented in unlabeled cups on the same tray. They recorded each sample's hedonic or pleasurability quality on an unstructured scale.

Although all the students were under age 30, the test results are in accord with the few informal taste tests of alternative beverages conducted with adults elsewhere, Schaefer said.

"Even in this sterile experimental setting, a good number of people couldn't tell the difference between the alcoholic and the non-alcoholic drinks," Schaefer added. In this second phase of the testing, about 50 per cent of both the champagne and the beer drinkers and 30 per cent of the wine drinkers guessed wrong for at least eight of the 10 beverages they tried. Those who thought a drink was non-alcoholic — regardless of whether it was — usually rated it lower, probably as a result of our cultural conditioning to appreciate alcohol, Schaefer said.

In the test of non-alcoholic champagnes, Meier's Cold Duck, Meier's Pink Sparkling Catawba and Meier's Sparkling Catawba outscored all five of the regular champagnes tested, and alcohol-free Spumante and Pommac, a Swedish Festive Alternative, outscored all but one of the champagnes. However, the sixth non-alcoholic champagne, Alive Polarity, scored lower than all the regular champagnes tested.

In the wine versus grape-juice test, Meier's Catawba grape juice, which was the top-scoring alcohol-free wine, was rated less than one percentage point lower than the alcoholic Meier's Pink Catawba wine. And Felton Empire Mendocino White Riesling grape juice 1981 and Empire Gamay Beaujolais grape juice scored only a couple of percentage points lower than the alcoholic Rheinberg Kellerei Rheingau Riesling Kabinett 1979 and Pine Ridge Chenin Blanc 1981, the second and third ranked regular wines. "There was a good deal of overlap within the wines," Schaefer said.

Real beer was strongly preferred to near -beer, however, with all the regular beers outscoring all the dealcoholized beers, often by a margin of two to one. The near beers tested were Texas Select, Goetz near beer, Kingbury near beer, Schmidt Select and Moussy, ranked in that order. "Beer has a long way to go in terms of taste scores," Schaefer said.

For the taste test, Schaefer had to collect prepackaged non-alcoholic drinks from all over the world — importing many to the United States for the first time. Now, however, an alternative beverage distribution company has been formed in Minnesota to distribute these non-alcoholic drinks — packaged to look like their alcoholic counterparts — to bars and liquor stores; Schaefer is a consultant to the company. Although three more such firms have sprung up in California and others are forming elsewhere, "Minnesota is still the top state in the nation in recognizing the market for non-alcoholic drinks," Schaefer said.

Making these non-alcoholic drinks available keeps everyone in a group comfortable, since about 20 per cent of the people in the country don't consume alcohol at all and others prefer to alternate alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks, Schaefer said. They also supplement the soft drinks, bottled water and fancy non-alcoholic mixed drinks now served by some considerate hosts, he said.

In a cocktail party setting, probably even fewer people would notice the difference between the alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks, Schaefer said. Researchers have known for a long time that the context in which one drinks is very powerful and people can even "get drunk" on non-alcoholic drinks if they wrongly consider them to be alcoholic, a phenomenon called the expectancy effect. So, Schaefer said, an engaging atmosphere would make the non-alcoholic drinks even more enjoyable. "Toast the holidays with some fake champagne," he suggests.

Helpful Hints on Holiday Driving

Some drivers think that the lower the temperature, the slicker ice on the road will be. Ice at 30°F has been proven to be more slick than ice at zero degrees.

Even if you consider yourself the world's best driver, winter weather requires paying added attention to the rules of the road.

Here's some advice from the Independent Insurance Agents of America (IIAA) that can help you drive more safely this holiday season:

- Keep in mind that ice at 30°F has proven to be more slick than ice at zero degrees. Take extra care when driving slick roads and be sure your car has snow tires on.
- Certain items should be placed in the car in case you find yourself stranded, or if your tires lose traction. For lost traction, keep sand, cat litter or some sort of traction mats on hand. Flashlights and blankets, as well as canned drinks and packaged foods, could be lifesavers if your car breaks down on a deserted road.
- Begin driving in winter weather by slowly accelerating to determine if your wheels may spin—if they don't, reduce your speed and drive carefully. If they do, use the steering wheel. Steer the car in the direction you want the front to go and the rest of the car will probably skid out sideways. Do not brake until you have regained control of the steering wheel. Apply gradual pressure on the brakes.
- While driving, remember to keep sufficient distance between you and other cars. It takes three to nine times as far to come to a stop on snow and ice.
- Be sure to have anti-freeze in your windshield washer as well as some in your cooling system.
- If you're stranded, stay with your car. Exercise to keep warm. Use a flashlight. Leave the window open just a crack, if the engine is running, for some fresh air. Use flares if you have them.

Shades Help Lower Winter Heating Bills

Windows provide your home with sunlight, fresh air, and a view to the world outside. But windows also contribute a lot to your high heating bills. In fact, 10 to 30 per cent of your heating bill pays for heat lost through windows.

An easy, fairly inexpensive way to save more of your heat is to use window shades. Standard, inexpensive roller shades sold at the local hardware store will do.

Keep shades open to let the sun's heat in during the day. After sunset, and on cloudy days, keep shades lowered to the sill. This can keep in one-third of the indoor heat that normally escapes through windows.

Shades should be mounted inside the window frame, close to the glass. They should be cut so their sides are as close to the window frame as possible. Closed, well-fitted shades form an insulating air pocket between the shade and the window, and cut air movement past the cold glass.

Because curtains fit more loosely, they do little to stop heat loss. However, shades hung behind curtains can add to a room's warmth.

There are also insulating shades and indoor shutters designed specifically to save energy. These are becoming more available in Minnesota, or can be homemade. These are very effective at cutting heat loss through windows, although custommade window coverings can be expensive.

On the other hand,, many homeowners spend money on window coverings with only decoration in mind. Next time you plan new window treatments, consider energy savings as well as aesthetics.

While you're measuring your windows for shades, hold your hand in front of the rope pulley holes near the top of the inside frame. Feel the draft? Stuff rope caulk in the hole around the rope. Also, there are now plastic pulley seals available that can be permanently installed.

You can learn more about energy-saving window coverings in a brochure from the Minnesota department of energy and economic development. It describes how to make your present curtains more energy efficient, and how to shop for, or design, new insulating shades and shutters. Ask for the brochure from the energy information center. Call 1-800-652-9747 from outside the Twin Cities and ask for "energy"

Senior Citizens News

Our December 15th meeting was our Christmas party at our hangout. This will be the last meeting of this year. We close up the center until spring, and then hope to all be meeting at our new center and hopefully some new seniors will come and join us in our new center.

There were 15 members registered in our record book and one lunch guest, Dion Nelson, who came to help grandma Mildred take home the Christmas tree she had loaned us for our party and our sale day. Bertha Fredrickson of Thief River Falls also was present for our Christmas party.

We sang Christmas carols and later prayed the table grace, and then feasted on the potluck supper we all supplied.

Ruth Harper gave two door prizes that Ida Bruce and Anna Brekke won.

We exchanged Christmas gifts and then wished each other a Merry Christmas and departed for our homes.

We also want to thank Jeanie Larson of Warren for the box she gave our center. We will make good use of it.

IT ALL SPELLS
Christmas ...

...the warm sound of familiar carols in the night, opening gifts, that special look that lights up the faces of children, the joy of reunion with loved ones, it all spells Christmas.

Christmas really is special. Wherever we are on December 25, our hearts are a little warmer. The old problems are still there, but somehow they seem lighter in the spirit of this most vibrant season of the year.

Just knowing that it's Christmas can help us face problems. So can another source of endless strength encourage us throughout the year. It is the assurance of the Infinite spirit of God's love and truth, as revealed through His Holy Word and taught through the years within His church.

Let the power of His limitless love, which made the first Christmas possible, be with you as you worship in church this week.

Vet Health Care Benefits Are Expanded

President Reagan has signed legislation entitled the "VA Health Program Amendments of 1983", which extends the store front vet center program, authorizes the provision of preventive health services for certain veterans, and calls for the establishment of an advisory committee on women veterans.

Key provisions of the new law will help the Veterans administration assist aging veterans. Among these are provisions authorizing a VA adult day health care program and a community residential care program. In addition, the law authorizes an increase in per diem rates to help defray the costs of veterans' care in state homes as an incentive for states to continue building and expanding these facilities for veterans.

VA administrator Harry N. Walters praised congress for its support of veterans benefits. He indicated the VA would act promptly to carry out provisions of the new law. He also noted that the women's advisory panel he established earlier this year has begun important work related to the needs of female veterans which can be transferred to the new committee.

New law extends indefinitely the time in which a Vietnam-era veteran may apply for readjustment counseling services. It delays by four years, to September 30, 1988, the transition of this program to VA health care facilities.

It requires the VA administrator to design and conduct a comprehensive study of the prevalence and incidence of post-traumatic stress disorder and other psychological problems in readjusting to civilian life experienced by Vietnam-era veterans. Report to be submitted to congress by October 1, 1986.

Other benefits in the legislation include:

—Adult day health care services — authorizes a five-year adult day health care program for the VA. Veterans who are determined to be eligible for community nursing home placement would be eligible for placement in an adult day health care program.

—Community residential care — establishes authority for VA to set standards for placing veterans in a community residential care facility but would not otherwise give the VA regulatory authority over these homes.

—State home per diem increase — increases the per diem rates for payments to state veterans homes for domiciliary, nursing home and hospital care from $6.35, $12.10, and $13.25 to $7.30, $17.05 and $15.25 respectively.

—Preventive health care services — mandates the provisions of these services to certain service-connected veterans and permits VA to furnish preventive health care services to nonservice-connected veterans receiving VA care.

—Study of health care needs in Puerto Rico — requires VA to report to congress on its long-term plans for addressing health care needs of veterans in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

—Study of beneficiary travel — requires the administrator to review the beneficiary travel program for the purpose of effecting management improvements and economies, and to report to congress on that review.

—Improve recruitment and retention of certain personnel — gives VA limited special personnel authorities vis-a-vis physical therapists, respiratory therapists, and licensed practitioners-vocational nurses. Agency is authorized to hire and promote them without regard to civil service requirements and, in limited circumstances, to adjust their rates of pay.

—Advisory committee on women veterans — requires the administrator to establish an advisory committee on women veterans.

—Gender related care — requires that all health care facilities have a direct care capability to treat gender-specific disabilities.

—Radiation study and guide — calls for the conduct of an epidemiological study, if determined to be scientifically feasible, of the long-term adverse health effects of exposure to ionizing radiation from the detonation of nuclear devices or from the American occupation of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Japan in 1945 and 1946.

TRAIN facts and fancies

An entire layout of these perfectly detailed miniature trains can fit inside an attaché case.

Many families are getting the inside track on gift-giving this holiday season by looking into model trains. Here are some model train facts and fancies that could start you and your family on an interesting new hobby, one that could result in treasured collectibles.

- Collectors will be surprised to learn that some model trains made between 1900 and 1940 have sold for as much as $40,000 for a single locomotive.
- The manufacturer of those trains is a European train company called Marklin Brothers, a company nearly 125 years old. The romance and technical expertise of trains in Europe have been a long tradition and this West German company draws upon a record of unequaled quality in design and technical innovation.
- The company sold its first train at the 1891 Leipzig trade fair—a clockwork mechanism in a figure-eight layout. Today, Marklin offers three model train gauges: Z gauge, the world's smallest operating railway; HO, the most popular gauge and I gauge, ideal for indoor and outdoor operation.
- A complete array of locomotives, freight and passenger cars is available as well as a wide variety of accessory items—nearly everything imaginable to build the fantasy world of your dreams.
- Marklin trains are highly durable and manufactured to last a lifetime. In fact, these trains enjoy a tradition of being handed down from one generation to the next.
- Z gauge trains are built at a scale of 1:220 and have been precision engineered with every original feature. An entire layout can be set on a desk or coffee table.
- The manufacturer's engineering is most evident in easy track assembly and operation. The color-coded wires which plug into the transformer allow even a novice to set up and operate a basic layout within minutes.

All of which means that this holiday season, trains are offering a new dimension of fun for adults and children alike, and these trains promise solid returns on an investment for your children or yourself.

Marklin trains are sold through hobby, specialty and leading department stores. Or, customers may write the company at 6960 North 60th Street, Milwaukee, WI 53218: (414) 527-3107.

Use Caution When Starting Stalled Cars

Because stalled cars and dead batteries are common in Minnesota winters, the Minnesota department of public safety says it is important to review the proper procedure for jump starting a car.

+ Make sure the cars' bumpers or bodies are not touching because contact will short circuit your cable connection.

+ Put both cars in "park or neutral" with the parking brakes set.

+ Turn off all lights, radio and power accessories.

+ Precaution should be taken to keep gases from escaping the batteries and contacting sparks that might be given off during the jump start attempt. Covering both batteries with a wet or heavy cloth will help prevent this explosion potential. Batteries contain dangerous acids, so precaution is absolutely necessary.

+ Take the red or orange positive battery cable (which is generally marked with a plus sign) and connect it to the positive post or terminal of the good battery. Take the other end of the orange or red cable and connect it to the positive (plus) post of the weak battery.

Now take the black negative cable (usually marked with a negative sign) and connect one end to the negative (minus) post of the charged battery in the car that is doing the boosting. Connect the other end of the negative black cable away from the battery on the car being boosted to make a ground connection. Attaching it to the bumper of the car being boosted is a good example of a safe place to make the connection. The ground cable must be attached away from the battery and not on the negative terminal itself so sparks or flames will not be near the battery and cause it to explode.

+ Start the car doing the boosting. Wait a few seconds before turning on the key in the car with the low battery and the car should start.

+ Once started, remove the cable in reverse order. First, take off the ground connection, then the negative cable on the good battery, followed by the positive cable on the weak battery and the positive cable on the good battery.

If budgets could talk, they would suggest The Times Classified Ads for help.

Handle Turkey Properly For Holiday Cooking

Thaw, stuff, cook, serve and store your holiday bird safely, says the Minnesota safety council. Purchase only USDA-inspected frozen poultry. All poultry is perishable, and cleanliness should be used in all phases of preparing poultry products.

Keep frozen poultry hard-frozen until time to thaw. Remove it from the freezer two to three days before cooking. Follow instructions on the wrapper to thaw it safely. Cook fresh-chilled poultry within one to two days.

Keep turkey and stuffing separate and refrigerated until time to cook.

Stuffing a turkey the day before it's cooked can allow poisonous bacteria to grow in the stuffing, even if it is stored in the refrigerator. It takes several hours to chill the center of a stuffed turkey to a safe 40 degrees. Then it takes several more hours in the oven to heat the dressing to a safe 165-degrees F. In that time, enough bacteria could grow to cause at least a serious upset stomach. And the number of bacteria could double every 30 minutes if the food is not properly refrigerated.

Pack dressing into bird loosely so it will heat quickly. (It's safer to put the stuffing in a separate pan than in the turkey, and the bird will cook faster that way too.)

Completely cook poultry at one time — never partially cook, store, then finish cooking at a later date.

After cooking, remove all stuffing from the turkey immediately so leftovers can cool quickly.

Never allow leftover food to sit out at room temperature.

After dinner, leftover cooked poultry, broth, stuffing and gravy should be separted, covered, refrigerated and used within two days. For longer storage, wrap leftovers in meal-sized portions and freeze immediately. Frozen poultry and dressing may be safely kept a month in the freezer; after that they are likely to be less appetizing, becoming dry and losing flavor.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

We are writing this letter partially in response to the great concern expressed by one of the older merchants of our city who felt unhappy about the Sunday business hours in our city. We would like to express our deep appreciation for the merchants of Thief River Falls who have chosen to remain closed on Sundays, and especially during this Christmas season.

And may we say a special word of encouragement to not only these merchants, but also to each one who tries to help by doing as much business as possible with those who respect Sunday closing throughout the year.

Isaiah has so wisely put it: "(they) that join themselves to the Lord, to serve him, and love the name of the Lord, to be his servants, every one that keepeth the sabbath from polluting it, and taketh hold of my covenant; even them will I bring to my holy mountain, and make them joyful in my house of prayer:" (Isaiah 56:6, 7)

That's a wonderful promise that applies as much today as it ever did. May God give you each an extra measure of his blessings this holiday season.

Sincerely,
Rodney M. &
Nancy Johnson

FU Delegates Call For Farm Food Policy

In two special actions, delegates to the 42nd annual Minnesota Farmers Union convention held in St. Paul recently voted to call for a national farm and food policy to promote agriculture and end hunger in America; and voted to send a mailgram to President Ronald Reagan and Agriculture Secretary John Block urging the President to sign the dairy bill recently passed by congress.

In calling for a food and farm policy, the delegates said the need for a fair return on food production, problems associated with unemployment and underemployment, and an increasing problem of hunger in our own nation as well as abroad add up to the need for such action. National farm and food policy would help keep America from breaking into a polarized nation of rich and poor, they said.

In the special order of business passed Monday morning, delegates said:

"Be it resolved, that such legislation include an optional, innovative plan that enables persons drawing unemployment insurance, trade readjustment benefits and benefits for the needy to purchase food and processed food at a saving from government stocks of surplus U.S. farm commodities; and

"Be it resolved that we stand in support of unified effort by farm, church, labor, rural business and voters' rights organizations to call for clearly stated plans of action and commitments by presidential and congressional candidates to develop an effective national farm and food policy to promote agriculture and end hunger in America."

In separate action, the delegates sent a mailgram to the white house, asking that President Reagan sign the dairy bill recently completed in congress.

"For Minnesota, this bill is of extreme importance. To young farmers, it could mean the chance to continue in their chosen line of work — farming. And to all farmers it establishes the best plan presented available to manage the production of milk," the delegates wrote.

CHRISTMAS SAFETY TIPS

Keeping the holiday season merry may mean being more alert to possible safety hazards when shopping for gifts or decorating the home, experts say.

Here, from the Independent Insurance Agents of America (IIAA), are some hints to help you have a happier—and safer—holiday:

- While shopping for gifts, make sure your purse or billfold is closed at all times. Do not leave any packages or purses unattended. This time of year, unfortunately, brings purse snatchers and pickpockets out in droves.
- Make sure your credit card slip has been filled out properly before signing and make sure your card is returned. If you should decide to use cash instead of credit, keep it concealed until you must pay. You might consider using travelers checks or money orders at this time of year.
- If you're buying a fresh tree, its branches and needles should bend easily with very few needles falling off. Peel a bit of the trunk off and touch the bottom. It should be sticky with resin. Once you get the tree home, cut a few inches off the bottom and place it in a stand with water. The tree should be placed away from any heat vents, ducts or fireplaces.
- Christmas lights should be used with caution as they can cause fire and shock. According to the Consumer Product Safety Commission, you should check plugs and connectors for loose or missing links—they may expose bare metal conductors. If so, do not use the set. Also check the sockets. A damaged socket may give a person a shock. If the prongs on the light set bend, or if there is any bare wire, do not use the set.
- When selecting toys for children, read the labels for safety and age recommendations. Make sure toys do not have sharp edges or small parts that might be swallowed. Also make sure the toy is in one piece after the child removes it from the package. Wires, staples and pins may injure the child. Return the item if it is not intact.

When selecting toys for children, make sure there are no sharp edges or small parts that might be swallowed.

Hints for the Holidays

BISCUITS 'N' GRAVY ADD FESTIVE TOUCH

You can treat family and guests royally-and easily—with treats such as made from scratch hot biscuits and delicious gravy. In fact, these two family favorites can form the basis for some delectable holiday appetizers and main dishes.

How's it done? Just by taking a trip to a Kentucky Fried Chicken store, where fresh-baked buttermilk biscuits are made from scratch and are always available, hot, right from the oven. At the same time, you can buy a carton or two of the Colonel's gravy to stretch yours or use just as it is.

Here's a tip to make holiday cooking even easier. Need fresh bread crumbs? Just whirl a couple of biscuits in the blender or food processor and you'll have fresh crumbs in five seconds.

Try these recipes to dazzle holiday guests and treat the family to them year-round.

WALNUT BISCUIT STUFFING

8 to 10 Kentucky Fried Chicken Buttermilk Biscuits, halved horizontally
2 cups walnuts, coarsely chopped
1-1/2 cups chopped celery
1/2 cup onion, coarsely chopped
1/4 cup minced parsley
1 teaspoon poultry seasoning
1/4 teaspoon black pepper
1/2 cup butter or margarine, melted
1/2 cup Kentucky Fried Chicken Gravy
1/2 cup hot water

Cut biscuit halves into half-inch cubes. Combine with nuts, celery, onion, parsley, poultry seasoning, pepper and melted butter. Combine gravy and hot water and stir into biscuit mixture. Toss lightly to combine and add more water if too dry. Stuff lightly into a 12- to 13-pound turkey. Don't pack, stuffing will expand. Put remaining stuffing into one-quart casserole. Refrigerate. Brush turkey with melted butter and place in baking dish breast side up, in a 325° oven until meat thermometer inserted into thickest part of turkey breast registers 185°. Baste with melted butter during cooking. Bake extra stuffing, covered during last 30 minutes.

MICROWAVE METHOD:

Place turkey breast-side-down in 2-quart glass baking dish. Brush with the 2 tablespoons melted butter. Cover with waxed paper. Cook in microwave oven about 60 minutes at High. Turn turkey over. Shield ends of wings and legs with aluminum foil. Cover with waxed paper. Cook in microwave oven 45 to 55 minutes or until juices run clear. If using Temperature Probe, set at 170°F. Cover with aluminum foil and let stand 10 to 15 minutes for heat to equalize. While turkey is standing, cook stuffing covered in microwave oven 5 minutes at High.

BISCUIT SHRIMP APPETIZERS

12 Kentucky Fried Chicken Buttermilk Biscuits
1/2 cup butter or margarine, melted
2 teaspoons Dijon-style mustard
1 package (12 oz.) medium shrimp, cooked
1-1/2 cups shredded Monterey Jack cheese
3 tablespoons mayonnaise
3/4 teaspoon dried dill weed

Cut biscuits vertically into four slices. Toast. Combine softened butter and mustard, mixing well. Spread on toasted biscuit slices. Slice 24 shrimp in half lengthwise, making 48 pieces to reserve for garnish. Chop remaining shrimp and combine with cheese, mayonnaise and dill weed. Spread a heaping teaspoonful on each toast slice. Top with reserved shrimp slices. Broil about four inches from heat until cheese melts slightly. 24 servings.

MICROWAVE METHOD:

Place 8 appetizers at a time on microwave-oven-safe plate. Cook in microwave oven about 35 seconds at High, or until cheese melts slightly.

Members of the Mary circle of the Grace church ALCW met at the Norman Newton home on Thursday afternoon. Janice Peterson led the Bible study. A business meeting was held. A collection was taken and the money was sent to the Roseau Children's Home. Hostesses for a delicious Christmas lunch were Lillian and Cathy Newton.

A cookie exchange party was held at the Delores Saul home on Monday afternoon. Those who brought cookies or bars to be exchanged were Glenyce Lusignan, Sandi Warne, Blanche Bakken, De De and Sylvia Moe, Viola Wikstrom, Margaret Morken and Alice Hook. Life In The Greenhouse

Following editorial is from the Sacramento Bee:

Alter one seemingly trivial element in the earth's ecosystem and changes of stunning scope and consequence will likely follow. That theme, a staple of science fiction, is imbedded in the news from Washington that the climate of this planet is about to undergo a dramatic warming.

The explanation for this trend is at once as esoteric and as mundane as any science fiction writer's fantasy. Ever-increasing amounts of carbon dioxide in the air — 7 per cent more in the past quarter-century — caused by the burning of fossil fuels, are in effect making this planet a more effective giant greenhouse, as fewer of the sun's warming rays now escape from Earth's atmosphere.

Two recently released reports — one prepared by the Environmental Protection Agency, the other by the National Academy of sciences — predict that average world temperatures will rise as much as 9 degrees within the next century.

A shift of such magnitude may not actually occur, skeptics point out, for the prognostications fail to take account of the effects of ocean currents such as El Nino on the world's weather, and may exaggerate the amount of carbon dioxide that will be released into the atmosphere. But if the scientists' predictions hold, life on Earth will be very different.

More than banished winter chills and summer sizzles are at issue here. Precipitation and storm patterns would be altered dramatically, affecting the prospects for agriculture. The Wheat Belt, for example, is likely to shift even farther north, as the growing season in now-frigid climes becomes longer. Rises in sea level brought on by new rainfall would make coastal flooding a more frequent occurrence. Nor are the plausible impacts confined to natural phenomena. New challenges will be posed to nations' economies, and to their political structurs as well.

In releasing their report, spokesmen for the National Academy of Sciences are urging planning, not panic. That's tall order for a government that's been unable to cope well with familiar natural phenomena, such as earthquakes, but one worth taking on. Agricultural research and coastal planning, for instance, ought to be informed by the new realities of warmer, wetter climates.

If the projected changes appear to spell bad news, it's not beyond imagining that the nations of the world might jointly decide to lessen their reliance on fossil fuels, stepping up the development of alternative energy sources. It would be ironic — and refreshing, too — if Mother Nature were able to spark a level of international collaboration that has thus far eluded the reach of the world's politicians.

Is That What We Need?

Following editorial is from the Ely Echo:

At this Christmas season, when we are singing "Peace On Earth, Good Will Toward Men"... it is difficult to look around and wonder where it is we are singing about. There is no peace. Indeed, there is a world gearing up for all manner of hostilities. Even the very small and very poor nations are spending oversize portions of their meager resources on weapons... because the country next door is.

Maybe it is time to take a look at this picture. Maybe it is time to change it. There isn't a whole lot anybody can do about Russia. That nation has a military government and a military mind set which makes it almost impossible to reason with. But maybe, instead of our government continually jumping with a knee-jerk reaction whenever the Russians do this or do that, we could get into a little broader-based, less belligerent attitude.

The question is, does the world need all this war? Is this a real high priority item? In the list of things the world needs, is war a necessity? Every government on the globe says it does not "want war." Is war more important than feeding the hungry? Is war more important than clothing the ill-clothed? Is war more important than housing the un-housed?

Do we need armaments industries more than we need better farms, more textile plants, more home construction? Is all this time, effort, money, research, study and resources being put into rockets, bombs, tanks, guns, battleships and bayonets more important than putting those same efforts, money, research and resources into non-destructive endeavor?

If war is not a much-wanted and much-needed item, then how do we get out the nasty cycle of suspicion, hatred, belligerence and arms, more suspicion, much bigger and more destructive arms... and so on?

Who takes the lead? What major country says: "We don't think you need war and we don't think you need all that artillery, rockets and airplanes... so we aren't going to sell you any of that stuff, nor are we going to give you money or credit to buy any of that stuff. We will sell you factory machinery, farm machinery, seeds, tools, trucks, livestock, whatever. We will even give you loans if you need them, grants if you are poor. But no arms. Not from us. We are not in the war business any more."

That might be refreshing. Probably nobody will do it because it is too simple. Also, there is a lot of money in selling all of that war material. As long as the world's hatreds can be fanned into flame, that's the way the nations go. And it doesn't take much to make people angry or afraid or both.

"Peace On Earth, Good Will Toward Men." You wonder if everybody is singing and no one is listening.

I Want It Like This

Following editorial is from the Montevideo American News:

Suppose the leader of the Ku Klux Klan or a facist organizer walked into our newspaper office today. He asked to place a quarter page ad and gave us the money for it. The ad stated his organization's goals and announced a local meeting. Should we accept the ad if we don't particularly approve of the Ku Klux Klan or facist politics?

Suppose, secondly, that the person brought in an ad and a news release and said, "I want to run this ad exactly as is, and I want you to run the news release exactly as is and right above the ad." Should we accept either, or both?

About $80 for a quarter page ad is hard to turn down. We need lots more than that just to pay for our postage and printing bills each week. But must we abide entirely by what the advertiser wants, even to the extent of including his news release?

Suppose, thirdly, that a local businessman comes into our office one fine morning with an ad announcing a new product he's selling. Suppose he plunks down alongside it a news release and says "I want you to use this news release, too, as is, or I won't run the ad with you."

Now we haven't had many facists or Ku Klux Klansmen bop into our office making demands, but we have certainly seen our share of businessmen attempt to get by with a free news release... and then get mad when we don't agree to their wishes. Try as I might, I can not see any difference between their approach and that of the KKK bigot or the facist or the communist dictator who says "Print this or we'll shut you down."

Why, in other words, do people in the business of selling something — be it fertilizer or tools or education — deem themselves instant experts on what a newspaper should publish or a radio station announce? Is it right for someone to be able to buy news space by waving a free ticket over the newspaperman's reach, or a full page ad, or control over a loan, or extension of a lease?

If a newspaperman or legislator submitted to the whims of everyone who made demands on him, what kind of self respect would he have? Who could have respect for his newspaper or the legislator's voting record? If you wouldn't walk into the New York Times' office making demands, why can you justify it at the local level?

I heard at a conference on censorship made several weeks ago that the human being's urge to censor or repress is greater than or equal to any other human urge. That's why there are dictatorships, and why democracy is a constant effort to maintain. We want freedom to ourselves, but we get a little careless about infringing on the freedoms of others.

As Voltaire said "I disapprove of what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it."

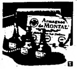
Borrowed Nonsense:

"Is it true, Doc," the patient asked, "that if a person doesn't smoke, drink or run around and works hard, he'll live longer?"

"We won't know for sure," the doctor replied, "until somebody tries it."

After paying his toll on the San Francisco Bay bridge to a very attractive toll collector, the tourist commented: "That's the best looking toll-house cookie I've ever seen!"

STOCKING STUFFERS



This season, why not give her a classic gift, a single strand of luxurious pearls? And, for him who has everything, there is but one treasure to give: a miniature (50 ml.) selection of Armagnac de Montal. This limited edition of three rare distillations will elicit an immediate response of pleasurable surprise. For Armagnac is a very special, mature brandy the French have only recently allowed out of the country and into the United States.

A superb libation, it is savored by connoisseurs for its full, rich, mellow taste, that many believe to be less burning than that of its younger cousin Cognac. Such distinguished gentlemen as Winston Churchill and Charles de Gaulle would accept no other after-dinner drink.

This season, Armagnac de Montal has released what possibly may be the world's most expensive miniature collection of elegant tastes: the 1893, a majestic and superbly rich brandy that practically melts the silver spoon in one's mouth (a 750 ml. [or fifth] of this exquisite spirit usually retails for about $2,000 a bottle). While the 1904, a little less than $800 for a 750 ml., is celebrated as an extremely mellow, yet abundant full-flavor. The woody accent which is not apparent on the palate, returns to warm the senses after you swallow. Finally, the piece de résistance, the 1939, is a steal at only $200 for a 750 ml. This wonderfully smooth elixir, full in flavor with the aroma and almost spicy taste of wood, delivers the gentlest finish of prune. Throughout the Second World War, France guarded this brandy as a treasured heirloom.

This unique miniature collection is packaged in a distinct wooden box that bears the dates of each distillation—the 1893, the 1904 and the 1939. Truly this gift is the world's most expensive stocking stuffer at $100, and is a gift of unquestionable good taste.

STRAIGHT TALK

Albert D. Hattis, Associate Professor of Business and Holder of the Schwan Endowed Chair for Free Enterprise, Southwest State University, Marshall

Last week, in part one of this series on the current business situation, the problems ("the bad news") were discussed, the inability of the world to be a good customer because of our high prices and the high cost of the dollar, as well as the internal complications of high interest rates, an anticipated credit crunch next year if big federal deficits continue, our non-competitive costs, and an anticipated increase in inflation.

This week, in part two, the solution ("the good news") to our problems is being proposed.

A study of business failures produces lots of explanations including the economy, competition, high costs, poor productivity, customers not paying their bills, high interest rates, credit unavailability, and much more. You can bundle most of the business failure explanations into two words, "lousy management." Good management is "on top" of problems, anticipating and resolving them.

The question, then, is how to create good management.

Good managers are good communicators. They know how to convince customers that their products and services are exceptional (and they listen for customer comments and suggestions), and they create an environment for their employees that results in enthusiasm, high productivity, a degree of understanding of where the business is going, what it will take to get there, and what the company can honestly afford in wages and benefits.

Getting employees to identify with the successes and failures of their business is another part of that communcation task. Employee productivity, from studies I have read, is about 50 per cent of what could ideally be achieved with motivated employees and work assignments that are effectively coordinated.

Successful managers know that unfair treatment of any employee or not keeping employees well informed on what is taking place provide grist for the rumormill. That grist translates into lower productivity and bad attitudes. Recently I stayed at a hotel. Long time employees of that hotel took the time to describe how happy they are with their employer and their jobs. It had been so long since I had heard employees talk positively about their employers, that I wrote a note to the hotel owner asking the secret to his success in his employee relations.

Beyond the human and humane aspects of the management job, good managers keep informed on their markets, competition and everything that could impact on their business. They know what's happening to costs, quality control, customer service, the size of inventories and their cash balances. One smart old codger I know, with none of the formalities of a business school education, ran a multi-thousand people operation, and when he was away he called each morning to find out how much cash the company had in the bank. Some of his employees thought he was eccentric. He wasn't. He knew how much cash the firm needed to pay bills on a discounted basis and pay employees. From the balances reported to him, he could tell if his staff was doing a good job of collection and taking care of business.

Top managers never say, "That's the way we've always done it!" They do try new ideas, experimenting inexpensively before making big commitments, and moving quickly once a decision is made.

Good managers don't gamble with their company money. They take risks after lots of study of the fats. Speaking of information, they encourage the truth by being tolerant of employees, even if they are bearers of bad news, otherwise they knew that their employees will only "feed" them what they want to hear, fact or not. These successful managers always know what is happening in their businesses. When a problem exists, instead of wasting time exploding a short fuse, they spend their energy getting all of the facts and deciding what should be done, not letting the company bleed to death because it's quitting time, a weekend or a holiday. Good managers never ask more from their employees than they are willing to give of themselves.

Summing it all up, good management is hard work, concern for people (customers, employees, vendors and all others who are involved), a willingness to do your homework, planning and follow-through with dedication. This sounds easy, but it isn't. This formula can be the difference between business success and business failure in times like these!

That's Straight Talk!

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS

Q — How do I appeal a decision made by one of the Veterans Administration's rating boards on my disability?

A — You need only write a letter to the VA office which made the decision stating you disagree with the VA's decision. This will initiate the appeals process and you will then be advised of your appeal rights and actions you must take.

Q — Can anyone get information from the Veterans Administration about my service-connected disabilities and how much compensation I receive?

A — Under the Privacy Act of 1974, we can inform anyone how much money you receive from the VA if they provide sufficient identifying information about you. However, we are not allowed to inform anyone where your VA checks go or what you disabilities are without your written permission.

Q — May a veteran or other eligible claimant work and still be evaluated as unemployable for Veterans Administration benefit purposes?

A — Each claim for unemployability benefits is determined on the basis of the facts in the individual case. The nature and extent of employment and the effects of service-connected disabilities are taken into consideration. Veterans who are rated unemployable and who begin any type of employment should notify the VA at once so that continued eligibility can be reevaluated.

Q: My husband recently passed away and I received a Presidential Memorial Certificate. Can his parents receive such a certificate?

A: Yes. His parents may send a request to the nearest Veterans Administration regional office.

Q — Are my Veterans Administration benefits subject to taxation?

A — No. Under federal law, all benefits administered by the VA are exempt from taxation.

Q — I have started school and I need a loan to cover living expenses until my Veterans Administration benefits are received. How do I apply?

A — The VA does not have a program of personal loans. However, you should contact your nearest VA benefits counselor who may be able to refer you to a state or local agency for help.

cancer answers

"Cancer Answers" is a weekly column sponsored by the Red River Valley Medical society, the Red River Valley unit of the American Cancer society and the Thief River Falls Times. Questions may be mailed to the editor, Thief River Falls Times. All questions will be answered, and those of a general interest will be published in "Cancer Answers."

Q.: I'm a volunteer visitor for my church service group, and one of the shut-ins I've been visiting has terminal cancer. She asked me if I knew of any hospices nearby. Where can I get that information, and what services can a hospice provide for her?

A.: There are several sources you can check to find out about hospices near you. You can ask the social service department or social worker at the nearest hospital. The county Public Health Department and public health nurses have information on hospices.

You also can call the Cancer Information Service, which has a list of resources for cancer patients in each county. The toll-free number is 1-800-4-CANCER. The National Hospice Organization also has a directory of hospices throughout the country. The national phone number for that organization is (703) 938-5588.

Specific services provided vary considerably from one hospice to another. Some can give hospital-like patient care. Others assist with at-home patient care, and some offer a combination of options. All hospice programs are designed to serve both the patient and family during the last weeks of life and the bereavement period. Hospices concentrate on the physical and emotional comfort of the dying patient and his or her family.

Q.: I'm program chairperson for our local homemaker's club. I'd like someone to come and talk to us about how to protect ourselves and our families against cancer. How can I locate a speaker?

A.: The American Cancer Society offers a variety of public education programs and activities for young people and for adults. Most county ACS units have public education volunteers who are trained to present programs and lead discussions on a variety of cancer prevention topics.

Public education volunteers in Minnesota can present programs on prevention or early detection of cancers of the breast, uterus, colon and lung. They also have a new general program titled "The Hopeful Side of Cancer." All of these programs include a film or slide-tape presentation, discussion and take-home pamphlets.

To get in touch with the American Cancer Society public education volunteer in your area, call your local ACS or the Cancer Information Service. The toll-free number is 1-800-4-CANCER.

Q.: I'm a nurse working in a clinic in North Dakota. Many of our patients live miles from a library, so we try to give them pamphlets to take home and read when they have questions between visits at the clinic. Where can I get a list of pamphlets on cancer?

A.: The Office of Cancer Communications at Mayo Clinic has compiled an annotated bibliography of 150 pamphlets published by the National Cancer Institute, the American Cancer Society and other agencies. The bibliography includes materials on general cancer information, examination and detection, sites and types of cancer, childhood cancer, treatment, nutrition, smoking and other topics of special interest.

You can call the Cancer Information Service toll-free 1-8;;-4-CANCER for a free copy of the bibliography. The CIS also can answer general cancer-related questions your patients may have between visits.

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS

Q — What is the difference between Veterans Administration disability compensation and disability pension?

A — VA compensation is paid to veterans with disability rated 10 per cent or more disabling, which was incurred in or aggravated during active military service. VA pension is paid to needy war veterans who are permanently and totally disabled from non-service-connected causes prior to age 65 or who have reached age 65.

Q — I bought a home recently with a GI guaranteed home loan. I have now discovered some defects which the seller refused to fix. Can the Veterans Administration help me?

A — No. The VA cannot compel a seller to remedy defects or to fulfill a contract on an existing home. However, there is a one-year guarantee on a newly-constructed home. Contact your nearest VA regional office for details.

Q — I am rated 10 per cent disabled due to service-connected disabilities. Am I eligible for preference in civil service jobs?

A — Yes. Veterans preference of 10 points is added to the passing score of veterans applying for federal government positions if the veteran has a disability rating of 10 per cent or more.

Tips Offered For Stopping On Icy Roads

Stopping on ice may take as much as nine times the normal dry pavement stopping distance, according to the Minnesota department of public safety (DPS). With that in mind, DPS says it is important for motorists to review proper winter braking and steering techniques which can effectively reduce the chances of skidding on slippery surfaces.

A motorist forced to make a quick stop on ice or snow needs to avoid slamming on or locking up the brakes, reminds DPS. The type of brakes on the vehicle affects braking techniques used. Stopping on a slippery surface with disc brakes requires a light constant "squeeze" pressure on the brake pedal until lock-up is imminent. At this point release the pressure on the brake pedal and repeat this "almost lock-up, then letup" process. With vehicles equipped with shoe and drum brakes, the well-known technique of rapidly pumping the brakes can be used. Important thing to remember is to avoid slamming down hard on the brake pedal and locking up the wheels. Drivers who are not sure whether they have disc or drum brakes can consult their owner's manual or call their dealership or mechanic.

Auto safety engineers generally agree there is only a slight difference in braking and steering techniques necessary when driving a front-wheel drive car rather than the traditional rear-wheel drive vehicle. In a typical skid the rear of the vehicle will swing out at an angle to the left or right. In a front-wheel drive vehicle there may be a slight resistance or holding back in the drive wheels affecting steering ability.

Experts agree that it is important to avoid braking if at all possible. As long as the drive wheels keep turning the vehicle will keep traction and some maneuverability. Taking your foot off the accelerator and attempting to keep the car wheels pointed in the direction you want to go is of primary importance. If it is necessary to brake in order to avoid a collision, the "squeeze" technique of braking is recommended.

Owners of cars with power brakes are advised to keep their vehicles correctly tuned to avoid inadequate engine vacuum which could adversely affect the functioning of power brake boosters. National highway traffic safety administration recently announced a safety defect in approximately one million 1980 X-body vehicles manufactured by General Motors which could cause a lack of power brake assistance.

Other suggestions for safety winter driving include:

—Get a feel for the road when you start out.

—Keep both hands on the steering wheel.

—Avoid oversteering and make turns slowly and gradually.

—Watch for scattered slippery spots and ice patches especially at freeway overpasses and bridge decks.

—Turn in the direction of the skid (or another way of looking at this is to keep your wheels pointing down the road in the direction of travel).

—If necessary to avoid a collision intentionally steer your car off the road and into a snowbank. This last prospect should be an effective reminder that safety belts are an extremely important winter driving precaution.

—Do not use speed control devices when roads are icy or slippery.

Final reminder from DPS for more trouble free winter driving is to keep plenty of fuel in the tank. In a recent storm many cars were delayed on metropolitan freeways and streets for three or four hours. Even with idling engines the fuel consumption during these extended periods is considerable and several vehicles ran out of fuel. Full tanks also help reduce water condensation problems that cause fuel line freeze up in cold weather.

GOLDEN GIFTS

Ever since the first Christmas, gold has been THE holiday gift to give and receive. This ancient tradition is as popular today as it was centuries ago because only gold combines lasting value, beauty and versatility.

If you plan to give (or get!) a gift of karat gold jewelry this holiday season, here are some shopping tips from the Gold Information Center:

- Always look for the karat mark—Every piece of karat gold jewelry should be stamped with a karat mark (such as 14K or 18K). This mark is an indication of fineness (purity) of gold and it's your assurance that you are purchasing real gold jewelry.
- What the karat mark means—Gold in its purest state is 24 karat and its natural color is yellow. However, 24K is generally considered too soft for use in jewelry. The addition of alloys to gold strengthens and hardens the precious metal for a lifetime of wear and also creates color changes—such as pink, white and even green gold. The term karat is used to show the amount of fine gold in an alloy. For example, a ring with the mark 18K means the piece is 18 parts gold and 6 parts other metals.
- Consult an expert—Your local jeweler can answer your questions, offer you a wide variety of designs and help you to care for your karat gold jewelry.

Make this year's holiday memories truly golden—give a gift of karat gold jewelry. It will be treasured for years to come.

Blue Or Yellow Flashing Light Gives Warning

For added winter driving safety, the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) reminds motorists to use extra caution when they see the flashing blue and yellow lights.

Although snowplows use both blue and yellow flashing lights to warn motorists of their presence, many drivers follow the plows too closely or pass them improperly, resulting in serious accidents and-or injuries, says Curt Christie, Mn-DOT state maintenance engineer.

During the winter of 1982-83, there were 67 incidents when motorists' vehicles collided with Mn-DOT snowplow equipment.

To reduce the possibility of accidents, Mn-DOT snowplow operators are trained to be especially watchful for traffic during poor visibility conditions. Training may include qualification for a class B driver's license, defensive driving techniques and viewing slides which show snowplow operators how their work affects motorists' vision.

To help motorists avoid possible accidents involving snowplows, Christie offers the following suggestions:

— When following a snowplow truck, stay far enough behind to minimize reduced vision from snow sprayed back by the plows and to be able to stop in case of an emergency.

— When approaching a plow on a two-lane road, allow extra room at the center line for the snowplow blade. The blade's actual width may be obscured by blowing snow.

— When passing, proceed only when you are certain that your vision ahead is clear. On two-lane highways, snowplows periodically will pull over to let traffic pass. When passing on divided highways, watch especially for snowplows operating in the lefthand lane. The plows may be moving much more slowly than traffic and may be obscured by blowing snow. "It's better to slow down for a few minutes than to have an accident," Christie advises.

— When moving past a plow at any time, you should also be alert for wing plow blades which may be in operation on either side of the snowplow.

Christie says Mn-DOT maintenance workers and supervisors are dedicated to providing the best service possible to keep Minnesota's roads open during the winter months and need cooperation from motorists to do their work as safely and as efficiently as possible.

"Mn-DOT crews are working to benefit all travelers," he adds. "Please help them by giving them extra space on the highways and using extra care when you drive."

"The Register of Reporting Labor Organizations," published by the U.S. Department of Labor in April 1981, lists more than 50,000 labor organizations that file reports with the Office of Labor-Management Standards Enforcement, a part of the department's Labor-Management Services Administration. These reports are required under the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act, also known as the Landrum-Griffin Act.

GERMAN EXCHANGE STUDENT Dirk Schultz (left) will have a more familiar holiday than most foreign students this year because his parents will be here to spend a few days with him. Dirk is living with the Dan Drevlow family while attending Lincoln high school this year. Others in the photo are Dan and Sande Drevlow (left), Helga and Gert Schultz and the Drevlow's son Guy, age eight. On the table are some of the items the Drevlows have as souvenirs from Germany.

German Family United To Spend Christmas Here

Christmas holidays away from home will be made easier for Dirk Schultz, Lincoln high school exchange student from Germany, because he will have his parents here to observe the holidays with him. All are staying at the Dan Drevlow home just south of Thief River Falls.

The Schultz family is getting a frigid introduction to a Minnesota winter, having arrived here last Sunday and being greeted by constant subzero temperatures throughout the entire week, including 30 below zero readings.

Gert Schultz has been to the United States several times before but his wife, Helga, is experiencing her first visit to the United States. From here they will go to Mexico City to visit other friends, and the transition in temperature should be readily apparent.

In addition to the United States, Gert Schultz has been in many other countries as well. For 11 years he was an engineer on super tankers, working for a division of Standard Oil company in Germany, operating the ships carrying crude oil from Venezuela. The tankers carried 100,000 tons of oil and visited ports from New York to Florida on the U.S. east coast and San Diego to Vancouver on the west coast.

Now he is a commissioning engineer for a large corporation in Germany, serving as a "trouble shooter" in the construction on power stations or cement plants in Germany and many other countries. The firm employs 850 engineers, including 10 who are involved in his type of work.

His most recent work has been in the Black Forest of Germany, working on carbon mills which involve the use of powdered coal instead of oil to generate electricity. The coal is pulverized into dust and blown into the furnaces for fuel.

Dan and Sande Drevlow met Gert and Helga Schultz in Munich last summer and spent four days with them there. The Drevlows knew the Schultz's son Dirk would be their exchange student guest in the fall, and arranged the meeting when in Germany on a company-sponsored trip. Drevlow is an agent for State Farm insurance.

While the Drevlows were in Germany, Dirk was in England for four weeks of training with the Education

Race Expected To Boost TRF

Don Grabanski, chairman for the World Series snowmobile race to be held in Thief River Falls on February 25 and 26, responded enthusiastically to the news that a $2,240 grant for promotion of the race had been approved by the Minnesota office of tourism.

"I believe this will be money well spent, since the purpose of the grant is to bring additional revenues into the community and the state," he said. "I fully expect this race to be the biggest thing that's hit Thief River Falls in years." Grabanski estimates that 5,000 spectators will be drawn into the community over the two days of the event, noting that they will be spending money on food, shelter, entertainment and other items while they are here. "It's going to take a real community effort to see that we meet the needs of these people," he said, "because we want them to have a good time so that maybe we can get this race back again."

Grabanski says that they expect about 150 entries for the race, with each of those drivers bringing two or three additional crew members and fans. "We're going to be getting the cream of the crop, as far as these drivers go, since they're going to have to accumulate enough points over a 12 to 14 race circuit to even qualify for the World Series race here."

Jerry Erickson, a member of the race committee who attended and competed in the first race in the series at Quadna Mountain, says, "This type of racing is really fantastic. Since the drivers are basically running the same type of sleds that anyone can buy, people really relate to it and get excited." He also noted that the snowcross track is set up in such a way that spectators can see nearly the entire race. "It's a lot like motorcycle motocross, with lots of jumps and turns. The action is really fast and impressive."

Grabanski, who was also at the Quadna Mountain race, said that they did some promoting of the Thief River Falls event while there, and found that people were really enthusiastic about the idea. "They're excited about the return of Arctic Cat to snowmobiling, and they're excited about coming to a race at the home of Arctic Cat."

"We've already decided that it's going to be impossible to maintain any kind of crowd control as far as trying to charge admission down on the river," he said. "So, we're not going to charge any admission."

Grabanski said that they would be "really cranking this thing up" after the holidays. "I'm going to be asking for a total commitment from the community and the merchants. If anyone thinks that their business is not going to benefit from this event, I would like to remind them that every dollar spent in this community can be expected to turn over seven to 13 times . . . and that's going to be good for the economy of this town."

TOTING A LIFELINE which makes living possible in the frigid northland, this fuel deliveryman heads from his truck to a waiting filler pipe at a Thief River Falls home. Once the pipe cap is removed and the hose nozzle inserted, he listens to determine when the tank is getting close to full. With temperatures failing to rise above the zero mark for about 10 days and overnight lows dropping to minus 30 degrees, fuel deliveries have been active and woodpiles are getting smaller.

Chamber Given $2,240 For Race Promotion Use

Thief River Falls chamber of commerce received notification this week that they have been awarded a $2,240 grant from the state of Minnesota for promotion of the World Series snowmobile race to be held here on February 25 and 26.

Announcement was made by Mark Dayton, commissioner of energy and economic development, and Hank Todd, director of tourism for the state, who explained that the award was made from funds approved by Governor Rudy Perpich and the legislature for local tourism projects. Purpose of the money is to generate more private sector involvement in tourism marketing and to stimulate expansion of projects promoting Minnesota as a travel destination. Emphasis in the program is on encouraging applicants to raise additional money locally. Minnesota office of tourism notes that a total of $147,045 was appropriated statewide, resulting in an additional $717,953 in contributions from the private sector.

"I congratulate Thief River Falls for a very exciting proposal," said Dayton. "Expanded tourism is one of Governor Perpich's top priorities, and the increased support of the legislature has made it a reality."

This program will continue to operate with an additional $153,000 available to be applied for between January 1 and February 15, according to the state tourism office. This second funding cycle will be for tourism marketing programs for summer and fall 1984. Interested parties may secure applications from the Minnesota office of tourism, 240 Bremer Building, 419 North Robert Street, St. Paul, MN. 55101; or by calling (612) 297-2333.

Dairymen Ponder Effect Of New Federal Program

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

Dairy farmers throughout the United States are in a quandary as to how to use the provisions of the new dairy program which goes into effect on January 1, 1984. Some of the options were explained at a meeting conducted Thursday afternoon in the Pennington county courthouse, and are being made known to other area dairymen at meetings in Goodridge, Newfolden and McIntosh.

Interest in the program was evidenced by attendance of approximately 80 dairymen at the meetings held for Pennington county in Goodridge and Thief River Falls — equivalent to about 90 per cent of the commercial dairymen in the county. Pennington county extension director Terry Courneya, who conducted the meetings with Phil Bergland, ASC office director, was pleased with the exceptional turnout.

While the philosophy of the 15-month program is to provide a means of compensating dairymen for reducing their herds to bring milk production more into line with consumer demand, it was evident at the meetings that individual decisions will be based on the economics of the 15-month program in the short term. If that situation holds true nationally, the dairyman's plight at the end of the 15-month program will be more dire than it is now.

During 1983 the government had to purchase 12 per cent of all U.S. milk sales and milk production per cow nationally has been increasing at an average of two per cent per year. The program beginning January 1 offers a $10 payment per hundredweight for milk not produced below a base figure established for each farm. Objective is for dairymen to reduce their herds over a 15-month period — receiving the $10 per hundredweight compensation as an incentive — so that overall production will be reduced by about 10 per cent at the end of the period.

Overall success of the program for the long-term is contingent on an effort by dairymen to continue with the lower production level. Should they elect to resume production at the same or greater level at which they enter the program in 1984, they will suffer the consequences of reduced price support for their overproduction and likely a reduced market due to oversupply.

Information presented at the meeting in Thief River Falls Thursday, however, dealt mainly with alternatives available to farmers to reduce production to take advantage of the program but return to full production at the end of the 15-month period. Lesser

USING THE COMPUTER now available at the Pennington county extension office, dairymen can get detailed information on how the new national dairy program will apply to their individual operations. Kim Swanson of the county extension staff checks the print-out of one analysis being run on the unit. Terry Courneya, Pennington county extension director, encourages dairy farmers to complete information sheets and bring them to the extension office for computer analysis. He said the computations can be done by the farmer but the computer program will save much time and provide greater accuracy.

PROS AND CONS of the 15-month dairy cut-back program continue to be a topic of discussion among dairymen as they determine how participation would be likely to affect them. Robert Kraemer (left) and Duane Vatsaas discuss their viewpoints following Thursday's information meeting attended by 45 area dairymen at the Pennington county courthouse meeting room.

Taxpayers Must File Homestead Tax Credit Form

In compliance with Minnesota statutes by which assessors will require proof for classification of homestead property, notices, of homestead declaration will be mailed within the next few days to Pennington county taxpayers.

Gerard DeHaan, Pennington county assessor, said that property owners are to complete and sign the card and return it by February 1, 1984, to obtain homestead credit on their property. If the homestead declaration is not returned, the property will be taxed at non-homestead rate and receive no homestead credit.

Amended state law states that: "The assessor shall require proof by affidavit or otherwise of the facts upon which classification as a homestead may be determined."

The law also provides: "Whoever, in making any statement, oral or written which is required or authorized by law to be made as a basis of imposing, reducing, or abating any tax or assessment, intentionally makes any statement as to any material matter which he knows is false may be sentenced, unless otherwise provided by law, to imprisonment for not more than one year or to payment of a fine of not more than $1,000, or both."

DeHaan said the new legislation is aimed at taxpayers who may fraudulently have claimed homestead credit on more than one property. He said the main problem area is the southern portion of the state where metro area houses and lake homes may both have been awarded homestead credit in violation of state law.

Although the likelihood of such duplication in this area is remote, the county will incur considerable expense in sending the notices. According to the law, a new declaration must be filed each year.

New owners of residential property are required to present a deed, or a contract for deed, to prove ownership. DeHaan said anyone who has purchased a house recently and did not receive a notice of homestead declaration should contact the assessor's office in the county courthouse.

County Board Meets Tuesday

Pennington county board of commissioners will meet Tuesday at 10 a.m. at the commissioner's room in the county courthouse in Thief River Falls. Among items of business on the agenda are highway department report and action on county employee salaries, appearance by Gordon Forester and Al Bacon and presentation of a rehabilitation grant request by Leona Humphrey.

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Charissa Ann Bjorge And Timothy J. Raiter Wed

Charissa Ann Bjorge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Bjorge, rural Thief River Falls, became the bride of Timothy James Raiter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Raiter of Solway, at 3:00 p.m., September 17, at St. Pauli Lutheran church, rural Thief River Falls.

Rev. Gary Moore officiated at the double ring ceremony. Deone Cerny was the organist playing "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" as the processional and "Wedding March" for the recessional. Craig Torkelson and Carolyn Haugen, uncle and aunt of the bride, sang "Let It be Me", "True Love", "Wedding Prayer", and "The Lord's Prayer".

Baskets of white gladioli, accented with blue carnations, graced the altar.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her father and given in marriage by her parents. She was attired in a gown of white organza and Chantilly lace, featuring an A-line skirt with a lace apron front effect which flowed into a scalloped cathedral-length train. The fitted bodice, sheer yoke and bishop sleeves were appliqued with corresponding lace with touches of seed pearls. Matching lace edged her veil of bridal illusion held by a Juliet headpiece, embroidered with seed pearls. She carried the same Bible which her mother had carried at her wedding. Topping the Bible was a cluster of silk miniature red and white roses, babies' breath and angel lace.

Melanie Raiter was the bride's personal attendant.

Maid of honor was Jacki Davidson, a friend of the bride. Other attendants were Karen Rhineberger, sister of the groom; Kim Swanson and Sheila Johnson; friends of the bride. Alicia Haugen, a cousin of the bride, was junior bridesmaid and Angela Boswell, a niece of the groom, was flower girl. The attendants wore powder blue floor-length gowns with spaghetti straps. Topping the gowns were sheer, long-sleeved jackets with ruffle trim, embroidered peplums and embroidered sheer yokes. In their hair, they wore a baby blue satin bow, with miniature blue silk flowers, satin streamers and angel lace. They carried two long stemmed baby blue silk roses with angel lace, a large white satin bow and streamers. The flower girl carried a basket filled with light and dark blue miniature carnations.

The imitation rings were carried on a satin pillow by Ryan Victora, a nephew of the groom. He wore a white tuxedo, like the groom's, and had a miniature baby blue silk rose pinned on his lapel.

Cecil Raiter, a brother of the groom, was best man. Groomsmen were David and Joe Raiter, brothers of the groom, and Steve Rhineberger, a brother-in-law. Brett Torkelson, a cousin of the bride, was junior groomsmen. Ushers were Kevin Swanson, cousin of the bride, Mike Hruby, Randy Wright, and Keith Nelson, friends of the couple. They wore light blue jackets, dark blue slacks, white shirts, dark blue bow ties, and blue boutonnieres with angel lace.

The mother of the bride wore a deep forest green crepe knit floor-length gown. It was styled with raglan sleeves and a cream-colored lace yoke with a high banded neckline, complemented by a cameo necklace. Her corsage was of two peach tinted silk roses. The groom's mother wore a dark and light blue floral street-length dress with elbow length sleeves and a gathered waistline. Her corsage was of dark and light blue roses. All corsages and boutonnieres were made by the bride and Carolyn Haugen.

Honor guests were the grandmothers: Anna Bjorge, Ellen Tarkelson and Eva Eisenmenger.

A reception in the church parlors followed with Jim and Evie Johnson, friends of the couple, as host and hostess. Centering the tables were wild flowers arranged by Mrs. Jim Nelson. Light blue and white wedding bells and streamers graced the dining area. On the serving table was a four-tiered wedding cake, baked and decorated by Mrs. Eugene Wiskow. The cake, decorated with sugar bells and blue roses, was topped with blue wedding bells backed by a lace heart. It was cut and served by Janet Davidson and Kathy Brenna, friends of the couple. DaLonna Bjorge and Pat Swenson, aunts of the bride, poured the coffee. At the punch bowl were Arlene Raiter, sister of the groom, and Lori Mostrom, a friend of the couple. Sally Torkelson, aunt of the bride, registered the guests.

Waitresses were Jen Davidson, Dana Torkelson, Susanne Johnson, Gayle Rhineberger, Kari Torkelson and Michelle Hutchinson. The rice and scrolls were distributed by Jerod and Jason Haugen, cousins of the bride.

For traveling on the wedding trip to Helena, Mont., and the Yellowstone National park the bride wore a black and turquoise pinstripe skirt and blazer with a turquoise blouse.

The couple is at home at 6730 Glencoe, apartment 303, Littleton, Colo. The bride is a 1981 graduate of Lincoln high school; and the groom is a 1978 graduate of Bemidji high school. He is employed by Ames Construction of Denver, Colo. Photo, Jim Solsten, Thief River Falls

Advise Vets To Return Questionnaire

Veterans administration (VA) is reminding pensioners who have received the agency's annual income questionnaire (AIQ) to be sure to return it immediately to avoid benefit interruption on January 1.

Form was mailed about November 1. Those who expected a questionnaire but did not receive it, should contact the nearest VA regional office. VA also has counselors standing by to provide help in completing the questionnaire. Veterans can call VA toll-free; special numbers are in local phone directories under the U.S. government listing. Also, any accredited veterans service organization or county veterans service officer can help fill out the questionnaire.

The VA urged veterans not to delay return of the AIQ if they do not know the amount of unreimbursed medical expenses paid in 1983. Questionnaire should be completed now. These expenses can be reported later if figures are not available.

For more information about the annual AIQ, veterans can contact the nearest VA regional office.

UMC Light Horse Management Instructor Hired

"Teachers are like bridges, inviting students to go beyond where they are," philosophizes Lei Ruckle, the new light horse management instructor for the agriculture division at the University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC).

Ruckle has a triple major in equestrian science, business administration and theatre arts, plus seven minors. She graduated in December of 1981 with a bachelor of arts degree from William Woods college in Fulton, MO. When she finishes her thesis, she will be the third person in the country to finish a master of arts degree in equestrian studies. Her class work for the master's degree was taken at Salem college in Salem, WV. She is also a veterinarian technician.

Born in California, Ruckle moved with her family to Arizona where she attended high school. She was named the outstanding high school graduate in Arizona, giving her a full tuition scholarship to any Arizona college.

Her first two years of college were with the accelerated program at Northern Arizona university. The next year she was manager of Rancho Manana equestrian center.

From there she went to William Woods college. Besides carrying 21 credit hours, she worked three jobs — from 5 to 9 p.m. as assistant manager of Callaway Hills breeding farm, from midnight to 8 a.m. in college security, and between classes as secretary for the sociology department.

Ruckle's interest in horses dates to a very young age.

"My first word was horse," laughed Ruckle, "and I couldn't get enough of horses."

"Some people can get on a horse for the first time and have a sensitivity with the animal. Other people make riding more difficult than it is. They work too hard physically and not hard enough mentally."

Ruckle has that natural sensitivity, but along with it she has a strong interest in teaching. According to Ruckle, one out of every four people come in contact with the horse world. Careers in the horse field are endless. At one time Ruckle and a friend listed 340 career opportunities for the horse industry.

"At UMC students haven't had a lot of exposure to the horse field, but they want to learn."

One of the major changes Ruckle will be making in UMC's light horse management program is to give the program a more professional approach.

"I want to give the students what the industry is looking for in saddle, Western and thoroughbred — not just a backyard, own-your-horse program."

Many horse programs in the United States are well established. Ruckle says UMC's light horse management program offers the challenge of a program that wants to grow progressively.

Ruckle's enthusiasm for learning is all consuming. Rather than be a jack-of-all trades and master of none, Ruckle wants to be a master-of-all trades in the horse industry. Her goal for learning is to share what she learns with others.

"When I'm 80 years old, I want to still be riding and trying to teach others," she said.

At UMC Ruckle wants to give students an option to go into any area they are interested in.

"I can never teach them everything, but I will try to teach them how to deal with problems from an analytical approach. If they can't solve a problem, I direct them to someone who can."

Providers Of Day Care Must Meet Fire Code

Day care providers will get 180 days to comply with fire code requirements that relate to additional staffing, exiting and other high cost items, according to State Fire Marshal Wes Werner.

The 180 day provision is a result of public hearings held the past few months by the legislative commission to review administrative rules. Hearings dealt with the application of the Minnesota uniform fire code, state building code and public welfare rules on family and group day care facilities. Result of the hearings was that the legislative commission issued an interim resolution requesting the state fire marshal to allow day care providers 180 days to comply on inspections made after December 12. Inspections made before December 13 will have compliance dates adjusted.

Resolution is not a moratorium and it does not prohibit the state fire marshal or local authority from continuing to inspect day care facilities. According to the resolution, no time extensions will be granted in any situation where the inspector finds imminent danger or threat to human life and safety. Task force has been formed and is meeting on a weekly basis to develop recommendations towards early resolution of the problems.

Almost one in four adult Americans has high blood pressure. This amounts to 37,330,000 people, according to an American Heart association estimate.

Mrs. Erickson stated that this is one of her family's favorite cookies and they prefer the ones made with brown sugar.

The Ericksons live on a grain and dairy farm 15 miles west of Thief River Falls on Highway 1. They have two daughters, Vicky, who is employed at Norwest bank in Thief River Falls, and Jayne, recipient of the 4-H club junior leadership award in Marshall county, and freshman at Concordia college, Moorhead.

The Ericksons are members of Zion Lutheran church, Viking, where Mrs. Erickson is active in its ladies aid and circle. She is also a member of the Town and Country garden club at Viking. With both daughters having been active in 4-H club, she has served as leader for many years.

Masons Install New Officers Monday Night

Northern Lodge 236, AF and Am held public ceremonies on Monday, December 19, for installation of new officers, with Merlin Drangstveit installed as worshipful master.

Mrs. Grant Satre performed a musical prelude on the piano prior to the entrance of installing officer Ernest Swanson, past master; installing marshall, Clarence Peterson, past master; and the elected and appointive officers. Presentation of the Bible was made by Linda Duke of Job's Daughters, and the flag was presented by the flag escort of Constantine Commandery 20.

Following the pledge of allegiance, Swanson conducted the installation ceremony. Elective officers installed were: Merlin Drangstveit, worshipful master; Jerry Olson, senior warden; Kenneth Shaw, junior warden; Arnold Narverud, treasurer; and Alan Swanson, secretary. Appointive officers include: Kenneth Wiseth, senior deacon; Eldon Hyland, junior deacon; Gary Flynn, senior steward; Rocco Wilson, junior steward; Jay Haroldson, tyler; Ernest Swanson, chaplain; and Clarence Peterson, marshall.

Prior to closing of the lodge, Drangstveit made welcoming remarks, introducing his family and thanking those in attendance. Introductions of past masters and other distinguished guests were made by Ernest Swanson.

Ceremonies were followed by socializing and lunch in the lounge for all members and guests.

January WIC, EPS Clinics Set For Area

January schedule for early and periodic screening (EPS) clinics and the women, infants and children (WIC) supplemental nutrition education program has been established for Marshall, Kittson, Pennington and Red Lake counties.

Clinics for the WIC and EPS programs will be held on January 5 at St. Johns hospital in Red Lake Falls, on January 16 at Oklee community center, and on January 20 at Redeemer Lutheran church in Thief River Falls. Immunizations will be given at all of the clinics from 9 to 9:30 a.m.

EPS screenings are for children ages six months to 13 years, and include tests of hearing, vision, hematocrit, urinalysis, physical and dental condition and developmental progress, and provide instruction in care of teeth. WIC programs provide nutrition information for women who are pregnant or have children under age five.

Appointments for both programs must be made in advance. Further information about the WIC and EPS programs may be obtained from: Four County EPS service, 206 East Colvin, Warren, MN 56762; phone 745-4044.

Treats Given At Legion Party For Children

Three-hundred bags of candy and apples were distributed by Ecklund-Holmstrom Post 117 of the American Legion at a Christmas party for children held recently at the club rooms in Thief River Falls.

Part of the distribution included bags given to residents of Hanson, Johnson, and Hillcrest homes.

German Family United Here At Christmas

Foundation of Foreign Study, his exchange student group. They did not meet until his arrival here to attend Lincoln last fall. He was a member of the football team and is now on the basketball team, much preferring the latter sport over the former.

When people of different cultures get together, talk naturally turns to how some of the differences affect everyday living. The Drevlows were somewhat taken aback by the speed of traffic on the autobahn — an expressway roughly equivalent to a U.S. freeway or interstate highway.

According to Dirk's calculations to convert kilometers per hour into miles per hour, the recommended speed on the autobahn is 81 miles per hour. But the average speed traveled is 95 miles per hour, he said, and the people are accustomed to it. Helga Schultz, for instance, plans on driving the 500 miles between her home in Hamburg and Munich in seven hours — including stops for fuel and food. Gasoline costs about $2.80 per gallon.

Young people can get a driver's license at age 18 but they must take special training which costs the equivalent of $500 to $600. Dirk will take driver's training here at Lincoln high school, qualify for an international driver's license which he can use when he gets home, and save several hundred dollars in the process.

While driving age is 18, legal drinking age for beer and wine is only 16 in Germany. Hard liquor can legally be procured at age 18. Combination of drinking and fast driving take a large accident toll each year, the Schultz family said, but few accidents happen on the autobahn. Most are on the smaller, local roads and streets.

Penalties for drinking and driving are severe, however. A first offense in which no accident is involved can result in about a $1,200 fine. If an accident is involved, the drinking driver can expect a $3,500 fine and loss of his or her driver's license for three years. If someone is killed as a result of an accident, the drinking driver faces loss of his or her driver's license for life and a lengthy jail term.

The Schultz's visit here is part of a four-week holiday which Gert is taking before moving on to his next assignment in India. He has worked previously in Iran, Cuba, Arabia, Kuwait, Italy, Greece, Peru and other countries. Both he and Helga are fluent in English and speak several other languages as well.

Dirk has spoken English well ever since he arrived in the United States, but has easily picked up Americanisms such as the popular "No Way!" He rapidly adjusted to using only English and admitted to confusion when trying to converse with his parents in German on the trip from the airport in Grand Forks to the Drevlow home at Thief River Falls.

"I have become accustomed to thinking in English," he said. "I have even started dreaming in English . . . it's really weird!"

This Christmas season will be a memorable one for the Schultz and Drevlow families. It is an opportunity to exchange customs, conversation and conversion tables, as they compare 30 degrees below zero Fahrenheit to the same bitter cold in Celsius.

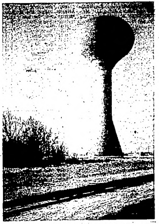
COMPUTER PRINTOUT such as the one pictured above is what area dairymen will receive if they avail themselves of the computer located in the Pennington county extension office. The computer use is being encouraged by county extension director Terry Courneya for dairymen to analyze their options under the new dairy program which becomes effective January 1. The information should help farmers determine if they should participate in the program, and if so, to what extent under the options offered.



EVEN A WATER TOWER has trouble smiling in the frosty cold of a Minnesota winter. The smiling face painted on the water tower in Thief River Falls' west side was scarcely visible through a cloud of frost crystals Friday morning as the temperature reached minus 30 degrees. The high temperature for the day was minus 21.

Dairymen Give Thought To Jan. 1 Program

emphasis was placed on the problems which dairymen will face if that production is resumed at the end of the program.

Dairymen have not had a great deal of time to consider the alternatives, although program sign-up deadline extends to January 31. Basics of the program, as outlined by ASC director Bergland at the Thursday meeting, are as follows:

(1) Producers will sign a contract in which they agree to reduce milk marketings from five to 30 per cent during the 15-month period beginning January 1, 1984. Reductions will be calculated from a base period of either 1982 or 1981 and 1982 combined — with the first quarter of each year added in twice to provide a 15-month average — whichever is higher.

(2) Producer must have been milking cows as of Nov. 29, 1983, the date the bill was signed into law.

(3) Cattle sold after Nov. 8, 1983, must be sold either for slaughter or to another dairyman who is participating in the reduction program.

(4) Milk bases can be transferred only when the entire herd and facilities are sold to a parent, child or spouse, or upon the death of the person in whose name the base was established.

(5) At the option of the producer, the reduction can be made gradually over the entire 15-month period or all in one quarter.

(6) Producer must be within three per cent of contracted reduction. If a 20 per cent reduction is contracted, 17 per cent will be the minimum allowable reduction by March 31, 1985. If reduction is in excess of 23 per cent, payment for only 23 per cent reduction will be made.

(7) Payment of $10 per hundredweight will be made by the ASCS office every three months, based on quarterly evidence of reduced production. Penalties (as yet unspecified) will be assessed for failure to comply with contracts.

Because of the three per cent variation allowed from the contracted percentage reduction, the University of Minnesota extension service notes that farmers should not sign up for less than eight per cent nor more than 27 per cent reduction. Since the minimum reduction is five per cent and the maximum 30 per cent, this will allow for the full three per cent variation on either side of the contracted reduction.

The extension service also notes that most "typical" dairy farms will find it advantageous to participate in the program, as will those expecting less production in 1984 than in 1982. But if cow numbers have been increased and 1984 production is expected to be more than 10 per cent higher than in 1982, participation is less likely to be profitable.

Variable expenses among dairy operations make it necessary for individual producers to examine their own operations. Variables include milk production per cow, price received per hundredweight of milk, value of calves produced (such as purebred animals for breeding stock), cash operating expenses and sale value of feed used. If returns per hundredweight of milk produced are below $3.50, participation will usually be profitable; if above $5.50 there will be much less incentive to participate.

For anyone who intends to get out of dairying — perhaps because of the new Minnesota milk house law or retirement — participation will be especially attractive.

Courneya has invited and encouraged dairymen to use the computer located in the county extension office. Input sheets are available for dairymen to use in providing information necessary for the computer analysis. With that information it will take only a few minutes to complete a computer printout which gives the farmer a basis for estimating advantages of participating or not participating at various levels. There is no cost for the service.

The state extension service provides information on what dairymen can do to protect their ability to return to full production, but also warns that if everyone attempts to rebuild back to current numbers at the end of the program, prices will go even lower than now.

If CCC purchases are projected at over six billion pounds in the year starting March 31, 1985, milk prices may be reduced 50 cents per hundredweight. Another 50 cents can be taken off the price on July 1, 1985, reducing the support price to $11.60, if CCC removals are projected at over five billion pounds at that time.

For farmers planning to stay out of the program and benefit from higher prices anticipated because of those who do reduce production, the price decrease option of the secretary of agriculture should be considered.

Other factors to consider in looking at the milk reduction plan and herd management practices are available on information sheets distributed at the informational meetings and at the county extension office.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

As we look into the faces of people during the Christmas shopping rush, be it on the street, in church, at work or even in the places of so-called entertainment, it is hard to find expressions of happiness, faces that one would expect to find aglow and radiant with an inner feeling of peace and contentment.

Surely the troubled times in which we live — one day the casualty list of American marines from Beirut and the next day a comparable list from El Salvador in Central America — rob men, women and children of those expressions that should be there as gifts from a loving God. Man struggles to earn a livelihood, to provide for self and loved ones. But the pressures of uncertain economic, political and social conditions seem to force people into a struggle for existence in which they find no lasting peace and happiness.

Many find it difficult to pursue, as a means of earning a living, that work for which they have or feel they have specific talents and abilities because of intangible forces over which they have no control. Unfortunately the standard of living that has been established puts greater demands on the individual or family income, thus forcing some into a need for multiple jobs and a feeling of dissatisfaction and frustration.

The political arena by virtue of manipulations, favoritism and other practices of tainted enforcement of programs and laws leaves much to be desired and a lack of confidence in the future.

It seems that those who live by the world's standards and values seem many times to be happier than those who try to walk in the ways of God, following His directions, keeping His commandments, trusting in His promises and turning away from the so-called pleasures of the world. Prov. 3:5-6. How often don't the people of the church feel as if they have been cheated by the life they try to live with its seemingly limited rewards when compared to the worldly and their way of life. The happiness of the worldly and the wicked, however, are limited to this life.

The Lord gave an example of one who thought he had security in his accumulated wealth and was going to have real happiness, he thought. ". . . The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully; and he thought within himself, saying, What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits? And he said, this will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there I will bestow my fruits and goods. . . But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee; then whose shall these things be, which thou hast provided? (Luke 12:16-20).

The American people have many things for which to be thankful this Christmas season of the year. President Reagan has managed to keep our country out of war. The situation with the Soviet Union isn't the best, but the President hasn't irritated the powers in the Kremlin. What will the next year bring? Are we living in the Last Christmas on Earth? I notice that writers never, never dare to mention this possibility. It would be a title for a powerful sermon.

Like the psalmist of old, Let us look to the Hills from whence cometh our Strength and Salvation. Where are we looking for our happiness? If it is not in Christ and His guidance and direction, we look in vain.

O.H. Halland

Minnesota Exports Hazardous Waste

How do Minnesota industries now manage their hazardous wastes, and what will they do with their wastes until new hazardous waste facilities are established as a result of the waste management board's (WMB) activities?

These two questions are often asked of the board, and it's important to look at the state's immediate hazardous waste situation, according to Patrick Hirigoyen of the WMB staff. The board anticipates that Minnesota will need new commercial hazardous waste management facilities in the future, but Minnesota must also see that there is sufficient capacity both within and outside the state for its current waste management needs.

Many of Minnesota's hazardous wastes are currently transported to treatment and disposal facilities in other states. One of these facilities — Waste Research and Reclamation, a solvent recycling operating in Eau Claire, Wisc. — is relatively close to the Twin Cities area. Others are located in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Ohio and some are as far away as Idaho, New York, Louisiana and Alabama.

It is likely that most of these out-of-state facilities will continue to be able to accept wastes from Minnesota — at least over the next few years.

"Minnesota must start planning now, however, for the establishment of new hazardous waste management facilities in this state, Hirigoyen said. "While most of Minnesota's hazardous wastes are currently handled by facilites in other states, we cannot depend on out-of-state facilities indefinitely."

Illinois, for example, which currently accepts a significant portion of Minnesota's waste, will in 1987 begin to severely restrict the land disposal of hazardous wastes in order to promote treatment and recycling. Most likely, hazardous waste generators in Illinois will then need additional treatment facilities within their state, and that would limit the capacity available for Minnesota's wastes.

There are currently no major commercial hazardous waste management facilities in Minnesota. More than 20 firms in the state do manage their hazardous wastes at permitted, non-commercial facilities which they operate on their own property. There is also a large, but aging, waste oil re-refinery in the Minneapolis area, and the 3M company operates a non-commercial hazardous waste incinerator in Cottage Grove, to burn wastes from 3M plants around the nation.

While many of the non-commercial facilities in the state are small, there are a few that may have sufficient capacity to be operated on a commercial basis. In addition, many firms in the state that do not currently treat hazardous wastes have industrial facilities that could be converted to properly manage such wastes. For example, some warehouses that are currently used to store hazardous materials could easily be modified to serve as temporary storage and transfer stations for hazardous wastes, and some existing utility boilers could be modified to incinerate hazardous wastes.

Because the technology and facilities for proper management of some of Minnesota's hazardous wastes already exist in the state, these facilities could be converted to handle hazardous wastes both in the near-future as well as for the long-term.

The board intends to encourage the use of existing facilities in Minnesota for commercial hazardous waste management, and is willing to work with companies that are interested in doing so. The board is considering in its hazardous waste management plan providing funds to help companies study the feasibility of modifying their plants to commercially manage hazardous wastes.

"By encouraging the conversion of existing facilities within Minnesota to commercially treat hazardous wastes — and by continuing to promote the establishment of new hazardous waste facilities — the board can help ensure that our state's industries have access to sufficient and properly operated hazardous waste facilities. Moreover, we can reduce our dependence on distant facilities in other states," Hirigoyen said.

Persons interested in obtaining further information about the waste management board's hazardous waste management activities may contact the board offices by writing to 7323 58th Avenue North, Crystal, MN 55428, or call (toll-free) 1-800-652-9747.

Prairie Public TV Membership Drive Hits Goal

There were 2,266 callers who phoned in pledges totalling $155,495 during Prairie Public Television's 11-day membership drive, December 2, 12, it was announced recently by PPTV officials. Challenge grants totalling $1,200 from W.W. Wallwork, Inc., the Coca-Cola Bottling Company of Dickinson and an anonymous business donor from Grand Forks pushed the total to $156,695, enabling Prairie Public Television to surpass the $156,000 goal by $695.

Viewers in North and South Dakota, Minnesota, Montana, Manitoba and Saskatchewan support Prairie Public Television's six-station non-commercial network with membership donations. PPTV's average pledge during the December membership drive was $68.36, fourth in the nation. Only New Orleans, LA, Syracuse NY and the North Carolina network bettered Prairie Public TV's average. There were 103 public television operations across the nation who conducted similar fund drives.

Prairie Public Television General Manager Dennis Falk noted that the figures show strong support for public television in the area. "Our dollars were up by nine per cent over last December, while our pledge minutes decreased by four per cent," noted Falk. Dollars pledged per minute increased to $154.11 from $135.36.

Membership drive, kicking off Prairie Public Television's 20th year of operation, was the first fund drive that included all six public TV stations in the state. During the March 1983 membership drive, an ice storm toppled the KSRE (6) tower in Minot. Service was restored to Minot area viewers when the broadcast tower was rebuilt in late November. The KWSE (4) tower was completed in Williston in April. Prairie Public Television also operates KFME (13) Fargo, KGFE (2) Grand Forks, KBME (3) Bismarck and KDSE (9) Dickinson.

Prairie Public Television conducts on-air membership drives three times a year — in March, August, and December.

Project Review Committee Has Vacancy

Minnesota secretary of state's office is now accepting applications for appointment to a vacancy on the Marshall county local project review committee, which was appointed in March by Governor Rudy Perpich to help the Minnesota waste management board evaluate the "candidate" hazardous waste disposal site in East Park township.

Any residents of northwestern Minnesota interested in serving on the committee are eligible to apply. Applications will be accepted at the secretary of state's office through January 3 and the governor is expected to make the appointment by the end of January.

The opening on the nine-member committee occurred upon the resignation of one of the committee members.

The committee meets twice a month in the evening in Newfolden. Its future activities will include reviewing and commenting on the waste management board's draft hazardous waste management plan, the development of methods to mitigate and compensate for impacts resulting from the siting of a disposal facility, and assisting the board in evaluating the Marshall county candidate site.

The Marshall county committee is one of eight local review committees required by state law and appointed by the governor this year to represent potential hazardous waste disposal sites designated by the waste management board.

Application forms can be obtained from the Marshall county auditor in Warren or the Secretary of State's Office, Room 180, State Office Building, 435 Park St., St. Paul, MN 55155; (1-800)652-9747).

For further information regarding the duties of the local project review committee, contact the waste management board at 7323 58th Ave. No., Crystal, MN 55428.

The Christmas Story

Although today's issue of the Times is dated for December 26, the day after Christmas, it is being published and distributed on Saturday, Christmas Eve. For that reason we are publishing in this issue our traditional editorial recounting the Christmas story as recorded in the second chapter of Luke, verses 1-20. This year's story is from the Revised Berkeley version as used in the New Testament distributed by Gideons International:

In those days an order went out from Caesar Augustus that a census should be taken of the whole world. This registration first occurred while Quirinius was governor Syria.

They all went to be registered, each to his own city, and Joseph, too, went up from Galilee out of the city of Nazareth to Judea, to the city of David called Bethlehem, because he was of the house and family of David, to be registered with Mary, his betrothed wife, whose pregnancy was advanced.

While they were there her days were completed to give birth, and she bore her first-born Son, whom she wrapped in swaddling clothes and laid in a manger, because there was no room for them in the inn.

There were in the same country shepherds, staying in the fields and keeping watch over their flock by night. And an angel of the Lord stood by them and the glory of the Lord shone around them, and they feared greatly.

And the angel said to them, "Have no fear, for behold I announce to you good news of great joy that will be for all the people; for today there was born for you in the city of David a Saviour, who is Christ the Lord. And this is a token for you; you will find the baby wrapped in swaddling clothes and lying in a manger."

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God and saying, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men in His favour!"

As the angels went from them into heaven, the shepherds said to one another, "Let us go straight to Bethlehem, and let us see what has happened that the Lord has made known to us."

And hastily then went, found both Mary and Joseph, and saw the baby lying in the manger. When they had seen the child they made known to others what had been told them regarding it, and everyone who heard it marvelled at the things that were reported to them by the shepherds. But Mary treasured those reports and thought them over in her heart.

And the shepherds went back, glorifying God for everything they had heard and seen, just as it had been told them.

Conservative Or Liberal

Labels of Democrat and Republican sometimes seem to mean little when political philosophy or action are concerned. Terms Liberal or Conservative seem more appropriate and provide a clearer choice for those who would like to know how their viewpoints match their political party.

Publisher Bill Adams of the Roseau Times-Region described the difference between conservatives and liberals in his "Cornerpost" column back in October of 1978. It is interesting to see how his comparison sounds in the light of today's political situation. Here is what he wrote:

So. . . what are you? If you believe government is taking too much money away from you in taxes, you're conservative. If you think government is spending tax money wastefully and without good financial reason, you're conservative. If you generally think government needs all the taxes it gets, you're liberal. If you think most government spending is reasonable and for good cause, you're liberal. There are degrees of both, of course.

If you think government bureaucracy is too powerful, too complex, has too little responsibility to the taxpayer and sticks its nose into your life too much, you're conservative. If you think bureaucracy is the way to achieve justifiable social ends, you're liberal.

If you think welfare should go only to those who cannot help themselves and those who need a boost, and you'd have those who can work, work for what welfare they get, you're conservative. If you think that welfare is a right and that it's unfair to people on welfare to have to meet work requirements (if work is available), your liberal.

If you think government spending is a major cause of inflation, you're conservative. If you think inflation is caused by greedy people seeking too much profit, you're liberal.

If you think government should have the right to tell you where your kids are going to go to school in order to achieve racial balance, you're liberal. If you think your kids should have the right to go to schools in their own neighborhoods, you're conservative. We believe both liberals and conservatives can agree that equal education opportunities are important.

If you believe the free enterprise system is the best incentive for continued progress, you're conservative. If you feel the government must control markets and competition and that the most successful must be restricted in order to help the less successful, you're liberal.

If you feel that the United States should remain first in military strength and has a leadership responsibility to the rest of the free world, you are conservative. If you feel we should be equal in military strength to our opponents and being stronger is a threat to world peace, you are liberal.

If you think state or federal government has the right to control an individual citizen's personal property (including firearms), you are liberal. If you think personal property is the basic measure of freedom and is an inviolable citizen right, you are conservative.

If you think the government has a right to compete with private enterprise in business or other enterprise fields, you are liberal. If you do not, you are conservative.

If you think government does not have a right to take your money and hold it without paying you interest, you are conservative. If you think it should be able to take your money (such as when you pay too much taxes and the government owes you money) and doesn't have to pay interest, you are liberal.

If you think government should not spend more than it takes in, you are conservative. If you think it is alright for government to continue operating in the red, you are liberal.

There are varying degrees of being liberal or conservative but the terms are more appropriate than party labels. We think the parties should be viewed in the light of being conservative or liberal. It presents a clearer choice.

If God Went On Strike

Writer of the following poem was not identified when it was submitted to us so we are unable to give proper credit:

It's a good thing that God above
Has never gone on strike
Because He wasn't treated fair
Or things He didn't like.

If He had ever once sat down
And said, "That's it—I'm through;
I've had enough of those on earth
So this is what I'll do:

I'll give my orders to the sun,
'Cut off your heat supply'
And to the moon, 'Give no more light
And run the oceans dry'.

"Then, just to make it really tough
And put the pressure on,
Turn off the air and oxygen
'Til every breath is gone."

Do you know He'd be justified
If fairness was the game,
For no one has been more abused
Or treated with disdain

Than God. And yet He carries on,
Supplying you and me
With all the favors of His grace
And everything for free.

Men say they want a better deal
And out on strike they go,
But what a deal we've given God
To Whom we all things owe.

We don't care who we bring to harm
To gain the things we like,
But what a mess we'd all be in
If God should go on strike!

Borrowed Nonsense:

"Excuse me," the dapper gentleman said to the attractive lady at a senior dance, "but you look like my third wife."

"Is that so?" she replied. "And how many times have you been married?"

"Twice," he smiled with a twinkle in his eye.

The youngster portraying an angel in the Christmas play had only one line to say: "I bring you good tidings." He asked his mother what tidings were, and she said the word meant news. The night of the performance the youngster was stage struck. After a long and wild-eyes silence he blurted out, "Hey, have I got news for you!"

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

There were no uncorked bottles of champagne or party hats, but Uncle Sam rang in the New Year a little early. For official Washington, October 1 was the first day of the 1984 fiscal year.

And what a year it will be! The Congressional budget office projects that Washington will spend more than $859 billion in 1984. That works out to over $2.3 billion each and every day, holidays and weekends included, or $98 million per hour; $1,634,323 per minute; $27,239 per second.

That's right. Every single second of the day the federal government will spend more than $27,000 — twice the take-home pay for the average American worker. This is heavy stuff. We are not dealing here with Monopoly money in some board game. This is real cash, taken out of the paychecks of working men and women with mortgages to pay, heating bills and the daily necessity of putting food on the table.

Who are these politicians cloistered in the marble halls of Congress, these senators and representatives, who can so cavalierly spend $2.3 billion of the taxpayers money in a single day? How can they be so divorced from reality? Don't they have any sense as to what life is all about in the real world where $100 is a lot of money? Do they have any idea what it means for a small businessman to try and make this week's payroll or for a young couple trying to save for a down payment on their first home and at the same time make the weekly budget balance?

Why, the way our Washington politicians toss around cash you would think they are all millionaries.

We may be on to something here. Many members of Congress are millionaires. Some have inherited fortunes from their families. Others have worked long and hard in the private sector building up their wealth before assuming public office. There is, however, a third group of millionaires in Congress.

Well, come, come, you say. What is this third route to riches? If they didn't inherit the money or earn it, how did they get it? Let's get a patient on this and make everyone rich.

Sorry to relate, but you and I cannot get in on this. Here Congress has voted itself rich with an overly generous pension plan for retired politicos.

The National Taxpayers Union, one of those rate organizations in Washington that lobbies for, rather than against, the taxpayer, recently released a study that shows how 36 members of Congress are now eligible for pension benefits in excess of $1 million. Another 33 members stand to collect over $750,000 each.

Thus even after the voters separate senators and representatives from their $69,800 salaries, these politicians are eligible for incredible pensions — calculated by multiplying the number of years of service, including time in the military and other federal jobs, times 2.5 per cent of the average of the three highest years' salaries. The pension is also indexed to increase with inflation. (These guys didn't miss a trick.)

These pension plans are clearly excessive and are an affront to working men and women in the private sector who could never afford such generous pensions. But more worrisome is the effect they have of divorcing our nation's leaders from the economic consequences of their actions.

It becomes all too easy to raise taxes on the average American when politicians can walk away from Congress with such benefits. And inflation becomes less threatening when congressmen know that their pension is indexed to rise with inflation.

Congress should be ashamed of itself for lavishing such pensions on its members. They should bring their pension program back in line with private pension programs and, while they are at it, do the same for the pension system for federal employees which is also indexed to inflation.

There is perhaps one advantage to Congress' self-directed largesse. If they continue to tax and spend without restraint, the voters can rest assured that these congressmen will be well taken care of when they are retired on election day November 6, 1984.

Basketball Tournament Interest

Basketball interest should pick up this week as eight northwestern Minnesota teams compete in the first Thief River Falls Northwest Christmas Classic Tuesday, Thursday and Friday in the Lincoln high school gym.

Four games will be played each day, providing plenty of holiday entertainment. Coaches of participating teams from Middle River, Marshall County Central and Argyle are enthused about the opportunity to play in an eight-team tournament, okayed for the first time this year by the Minnesota State High School League.

"We're looking forward to it," offered Argyle coach Warren Keller. "We hope it attracts basketball fans from a 40-to-50 mile radius. It picks up the interest in a dead time of the year for basketball."

"It's going to be fun," said Marshall County Central coach Ron Ueland. "There are some good teams in it."

"The kids are looking forward to it," mentioned Middle River coach Eldon Sparby. "It should be a good tournament."

An eight-team format offers teams a real tournament atmosphere. It's a chance to get in a lot of basketball in a short period of time, giving the players a feel of post-season competition early in the year. There are team and individual awards as incentive, creating additional interest.

Goodridge held a similar eight-team, three-day tournament last week and it was well-received, reported Huskies' head coach Dan Brinkman. Goodridge ran a four-team tournament in the past before the MSHSL gave its approval to the expanded field.

"An eight-team tournament is so much better," noted Brinkman. "The kids really get into it. They want to get into that championship game. I thought it was a good tournament."

Plummer coach Jim Baron and Grygla coach Vern Johnson thought so too. Neither program has enjoyed a great deal of success in recent years, but the Cardinals and Eagles took advantage of the tournament opportunity to win trophies as Plummer edged Goodridge 57-55 for the title and Grygla beat Strandquist 49-39 for third place.

"I think it's great," said Baron of the tournament experience. "It gives us some intensified competition, and playing three games in four days is a good way to really get into the basketball season after playing just once a week."

"I thought it was fantastic," Johnson said afterwards. "The kids really liked it. It really picked up the basketball interest here."

Miscellaneous

+ Crookston and Moorhead continue to make news in Section 8 high school hockey. The Pirates remain unbeaten after two big 4-2 wins over Fergus Falls and Grand Forks Central, two very highly-regarded teams. Moorhead, too, is undefeated after knocking off Bemidji and Fergus Falls in back-to-back starts. Thief River Falls lost to those teams, falling to Grand Forks Central 9-4, Fergus Falls 3-2 and Bemidji 2-1. Crookston's varsity athletic teams — boys and girls basketball, wrestling and hockey — started the year with a combined 16-0 record, with the Pirates going 26-2 overall, including junior varsity contests.

+ In a match-up of top-rated North Sub-Region 8AA contenders, Fergus Falls built up a 16-point lead then held on for a recent 54-53 high school basketball win over Bemidji. The Otters have four starters back from last year's team. Bemidji, 3-1 for the year, will host a Dec. 29-30 holiday tournament that features East Grand Forks vs. Grand Rapids and Bemidji vs. Park Rapids in the opening round semifinals.

Prowlers Win MCC Basketball Tournament

Thief River Falls defeated host Marshall County Central 56-38 Friday in the championship game of the Nordics' four-team girls high school holiday basketball invitational tournament in Newfolden.

Grygla beat Strandquist 36-31 in the third place game.

In Thursday's first round semifinals, Marshall County Central handled Grygla 44-24 and Thief River Falls knocked off Strandquist 51-23.

MCC ....44 Grygla 24

A Grygla team that has been struggling offensively and a Marshall County Central team that has been strong defensively met in the tournament opener Thursday, and the net result was a 44-25 victory for the host Nordics.

Marshall County Central owned only a 14-11 first quarter lead, but stretched that to 24-15 at halftime and made it 31-19 in the third quarter.

Nancy Nelson scored 15 points for the winners, and Jodi Foss added 12. Kathy Foss had game-high scoring honors for Grygla with 16 points, netting six of the Eagles' nine field goals.

Marshall County Central shot 37 per cent from the field (17-for-46) and 58 per cent at the free throw line (10-for-17). Grygla shot 25 per cent from the field (9-for-36) and 33 per cent from the line (6-for-18). The Nordics had a 26-25 rebound edge.

TRF ....51 Strandquist 23

Strong defensive effort helped compensate for a poor shooting night as Thief River Falls handled Strandquist in the semifinal doubleheader nightcap.

Thief River Falls had quarter leads of 16-4, 31-10 and 43-14.

Michelle Puetz led the Prowlers with 17 points on a 6-for-10 night from the field and a 5-for-8 game from the free throw line. Michelle Olson added 10 points to the Prowlers' total. No Strandquist scorer hit double figures.

Thief River Falls shot only 26 per cent from the field (18-for-69) and just 45 per cent at the free throw line (15-for-33). Strandquist finished with just seven field goals, shooting 14 per cent from the field (7-for-51) while shooting 69 per cent from the free throw line (9-for-13).

"I was a little disappointed in the way we shot," admitted Thief River Falls coach Tom Schafer, "but we played good defense."

Thief River Falls had a 57-22 rebound edge as Olson and Connie Grovum each grabbed 12 rebounds. The Prowlers topped the turnover charts 19-15.

Grygla built a 26-8 halftime lead and held on for a 36-31 victory over Strandquist in the tournament's third place game Friday night.

Debbie Klein of Grygla and Nancy Boen of Strandquist, both with 10 points, were the game's only double figure scorers.

Grygla had a 7-5 first quarter lead, then opened up that 18-point halftime cushion. It was a still-comfortable 31-16 lead for the Eagles through three quarters, but the winners netted just 10 second half points.

"First half we looked good," mentioned Grygla coach Mike Gast, "but I was not happy with the second half."

Grygla shot just 19 per cent from the field (13-for-68) and only 35 per cent from the free throw line (10-for-28). Strandquist shot 24 per cent from the field (12-for-50) and 31 per cent at the line (7-for-22).

A four-game losing streak came to an end for the Eagles with the win. Grygla, 2-5, will return to action Tues., Jan. 3, with a game against Tri-County at Karlstad.

TRF ....56 MCC 38

Michelle Olson scored 34 points and grabbed 10 rebounds Friday to lead Thief River Falls past Marshall County Central 56-38 in the tournament finals.

Olson's point total included a highly-productive 18-for-22 night at the free throw line for the 5-8 junior.

"They played man-to-man defense on us," explained Thief River Falls coach Tom Schafer. "We just cleaned out the side and told Michelle to drive, and they kept fouling her." It was a surprisingly easy victory for the Prowlers in light of their down-to-the-wire 39-38 home court win over the Nordics in the 1983-84 season opener back on Nov. 29.

"We got off to a real slow start," pointed out Schafer. "We had a really bad first quarter, but we started moving in the second quarter, and we played real agressive defense in the second half."

Marshall County Central owned a 15-11 first quarter lead, but Thief River Falls went ahead 36-26 at halftime and maintained a 42-32 third quarter spread. The Prowlers then fattened the margin in the final eight minutes with 9-for-10 free throw shooting by Olson.

Thief River Falls' defense shut down Marshall County Central scorers Jodi Foss and Shelly Anderson. Nancy Nelson, a 5-8 senior, scored 19 for the Nordics, but she was their only double figure producer.

Thief River Falls' shooting still wasn't sharp, acknowledged Schafer, as the Prowlers went 17-for-60 from the field (28 per cent). They were 22-for-38 from the line (58 per cent), with Olson getting the bulk of those. Marshall County Central shot 29 per cent from the field (15-for-51) and only 35 per cent from the free throw line (8-for-23). The Prowlers' charts showed them with a 40-30 rebound edge and an 18-17 figure in the turnover department.

Both teams will now be idle until Tues., Jan. 3, when the 5-2 Prowlers visit Moorhead and the 4-2 Nordics travel to Badger.

The stamp is required of persons ages 18-64, inclusive, who hunt pheasants in Minnesota, in addition to a small game hunting license. The winning design was chosen Tues., Dec. 21, by a panel of judges from among 92 entries. Second place award went to Theresa Marschel of Owatonna and the third place selection was by Gary Moss of Cambridge. Fernandez, who came to the United States from Cuba in 1965, has been painting commercially for three years.

Basketball Tournament Starts Tuesday At LHS

First Thief River Falls Northwest Christmas Classic, an eight-team high school basketball invitational tournament, begins a three-day run Tuesday in the Lincoln gym featuring teams from Argyle, Kennedy, Mahnomen, Middle River, Fertile-Beltrami, Roseau, Thief River Falls and Marshall County Central.

Tournament format calls for 12 games to be played — an afternoon session starting at 1 p.m. and an evening session beginning at 7 p.m. — on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday.

First round quarterfinals Tuesday will find Middle River playing Argyle at 1 p.m.; Marshall County Central meeting Roseau at 3; Fertile-Beltrami matched against Mahnomen at 7; and Kennedy pitted against Thief River Falls at 9.

Those first round losers will meet in the Thursday afternoon consolation round, while the first round winners advance into Thursday night's semifinals.

Friday's schedule includes the seventh place game at 1 p.m.; consolation finals at 3; third place game at 7; and tournament championship game at 9.

Awards ceremony at the conclusion of the championship game will include the presentation of a school sportsmanship award; trophies to the champion, runner-up, third place and consolation champion teams; individual medals to each member of the championship team; and medals for a five-member all-tournament squad.

Argyle is mentioned as the pre-tournament favorite. Just last Tuesday the Eagles made themselves right at home in the Lincoln gym with a 66-48 victory over Thief River Falls.

"From my standpoint; from what I've seen, I would say that Argyle has to be the favorite," said Thief River Falls coach Tom Hunt, "but I think they're all going to be pretty good basketball games."

Maybe the most interesting first round game will be the 3 p.m. Marshall County Central vs. Roseau match-up. The game doubles as a North Border Conference-counting assignment for the Nordics and Rams, adding more importance to the game. Roseau was made a preseason North Border Conference favorite this winter. The Rams were surprised by a youthful Middle River squad 44-37 in their season opener, but they bounced back to beat Thief River Falls 52-44 in their second start. A young Marshall County Central squad with plenty of promise has taken things easy to date with just two games, but the Nordics are coming off an impressive win over a strong Stephen team, 69-61.

In the upper bracket, Fertile-Beltrami might make waves after coming within a single point, 62-61, of upsetting highly regarded Crookston recently. The Falcons' match-up with Mahnomen also doubles as a Pine-to-Prairie Conference assignment.

Host Thief River Falls is the only Class A school in the line-up, but the Prowlers are still winless in four starts, including those losses to tournament entries Roseau and Argyle. In Kennedy's Tommy John Deere the Prowlers will be facing one of the tournament's top individuals.

Admission price per session will be $2 for adults; $1.50 for college and AVTI students; $1 for students in grades 6-12; and 50-cents for students in grades K-5.

Out-Score Strandquist . . .

Skippers Win 78-71 Contest

Middle River got involved in an offensive shoot-out with Strandquist Thursday and came out a 78-71 winner in the high school basketball game played on the Skippers' court.

Winning coach Eldon Sparby wasn't terribly impressed with the Skippers' performance, however. "We played a good first quarter," he reported. "Our defense was sharp, and we took good shots. But after that, we seemed to play just well enough to stay ahead. It was the worst defense I've seen us play in I don't know how many years."

Middle River opened with a 22-10 first quarter lead and took a 43-30 cushion into halftime but Strandquist stayed within 62-51 in the third quarter and made it interesting down the stretch.

Kevin McKeever and Tom Neumann had 18 points apiece for the Skippers, with Sheldon Peterson getting 16 and Brian Cwikla 11. Mark Chwialkowski and Dave Moyer scored 23 and 22 points, respectively, for Strandquist.

Middle River shot 49 per cent from the field (32-for-65) and 61 per cent at the free throw line (14-for-23). Strandquist shot 55 per cent from the field (31-for-56) and 69 per cent at the line (9-for-13). Middle River owned a 36-17 rebound advantage, with Neumann grabbing seven to lead the way.

Now 2-1, Middle River will face Argyle Tuesday at 1 p.m. to open up the Thief River Falls Northwest Christmas Classic invitational tournament.

Hockey Team Plays Tuesday At Roseau

Lincoln high school hockey team, a 7-2 winner over Fargo South in its last start over a week ago to snap a three-game season-opening losing streak, will be tested Tuesday when the Prowlers travel to Roseau for a 7:30 p.m. Section 8 game.

Two days later Thief River Falls will be in Grand Forks for a 7:30 p.m. game against Red River.

Roseau is 4-0 for the year, beating Lake of the Woods 6-1, Hallock 3-2, Bemidji 7-3 and Detroit Lakes 6-3 last Tuesday when the Rams overcame a 3-0 second period deficit.

After a scoreless first period at Detroit Lakes, the Lakers put three quick scores on the board early in the second period and appeared ready for a big upset. Wayne Crawford scored on a tip-in just 28 seconds into the period, then in just over a minute, Mike Stoman and Eric Bergren scored for a stunning 3-0 lead at 4:38.

Roseau's Randy Geringer scored at 6:46 and the Rams cut the gap to 3-2 when Bruce Helgeson scored with just 28 seconds left in the second period.

It was all Roseau in the third period as Geringer tied it at 4:38 and Sean Bucy scored on a power play to give the Rams the lead at 6:18. Kirby Espe, Steve Dorwart, Bucy and Helgeson padded the lead, with three of those goals coming in a two-minute stretch late in the game.

Tuesday will mark the first meeting between Thief River Falls and Roseau since the Rams edged the Prowlers 1-0 in the 1983 Section 8 tournament championship game at East Grand Forks last March.

In addition to the varsity and junior varsity high school games this week (Lincoln JV, 2-2, will play at 5:30 p.m. both nights), there is a heavy load of Thief River Falls Amateur Hockey Association (TRFAHA) games on tap.

A PAINTING OF three wood ducks in the water was chosen as the design for the 1984 Minnesota migratory waterfowl stamp, it was announced recently by the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR). A penal of judges picked the design from among 173 entries in this year's art competition. Winning artist is Thomas Gross of St. Paul, who is employed by the Ramsey county welfare department and paints as a hobby. The stamp is required of persons ages 18-64 inclusive who hunt migratory waterfowl in Minnesota.

DNR NEWS

TIP Arrests

Minnesota conservation officers made 49 arrests in November with information provided from phone calls on the Turn In Poachers (TIP) hot line.

Of the total number of arrests, 31 were for violations of state deer hunting regulations, the Department of Natural Resources reported.

Ten arrests were made for waterfowl hunting infractions with trapping, bear hunting, moose and small game violations accounting for the balance.

TIP program paid $3,250 in rewards during the month to persons who offered information on which arrests were made.

Thirty-five of the 49 arrests made with TIP information during November occurred in northwestern and north-central Minnesota.

Enforcement officials said that although the number of phone calls received on the TIP line last month was down from the previous November, the number of arrests rose.

A special toll-free phone number for those who wish to give information to the DNR on violators of the game and fish laws is 1-800-652-9093.

TIP program protects the identity of persons who provide information, and offers cash rewards for information if an arrest is made.

Aeration Systems

Number of aeration systems being installed in Minnesota lakes is increasing rapidly, the Department of Natural Resources reports.

Systems are used to maintain oxygen levels in order to prevent a die off of fish during the winter months.

To date, 64 permits have been issued to counties, municipalities and sportsmen's groups to operate systems, but DNR officials said other permits are pending and it is expected that about 80 of them will be in operation before the winter is over.

Aeration systems create an area of open water and thin ice which can pose risks for ice fishermen, snowmobilers and others using the frozen surface of the lake.

For that reason the DNR requires the party receiving the permit to publish notices in local papers prior to start up of the system, to post warning signs on all public access sites on the lake and to post the boundaries of the danger area.

This year the DNR has a number of metal signs to loan to permit holders to help insure that the posting requirements are complied with. The DNR has also assigned an inspector to check the aeration sites to make sure they are properly posted and that other permit requirements are met.

Signs are diamond shaped with an orange border on a white background with the warning "Thin Ice" or "Open Water."

Following is a listing of lake aeration site permits in effect as of Dec. 1:

Anoka county — Moore Lake, Laddie; Blue Earth county — Crystal, Loon, Lura; Brown county — Sleepy Eye; Carver county — Eagle; Cass county — Loon; Clearwater county — Pine; Cottonwood county — Cottonwood; Dakota county — Rebecca; Freeborn county — Fountain; Hennepin county — Wirth, Crystal, Hyland, Indianhead, Lower Penn, Rebecca, Parklawn, Twin, Round, Edina swimming pool pond, Bass, Holy Name, Lost; Isanti county — Little Blue; Jackson county — Loon, Clear, Round; Kandiyohi county — Tadd, Long, Foot, Monongalia; LeSueur county — Clear, Greenleaf, Gorman; Lincoln county — Benton, Dead Coon, Hendricks, Shaokatan;

Review Conservation Meet

Area conservation supervisors and staff were on hand to hear the major issues of cooperation and education that were discussed at the 47th annual convention of the Minnesota association of soil and water conservation districts. Nearly 600 were in attendance at the three-day meeting at Bemidji December 4-6.

Those in attendance from the Marshall-Beltrami soil and water conservation district were supervisors Grant Satre and his wife Marianne, Lloyd Wiseth and his wife Elaine, Oliver Howland and his wife Serine, Peter Aune and Lyndon Magnuson; district employees Lawrence Neuschwander and Cheryl Sistad; and S.C.S. soil conservation technician Ralph Rundell.

In attendance at the Tuesday conservation farmers luncheon were Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Engelstad who received their "Conservation Farmer" certificate from Bob Rupp, Editor of the "Farmer" magazine. Among the other distinguished service awards given by the magazine, the Marshall-Beltrami soil and water conservation district received an excellent rating for the second year in a row. The plate they received will be added to the plaque they received last year.

Local supervisors also received service award pins that were given by Area I of the Minnesota association. Oliver Howland and Lyndon Magnuson received 30-year pins and Grant Satre and Peter Aune received 20-year pins.

The convention began on Sunday evening with a program including the reading of winning conservation essays and announcement of conservation post contest winners who included Judy Smeby of Grygla. An auction of donated items followed with Hal Anderson, board representative of the state soil and water conservation board and State Senator LeRoy Stumpf as auctioneers. Over $1,300 was raised for conservation education.

Highlight of the Monday morning session was a panel discussion "Looking at Future Issues on Conservation". Mandatory soil conservation was discussed with convention delegates being divided in their support or opposition. Milton "Bud" Mekelburg, president of the national association of soil and water conservation districts, spoke in support of the concept of "cross compliance". Under this approach, farm operators would have to follow one approved soil conservation plan in order to be eligible for benefits under any of the other federal farm programs.

Duane Johnson, deputy state conservationist for the U.S.D.A. soil conservation service, emphasized intergovernmental cooperation as he told about the new computer system that is being implemented in the state.

Wayne Haglin, chairman of the state soil and water conservation board, emphasized the importance of education. He told convention delegates about a legislative study group that has been formed in the state. The group has representation from governmental agencies, farm organizations, religious groups and a college research group. The study group has selected conservation education as its top priority for legislative action.

The conservation awards luncheon on Monday recognized the distinguished supervisor award winner, soil conservationist award winners, outstanding district employee award winner and legislative award winners who were Senator C.R. "Chuck" Davis and Representative Wallace Sparby.

Monday luncheon speaker was Jim Nichols, Commissioner of the Minnesota department of agriculture, who also stressed the importance of education in his address. He pointed out that these are "tough times" for farmers. Farm debt has increased 1000 per cent over the last 10 years. Informed public is necessary, says, Nichols, if we are to solve the problems of soil erosion and of agriculture in general. Nichols also stressed the importance of any mandatory erosion control programs to be administered at the local level.

Afternoon mini-sessions included the topics of "Developing District Programs", "Local District Budgets" and Soil Loss Limits: The Nobels County Experience". In the discussion on budgets for soil and water conservation districts, Representative Merlyn Valan spoke of the need for stronger support for conservation districts from both counties and the state. Harlan Hoff, a commissioner from Norman county, stated that local conservation districts should have the authority to levy taxes to provide reliable financial support for conservation programs in every county.

During the convention business sessions delegates acted on 23 resolutions including one to reforest marginal cropland that is subject to serious erosion. Delegates voted to support formation of a legislative commission on ag land preservation and conservation. William Bryson of Alden was reelected president of the association and his wife Arlene was reelected president of the association auxiliary.

Tuesday afternoon mini-sessions were on "Experiences in Conservation Tillage", "Using the Soil Survey" and the "Use of Biomass."

Some birds, that migrate thousands of miles each year, have an incredible capacity to hear low sounds undetectable by human ears, says National Wildlife's Ranger Rick magazine. For example, a bird may be directed toward its destination by the sound of an ocean's low rumble of surf 100 miles away.

Arntson Family Visits Finn Exchange Student

Ten years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Arntson from Plummer hosted a Youth for Understanding Student from Finland. The Wednesday, Dec. 20, 1972 issue of the Times ran a feature story entitled, "Finland Student Observes Christmas."

Irene Usvasalo was the first exchange student in the Plummer school. The program has been continued and several families from the area have added experiences to their lives by opening up their homes to other students.

When Mrs. Arntson bid her last farewell to Irene at the airport, she jokingly said to the student, "We'll come and visit you in ten years." This summer the idea came to be a reality for Elaine, Michael and Melissa. (Mr. Arntson died in March of 1982) Two of Mrs. Arntson's children were in Germany. Captain Ward Arntson was stationed at Finthen, Germany and the former Lynn Arntson, now married to Wade Hampton, who is also with the U.S. army, lives in Badkreuznach, Germany. Having all this family there and with Ward returning to the States soon, she decided this was the time and the summer to travel.

On June 3 the three flew from Minneapolis to Frankfurt, Germany. Ward had three weeks leave in July so his family which consists of his wife Donna, Edward III, age three, and Allison, age one, together with Elaine, Mike (14) and Melissa (10) left on a camping trip through Denmark (stopping to visit with Palle Nymann's from Plummer), Norway, Sweden and Finland.

Irene, who works in Helsinki, the capitol city of Finland and still single, arranged to be home with her parents and brother for the four days that the Arntson family visited.

Mrs. Arntson commented that the countryside around Pekola is very natural looking and reminded her much of the area around Floodwood where her Finnish grandmother Koskela Waha lived.

Mr. and Mrs. Usvasalo were a terrific host and hostess, Mrs. Arntson said. Mr. Usvasalo, who is in private business owning a folding door factory, had his business closed for the summer holiday. Irene and her mother, knowing that Americans are great eaters, had baked and prepared much food, even some of Elaine's favorite Finnish dishes like fruit pudding. Irene had told her mother about the lunches and meals that she had when she was in the States, so every time the Arntsons turned around someone was setting the table for another meal.

Irene speaks fluent English and at present works in the foreign collection department of the bank in Helsinki. She also does television commercials.

Irene, remembering her favorite event — a shopping trip to Thief River Falls — took Donna and Elaine on a six-hour shopping spree to Hammenlina (Pop. 40,000). Mrs. Arntson stated that the clerks were very friendly and provided many services. Mrs. Arntson bought several early Christmas gifts in July and they were gift wrapped in Christmas paper complete with bows and key chains at no extra charge.

Shopping was tiring and everyone later enjoyed a Finnish sauna at a sauna and pool right in the Usvasalo home.

Elaine, Michael and Melissa were in Europe for the entire summer, returning just in time for school. (Mrs. Arntson was a former techer in the Grygla-Gatzke schools.) Other countries that they visited were France, England, Belgium, Italy, Austria and East Germany.

Mrs. Arntson teaches second grade in the Bowbells school in North Dakota. She is also active in the church and superintendent of the Sunday school at Bethlehem Lutheran. She arranged special Christmas program inspired by her travels called, "Christmas Everywhere."

ELAINE ARNTSON, whose family was host to a Finnish exchange student in Plummer 10 years ago, visited with the student in Finland last summer. Irene Usvasalo (left) was the first foreign exchange student in Plummer and Ed Arntson was superintendent of the Plummer school. Elaine was a former teacher in the Grygla-Gatzke schools. In the photo above Elaine and Irene are looking at glassware purchased at a Finnish glass factory.

IRENE USVASALO, Finnish exchange student at the Plummer schools 10 years ago, was featured in a Times Christmas story that year. This summer her host mother, Mrs. Ed Arntson, returned the visit along with several of her children. Irene, her parents and brother are pictured above in their home in Finland.

Conduct Study On Reasons For Human Crying

by Jeanne K. Hanson
University News Service

A typical man cries barely once a month, a typical woman cries about five times, but anywhere from zero to 30 times a month is normal for adults. Findings like these — from the only study of adult crying ever conducted — are leading researchers to recognition of the biochemistry of tears, to a profile of normal adult crying and to evolutionary clues to why we cry.

Crying — like sweating, exhaling and waste elimination, all exocrine processes in which a substance leaves the body — has evolved to significantly relieve human emotional stress, the researchers believe. Results have been recently published in the journal "Integrative Psychiatry" by William Frey, psychiatry researcher at the University of Minnesota and St. Paul Ramsey hospital. The new biochemical data, not yet published, is still being analyzed by Frey and colleague Robert Elde, anatomy professor at the university, who both stress its preliminary nature.

Biochemically, some two dozen neurotransmitters have been sought so far in tears and in the lacrymal gland, in an effort to probe the chemistry of tears and the emotions behind them. So far, two have been found (leucine-enkephalin and prolactin. The researchers say this is suggestive that the first of these is an endorphin, part of the family of brain chemicals known to act as the body's inherent painkillers. The chemicals are found only in emotional tears, not those caused by eye irritation.

Psychologically, adult crying is quite variable, Frey said, and therefore is not a good indicator of depression or any other problem. Among the more than 200 emotionally healthy subjects studied — all of whom kept "crying diaries" of various kinds — about 45 per cent of the men reported no crying in a month, while only six per cent of the women did not cry during that time. Much male crying involves neither flowing tears nor even lumps in the throat, but rather eyes merely filling with tears. Female crying does not correlate with monthly hormone cycles, Frey said. "It is relatively rare for a man to cry more than seven times a month or a woman to cry more than 30 times a month," he said.

Crying episodes seem to last anywhere from a couple of seconds up to an hour and 40 minutes of intermittent crying and sobbing, with a typical crying time being one or two minutes. The reason given by the subjects was most often sadness; followed by happiness, anger, sympathy, anxiety and fear. Crying occurred most often between 7 and 10 p.m., a time when adults are most often with family and friends or watching television or movies, Frey said.

Eighty-five per cent of the women and 73 per cent of the men reported that after crying they felt better and that their own emotional stress was reduced by about 40 per cent. The feeling is expressed in the Emily Dickinson poem beginning this way: "After great pain, a formal feeling comes-The Nerves sit ceremonious, like Tombs."

The evolution of crying seems to have been a long time in coming. Though many animals have continuous moistening tears, very few if any seem to cry more, or cry differently, when in distress, Frey said. Certainly the higher apes do not, he said. But there are claims that both sea otters and seals cry more copiously when deprived of their offspring and that rats cry reddish-brown tears if their paws are tied. These claims are hard to dismiss, Frey said, but are so far not well documented.

Children with a rare crying disease may also provide a clue, Frey said. Unable to cry tears, they react severely to mild stress, sweating profusely, drooling and breaking out in skin blotches instead. Frey plans next to go beyond the victims of this disease — familial dysautonomia — to study other children three months old or older who also cannot cry tears. No child cries with tears during the very first few weeks of life, Frey noted.

Theories on the evolution of crying are few, Frey said. Charles Darwin thought tears were merely incidental. Anthropologist Ashley Montagu has suggested that tears keep mucous membranes — dried from sobbing — moist, in order to prevent infection. Frey noted, however, that most crying does not involve sobbing and that tears running down the face could not moisten the membranes. As a signal of distress, crying is not necessary, since whimpering or shrieking would suffice, Frey said. He added that in his study 35 per cent of women and eight per cent of men reported getting negative, not sympathetic reactions to their crying.

Frey is convinced that crying has evolved to somehow rid the body of the byproducts of stress, and that it is thereby beneficial. "Men who learn to hide their emotions from others may eventually hide them so well that they lose contact with them," he said, adding that it may not be an accident that men have a much higher incidence of peptic ulcers than do women. "We're doing our children a disservice if we condition them out of this natural response to stress, a process that actually makes us human," he said.

PUBLIC DONATIONS of over 670 cans and packages of food (above) were collected in early November by Pathfinders and children from the Seventh Day Adventist school, who solicited door to door. Supplemented with home baked breads and desserts, fresh fruits and other foods purchased through the church's community services center, the provisions were packed into friendship boxes, such as the one at right, for distribution to needy families in the area. "I just wanted people to see how far a little generosity can go when they work together," said Mae Howes, director of the center.

Cold Snap Calls For Patience And Caution

A snow piles rise, the temperature drops. . . and drops. All over Minnesota heavy snow closely followed by record subzero temperatures have made driving and even walking hazardous.

Emergency road service personnel and equipment are working in full gear and have had little rest in weeks. If you have difficulty starting your car or are one of the unfortunate who becomes stranded during this cold snap, patience and preparation are in order, according to the Minnesota state automobile association (AAA).

AAA strongly urges motorists to double their efforts to protect themselves and their vehicles from the extreme cold that is gripping the state. To protect your car from inconvenient and possibly dangerous breakdowns, AAA recommends checking, and if you haven't already done so, winterizing your car's vital systems.

You may have already found out the hard way that your car's charging system is greatly affected by days of subzero temperatures. Lower the temperatures goes, the less power your battery has. If you are having trouble starting your car now, have your battery and charging system checked by a professional or replace the battery to avoid further problems in the weeks of cold ahead. Remember that jump-starting a car can be risky. If you are unsure how to properly attach jumper cables, refer to your owner's manual or wait for professional help.

Engine performance and starting potential will improve if engine parts can move freely. Oil thickens as the temperatures drops, and can literally paralyze your car. Your vehicle will warm up faster and run more smoothly if you change to a light weight oil, such as 5W-30. Check your owner's manual.

Condensation in your fuel system can result in gas line freeze-up once you are on the road. AAA suggests that you keep your gas tank as full as possible during the winter, and occasionally add a gasoline antifreeze with a high alcohol content. To keep other liquids in your car flowing, be sure your anti-freeze is strong enough to survive extreme cold temperatures.

When warming up your car, run your engine in a well-ventilated place, AAA says, and be sure that snow is not blocking your exhaust system. Carbon monoxide is a silent, odorless killer and can quickly overcome you if it builds up in your car or garage.

For your own safety, never depend on your car to reach your destination, AAA says. Always prepare for the worst when driving in extreme cold. Even if you are driving a short distance, wear and carry warm clothing. A snowmobile suit and a pair of warm, comfortable boots are the most compact and warm items to protect you from the bitter cold and wind if you must leave your vehicle. Exposed skin freezes in minutes in subzero temperatures, and can be permanently damaged if not well-protected.

Carrying an emergency kit in your car is vital during such severe cold, and could indeed save your life if you are stranded in a remote area, AAA stresses. In addition to snowmobile suit and boots, carry blankets, a small sturdy shovel, flares, booster cables, a towing chain and kitty litter to spread in front of slipping tires.

In a plastic one-gallon ice cream pail, carry work gloves, a face mask and stocking cap, matches in a waterproof container, small first-aid kit and first-aid manual, high-energy foods such as raisins or semi-sweet chocolate, instant coffee or tea, a small backpacker's stove and pan to heat liquids, a small sharp knife, travel alarm clock, safety pins, aspirin, two quarters taped to the lid for phone calls, small compass, paper towels, small flashlight and extra batteries, and a large bright red or orange banner.

If you do become stranded, AAA stresses that you remain in your car. With the temperature plummeting, it will protect you from the cold and improve your chances of being found.

AAA says that everyone who must drive in this extended cold snap or respond to emergencies is faced with extraordinary dangers. Patience and common sense in perparing for the cold will help everyone survive safely.

Current demands on road service personnel and equipment are extreme, and AAA urges motorists who do experience trouble to express their appreciation to the people who assist them.

AAA has brochures available on winter car care and winter driving. Send a self-addressed, stamped business envelope to Public Relations Department, Minnesota AAA, 7 Travelers Trail, Burnsville, MN 55337.

Ideas Given For New Year's Resolutions

It's time to ring in 1984 and make lists of New Year's resolutions. If you're looking for a resolution you can keep, the Minnesota safety council has a suggestion, or three:

(1) Be safe in your car. Pledge to observe posted speeds, to be alert for pedestrians and at all railroad crossings, to wear safety belts and request that your passengers do also.

(2) Be safe in your home. Check for safety hazards and install smoke alarms in your house or apartment if it doesn't already have them.

(3) Be safe when out and about. Especially, use discretion when imbibing alcohol before driving, boating or snowmobiling.

Before you put your list away, add these good intentions. If everyone keeps those resolutions, hundreds of lives will be saved in Minnesota in 1984. One of those lives just might be yours.

Stangeland To Address U.S. Farm Groups

Congressman Arlan Stangeland will address two national farm groups during the first two weeks of January. He will be the keynote speaker at the American Agriculture movement's (AAM) national convention in Nashville, TN, on January 7 and will also address the annual meeting of the U.S. Beet conference in Ft. Lauderdale, FL, on January 10.

A member of the House agriculture committee, Congressman Stangeland was the primary author of the sugar provisions in the 1981 farm bill and is the ranking member of the House sugar subcommittee.

Minnesota's Seventh district is America's leading producer of sugar beets. Over 50,000 people in the region depend on the sugar industry, either directly or indirectly.

In December, Congressman Stangeland also addressed the National Milk Producers federation (NMPF) national convention in San Francisco, the Minnesota Wheat Growers association in Moorhead, the Minnesota Agricultural forum in Bloomington, and the Red River Valley Sugar Beet Growers association in Fargo.

"If ever there was a driving need for unity among national and state farm groups, it is now," Congressman Stangeland said. "We negotiated for a year to pass the 1981 farm bill by just two votes. The 1985 farm bill will be an even bigger fight. That is why it is important to discuss mutual goals and cooperation with all these groups now."

Gas Prices In State Decline By 1 to 4 Cents

Gas prices in Minnesota dropped another one to four cents since Thanksgiving, according to Minnesota AAA's latest fuel survey. Full-service prices showed the greatest change, slipping an average of three cents per gallon.

Slack demand continues to force prices down and there are no definite signs that demand for petroleum products will increase in the near future, AAA says. "People have made energy-saving investments," according to AAA spokeswoman Nita Beckman. "They aren't going to sell their fuel-efficient cars or tear out the insulation in their homes just because gas prices drop a few cents." Industry officials note that world demand for oil has dropped 15 per cent since 1979.

According to AAA's survey of 84 stations, average full-service prices in the state are: regular, $1.329; unleaded, $1.395; unleaded premium, $1.548; and diesel, $1.257.

Current self-service prices are: regular, $1.182; unleaded, $1.242; unleaded premium, $1.30; and diesel, $1.198.

AAA recommends that motorists fill their tanks early, as only one-third of the stations surveyed will be open on Christmas day and New Year's day.

Holiday celebrations always bring more drunk drivers onto state roads, AAA says, which inevitably leads to an increase in accidents. Because of already heavy snowfalls all over the state, the likelihood of traffic mishaps is even greater, and drivers are encouraged to use care and common sense when traveling this holiday season.

T. Scholin To Student Lead NDSU Ag. Show

Tom Scholin, a senior in mechanized agriculture and son of Mr. and Mrs. Arlo Scholin, Thief River Falls, will serve as a student leader for the 38th annual agricultural engineering show from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday, February 11, at North Dakota state university (NDSU).

Students exhibits and a model rubber band tractor pulling contest highlight the show held in conjunction with the 58th Little International exposition.

NDSU students will prepare exhibits and build working models to compete in the five major exhibition divisions. Divisions are soil and water, power and machinery, tractors, electric power and processing, and structures and environment.

Exhibits will include the latest farm tractors and implements with information, demonstrations and interpretations provided by students.

Event is sponsored by the student members of the Agricultural Engineering and Agricultural Mechanization clubs.

The show is open to the public at no charge.

More information on the agricultural engineering show can be obtained by writing the Agricultural Engineering Department, North Dakota State University, Fargo, N.D., 58105.

Grants Given To Start Six DH Programs

Funding of six new programs to assist displaced homemakers in Minnesota was announced recently by Commissioner Barbara Beerhalter of the Minnesota department of economic security.

Programs will be available to residents of 37 counties in the north, central and western areas of Minnesota and all will be operational by July 1, Beerhalter said. Funding was authorized by the 1983 state legislature.

Grants were awarded to establish displaced homemaker programs in areas of the state where such services are not available, Beerhalter said. Many other areas of the state currently are being served by displaced homemaker programs.

Displaced homemakers are persons who have worked primarily in the home and now must enter the work force due to circumstances which left them without financial support.

Programs will help displaced homemakers make the transition from work in the home to self-sufficiency in the labor market. Programs will provide intensive career exploration, vocational and personal counseling, testing and assessment, emergency assistance and referrals, job development and placement assistance.

Grantees selected by Beerhalter were recommended by a six-member review panel representing the state legislature and the displaced homemakers advisory council.

Each of the six programs will receive $50,000 annually. State receipts for marriage license and dissolution filing fees are used to fund the programs.

Descriptions and locations of the six new programs which are being funded are as follows:

Displaced homemakers network: This program, sponsored by Rural Minnesota CPE, Inc., will coordinate the resources of four West Central counties — Becker, Clay, Otter Tail and Wilkin — to assist displaced homemakers in determining their immediate and long-term needs. Eileen Hume, Moorhead, represents the area as a member of the Minnesota displaced homemakers advisory council.

META five displaced homemaker program: This program will serve Cass, Wadena, Crow Wing, Todd and Morrison counties and is sponsored by Brainerd community college, where the program will be based. Outreach services will be provided at other sites in the five-county area. Angela Sosnowski, Aitkin, represents the area as a member of the state's advisory council.

Region One displaced homemaker program: This program is sponsored by Project heritage design and will serve the counties of Kittson, Roseau, Marshall, Polk, Pennington, Red Lake and Norman. Program will be centrally located in Thief River Falls and will provide counseling, testing, training and services needed to assist displaced homemakers in becoming emotionally and financially self-sufficient. Arlyne Forsberg, Thief River Falls, represents the area as a member of the state's advisory council.

Region Seven W displaced homemaker program: Sponsored by Tri-County action programs, Inc., this program will serve Stearns, Benton, Sherburne and Wright counties. Local community agencies, groups and businesses will be working together to deliver all necessary services. State's advisory council member representing the area is Susan Lorenz, Foley.

Northeast Minnesota displaced homemaker program: Sponsored by Arrowhead economic opportunity agency, this program includes the counties of Aitkin, Carlton, Cook, Itasca, Koochiching, Lake and St. Louis, excluding the city of Duluth. Naomi Sturgis, Hoyt Lakes, represents the area as a member of the state's advisory council.

West central Minnesota displaced homemaker program: University of Minnesota, Morris, continuing education and regional programs office, in cooperation with the agricultural extension service, will provide the groundwork for the program which will serve the counties of Traverse, Grant, Douglas, Stevens, Pope, Big Stone, Swift, Chippewa, Lac Qui Parle and Yellow Medicine. Carol Rikke, Hanley Falls, represents the area as a member of the Minnesota displaced homemakers advisory council.

Artists Sought For Art Show For Disabled

Sister Kenny institute has issued a call for entries for their 1984 international art show for disabled artists. Any art medium from a disabled artist is accepted. Each artist may submit four entries, which must be original, and never shown at a previous Sister Kenny art show. The entries should also be priced.

Further information is available by calling Susan Benjamin, 612-874-4400 or Mary Jo Crystal, 218-281-1396.

Because of the slowdown in births beginning about 1960, there will be fewer young persons reaching labor force age in the 1980s, and overall labor force growth is likely to slacken, according to a publication of the U.S. Department of Labor.

Bargaining Units Agree On Contract

Bargaining committees from the Goodridge school board and Goodridge Education association have reached tentative agreement on a contract settlement for the 1983-84 and 1984-85 school years, according to Supt. Donald Langan. The two-year pact would call for an increase in salary and insurance of about 14 per cent.

While the bargaining committees have reached agreement and the teachers have given tentative approval, the full board of education has not yet reached a decision, Dr. Langan said. The board will meet in special session on Wednesday, January 4, at 10 a.m. to consider the contract.

As approved by the bargaining groups, the contract calls for an average increase per teacher of $1,372.60 (eight per cent) for 1983-84 and an additional increase of $1,251.55 (six per cent) for 1984-85. Base salary (for a first year teacher with a bachelor's degree) would be $15,500 for 1983-84 and $16,500 for 1984-85.

According to Supt. Langan, the insurance benefit would increase from $97 per month in 1982-83 to a maximum of $110 per month in 1983-84 and $130 per month in 1984-85. Because the teachers as a group have not taken the insurance benefit unless actually needed, the superintendent noted, the district can expect an increased insurance benefit expenditure of $116 per teacher over the two years of the contract.

Total salary and benefit increases for the two years of the contract period would average $2,870.54 per teacher, Dr. Langan added. He also cited settlements for 1983-84 and 1984-85 among other school districts in the state with one to 25 teachers on the school district staff, an average of 19.1 teachers per district. Goodridge has a full time equivalency of 19.38 teachers this year.

Other settlements averaged starting salaries of $14,652 rising to $20,667 in 13.9 steps on the BA lane while Goodridge would have a salary level ranging from $15,500 to $20,750 in 16 steps. On the MA level, the average state settlements ranged from $16,179 to $22,360 in 14.7 steps while Goodridge would range from $17,400 to $22,650 in 16 steps.

Comparable figures for 1984-85 show a state average of $15,256 to $21,620 in 14.2 steps on the BA level and $16,652 to $23,362 in 15 steps on the MA level. Goodridge would have comparative figures of $16,500 to $21,750 and $18,400 to $23,650, both in 16 steps.

State average increments in those districts where settlements have been reached (1-25 teacher districts), increments would average $1,511 (8.18 per cent) for 1983-84 and $1,250 (6.17 per cent) in 1984-85. Under the tentative Goodridge agreement, the increments would be $1,372 (8 per cent) in 1983-84 and $1,251.55 (6 per cent) in 1984-85.

For the 1982-83 school year, salary costs were placed at

City Council Settles 2-Year Labor Contract

Thief River Falls city council approved a two year labor contract with Teamsters local 320, and defeated a second attempt to halt moving the package liquor store, among other business during their regular meeting held last night in city auditorium.

Labor contract with the Teamsters was negotiated by Aldermen Ambrose Wysoski and Clayton Restad, who noted that the process had begun in July. Wysoski stated that it was the first time in his recollection that a two-year contract had been negotiated, and noted that it had been approved and ratified by the union membership.

As approved, that contract calls for a $75 per month across-the-board adjustment plus a $5 increase in the longevity schedule, effective January 1. An additional $50 per month across-the-board adjustment would become effective July 1, in all categories; and another $75 per month increase would go into effect on January 1, 1985. In addition, utilities department linemen and meter service personnel would be given an adjustment of $75 per month, and the city's contribution toward a family health insurance plan was set at a maximum of $150 per month, with the city continuing to pay the total premium for a single insurance plan and $3,000 term life insurance.

Wysoski estimated that the increased cost of the two year contract would be 7.05 per cent in 1984, and 5.04 per cent in 1985. Since the 1983 contract settlement had only increased 1.68 per cent, due to expected cuts in state aids which had failed to materialize, he noted that if the pay raise was averaged out over the three year period (1983, 84 and 85), it averaged out to approximately 4.6 per cent increase per year.

In addition, council approved changes in the Blue Cross Blue Shield (BCBS) program authorizing participation in "Physicians Aware" which limits payment to fee schedules agreed on by participating physicians; and in a "Retrospective Arrangement" which en-

Fire Damages Soine House Christmas Eve

Fire of undetermined origin caused damage to the Terry Soine family home on the northeast edge of the city early on Christmas eve but quick response by the Thief River Falls fire department saved the structure.

The family was at home when the fire was noticed about 3:45 p.m. in the area next to the chimney. Smoke was coming into one of the bedrooms and was first noticed by the children who were getting ready for church.

Some damage to the roof and walls was done by firemen in order to extinguish the fire which also charred part of the attic roof. Some water damage also resulted and the interior of the house sustained smoke damage as well.

Soine, who complimented the fire department for prompt response and care in attempting to minimize structural damage, said the fire apparently started near a chimney in the home. Since the brick chimey is flue lined, however, it is believed the fire may have started in the wall where electric wiring is located.

Damage to personal belongings was mostly smoke related and the family continues to live in the house while working with clean-up efforts.

Fishermen OK After Vehicle Strikes House

Ice fishing is usually a peaceful form of recreation, especially in the early morning hours, but Tom Hartley, John Dagg and David Upham, all of Thief River Falls, got some unexpected excitement as they sat in Hartley's fish house on the Red Lake river early Friday morning.

According to a call logged at the Pennington county law enforcement center at 1:12 a.m. on December 23, Hartley reported that he and his friends had been fishing in the shelter when it was crashed into by a 1968 Plymouth, causing damage to the fish house estimated at $300. Luckily, the occupants were uninjured. The vehicle then left the scene of the collision, later striking another unoccupied shelter belonging to Randy Bruggeman, also of Thief River Falls.

Based on the descriptions of the car, Pennington county sheriff's deputies contacted Dennis Srnsky, 20, of route 5, Thief River Falls, later the same day, matching paint scrapings from the fish house to a car at Srnsky's residence. Srnsky admitted that he had been a passenger in the vehicle at the time of the accident, and identified Jeffrey Keefe, 19, Thief River Falls, as the driver. Also identified as a passenger was Mark Kreuter, 19, Thief River Falls.

Formal charges by the Pennington county sheriff's department are pending in the case.

Newfolden Businessmen Rebuild Burned Stores

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

Because of the continuing faith of owners Stuart Sethre and Harvey Underdahl, the fire which destroyed two Newfolden business places November 22 will result in two new stores in that rural community early in 1984. Construction is now underway on the new building and both stores expect to be back in operation in early March.

Neither owner gave much thought to not rebuilding after the fire. Both have sons who intend to carry on the family business. Greg Underdahl has been working with his father in the hardware operation and James Sethre, who has just completed his course work in business administration at the University of North Dakota, will become the third generation involved in the 40-year-old family grocery business.

Being constructed for the two stores is a 100x110 foot steel building manufactured by the Cuckler company and erected by Edson Construction company of Thief River Falls. The building will be divided by a full concrete block wall which will leave 44 feet on the west side for the grocery business and 56 feet on the east side for the hardware store.

"We had considered putting up separate buildings," Harvey Underdahl said, "but in checking it out we found that we could save about $20,000 by putting up a single building and dividing the space. We'll have separate outside signs and still operate the businesses entirely independently."

The new construction will also permit parking area on the west side and north side of the building. A north entrance

Jobless Rate In Region Counties Shows Decline

In the seven northwestern Minnesota counties of Kittson, Marshall, Norman, Pennington, Polk, Red Lake and Roseau, all but Kittson showed a reduction in unemployment from October of 1982 to October of 1983, according to the Minnesota department of economic security.

On the basis of percentage, Pennington county led the way in economic recovery, dropping from 7.5 per cent unemployment in October of 1982 to 6.4 per cent in 1983, a decrease of 1.1 per cent. Kittson had an increase in unemployment of one per cent from 5.1 to 6.1 but still maintaining a lower percentage rate than Pennington, Marshall, Red Lake and Roseau.

Lowest percentage of unemployment in the seven-county region was Norman which dropped to 3.8 per cent in October of 1983 from 4.3 per cent the same month a year earlier. Highest rate was 10.8 per cent in Red Lake county, down from a tie with Roseau county at 11.1 per cent a year ago. Roseau county dropped to 10.7 per cent. The regional average unemployment of 6.5 per cent was down half a percentage point from 7.0 in October of 1982.

Percentages fail to tell the total story of the regional employment situation, however. For instance, Roseau county showed a drop of only .4 percentage point, yet an increase in the work force of 499 people from 5,436 to 5,935 and growth in employment from 4,832 to 5,297, or 475 people. Unemployment number rose from 604 to 638 during the same period but was offset by the increases in labor force and number of people employed.

In Pennington county, the labor force increased by 157 people from 6,416 to 6,873 while number of people employed climbed from 5,934 to 6,150, or a gain of 216 jobs from October of 1982. Unemployment fell from 482 to 423 during the period.

For the seven-county region as a whole, the civilian labor force increased from 44,238 to 45,464 or 1,226 people. Total employment was up from 41,143 to 42,487 or an increase of 1,344 jobs. Unemployment was down from 3,095 to 2,977 or a decline of 118 people on the jobless rolls.

40th Wedding Anniversary Noted By Ray Gusas

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Gusa of Middle River were honored on their 40th wedding anniversary on Saturday, November 26, at an open house celebration at the First Lutheran church in Middle River.

The open house was hosted by the couple's children and grandchildren, Joan McPherson, Chris and Sara; Sharon and Wayne Smith, Stacie, Wyatt and Lindsay; Catherine and Dennis Burkholder, Jamie, Melissa and Michael; Carolyn and Terry Miller, Donelle, Deanne and Erin; Martha and Steve Jonland, Kyle and Karin; and Bill and Diane Gusa. All wore white carnations with red accents.

For the occasion the church was decorated with evergreen boughs and white carnations. The boughs were cut from the same tree which provided boughs for the wedding when the couple was married Dec. 5, 1943 at the Nazareth Lutheran church in Holt with Rev. T.C. Hanson officiating.

The open house began with the couple reaffirming their wedding vows with Rev. Donald Fredine officiating. They entered the church as Lois Peterson, a friend, played "The Wedding March."

For the occasion, Mrs. Gusa wore her original wedding gown of white slipper satin styled with a cathedral-length train. Pearl earrings and necklace complemented the gown. She carried the white New Testament, which she had carried at her wedding, topped by a white carnation. She also wore a white carnation corsage with red net and ribbon trim, matching the boutonniere worn by her husband. His navy blue pinstripe suit was similar to his wedding attire.

During the ceremony, daughters: Joan McPherson, Sharon Smith, Carolyn Milger and Martha Jonland, sang "Because;" and the assembled guests sang "Crown With Thy Benediction," as the couple knelt at the altar. Both songs were sung at the wedding.

A program followed with the grandchildren singing, "Jesus Loves Me." An original reading, "Gram and Gramps," by Stacie Hansen, followed. Highlighting the program was a film from Catherine and Dennis Burkholder depicting 40 years of married life, portrayed by grandchildren Jamie, Melissa and Michael. The program concluded with the four daughters singing "Love At Home," and the benediction by Rev. Fredine.

The couple greeted the guests as they preceded down the aisle.

At the reception, held in the church parlors, the tables were centered with evergreen boughs and red and white bows. The serving table was covered with a red cloth, over which hung a red bell with red and white streamers. Centering the table was a three-tiered anniversary cake, iced in white and decorated with red roses. The original ceramic bride and groom cake ornament topped the cake which was baked and decorated by Sharon Smith and Carolyn and Terry Miller. It was cut by Joan McPherson and Carolyn Miller.

Martha Jonland poured, using the silver service which the couple received as their silver wedding anniversary gift. At the punch bowl were Stacie Hansen and Sara McPherson. Deanne Miller and Wyatt Smith distributed the thank you notes; Donelle Miller presided at the guest book, Chris McPherson served as usher and distributed the programs, and Sharon and Wayne Smith were host and hostess.

Honored guest at the open house was Mrs. Linda Larson, Holt, who was bridesmaid 40 years ago.

Following the reception, the couple was escorted by a caravan of cars through the streets of Middle River. They were seated in a car decorated with pompoms and red and white streamers.

The couple received many cards, gifts and telephone calls, including calls from Catherine and Dennis Burkholder, Etowah, N.C., and Bill and Diane Gusa of Spokane, Wash., who were unable to attend.

Guests attending were from Barron, WI, Minneapolis, Duluth, Barrett, Ortonville, Crookston, Mahnomen, Greenbush, Thief River Falls, Viking, Strandquist, Newfolden, Holt, Strathcona, and Middle River. Photo, Miller Photography, Barron, WI.

The anniversary observance concluded with a six o'clock dinner which was served in the church dining hall for close relatives and family.

Two Newfolden Stores Rebuild Following Fire

at the rear of the hardware store will be provided as well as the main entrance on the south side facing Newfolden's main street. Entrance to the Sethre store will be on the southwest corner.

Construction of the new building was underway within two weeks after the fire which was apparently caused from electrical wiring, Underdahl said. Investigation by insurance companies indicated that the fire started either in a main control panel or right next to the panel in the hardware store. The fire spread to the adjoining grocery store through the attic area which was not sealed off by a concrete block common wall between the two business places. Had the wall extended the full height of the building, Underdahl said, the grocery store could possibly have been saved.

Footings for the new building were poured with the use of hot water and chloride in the concrete mix provided by Sherman Lysne of E.M. Nelson Construction company, in Newfolden. Excavating for the footings, which are 12 inches wide and three feet deep, was nearly all accomplished before the ground was frozen. The new building will have 12-foot sidewalls and false ceilings with each store having its own heating plant.

Sethre said his new store will provide him with additional merchandising area in comparison to the old building. He has ordered a new 13-door freezer to replace the seven-door unit lost in the fire and will use four of the units for ice cream. He also plans to add a small fresh meat counter shortly after the store opens — something which was not available in the former store.

Underdahl said the merchandising area of the new hardware store will also be larger than his former operation and will be more efficiently arranged. He will use 94 feet of the 56-foot width for merchandising and the rear 16 feet for working area, storage, office and restrooms. Layout for the store was provided by the Hardware Hank company and new fixtures have been ordered for delivery February 20.

Electrical and heating plans are now being made in anticipation of having the building enclosed in the next few weeks. It is anticipated the hardware store may be ready for stocking in advance of the grocery because of the more complex wiring and plumbing required for the grocery store fixtures.

Sethre placed his fire loss at about $165,000, including about $50,000 in stock, $35,000 in fixtures and $80,000 for the building. Underdahl said his loss was $257,800 including $173,000 in fixtures and inventory and $84,800 for the building. Both owners said the businesses were well insured but replacement costs will be well above the loss coverage.

While Sethre is awaiting construction of the new building to get back into operation, Underdahl has been concentrating on a livestock and poultry feed business on the east side of the railroad tracks in Newfolden. He purchased a former potato warehouse for storage and moved the former barber shop building from downtown to serve as an office. He also handles a few staple hardware items and animal health supplies, and plans on adding a mixer-grinder in the near future.

Underdahl said he was able to salvage or replace all store records except charges made from November 1 to the date of the fire November 22. The main accounts receivable ledger was kept in the store safe and all entries were legible, he said. Copies of computer print-outs of previous store records were obtained from the company with which the store contracts for such bookkeeping service.

"People from this whole community have been really good to me," Underdahl said. "Not only Newfolden people, who have been really loyal, but people from other towns have provided me with a lot of business. And many of those who had charged items between November 1 and 22 are coming in with their charge slips and paying for what they bought. That tells you something about how honest people around here are. I have no complaints."

Sethre echoed the satisfaction with the community support and noted that his family has been in the grocery business there since 1943. He and his wife bought the store from his father in 1963 and had been planning a 20th anniversary celebration when the fire razed their business. That celebration has been delayed but will be observed in the new store.

Net result of the situation is that Newfolden's loss will be Newfolden's gain, thanks to the perseverance and faith in the community of two businessmen and their families. It provides a good attitude with which to start out a new year.

TWO COUNSELORS from Thief River Falls were selected by the Northwest Minnesota Counselors association to be spotlighted in the state newsletter of the association in recognition of "... excellence in their field and service to their counseling profession". Whitey Olson (right) of Lincoln high school and Sverre Solheim (center) of Northland community college are pictured with Mike Melbye, East Grand Forks senior high school counselor, who is president of the northwest association.

Olson, Solheim Recognized By Counselors

Two counselors from Thief River Falls have been selected by the Northwest Minnesota Counselors association to be spotlighted in the state newsletter in recognition of "excellence in their field and service to their counseling profession.

Whitey Olson, counselor at Lincoln high school and Sverre Solheim, counselor at Northland community college, were selected at a recent meeting of the association at Bemidji state university. The meeting was held to discuss statewide testing and financial aid programs.

In his 19th year as counselor at Lincoln high school, Olson is president-elect of the counselors association in this area and has served as its treasurer on two previous occasions. He began his counselor career in 1961 at Littlefork with a temporary state certification and received his guidance degree from Bemidji state university in 1965, when he joined the local school system.

At present he is the only counselor at the school due to reduction in school enrollment and cutbacks in expenditures. The change from three counselors, Olson says, makes him feel sorry for students who could benefit from counseling. "One counselor for 800 students is too much," he said. "As it is now I organize major functions and deal only with critical individual situations."

At various times since he began his career in public education at Bertha in 1957, Olson has been involved in local education associations for building representative to local president. At present he is on the pupil personnel services advisory council for the Thief River Falls AVTI. He has previously served in several different capacities in the state high school coaches association and the basketball and tennis coaches associations.

He has coached both boys and girls varsity tennis at Lincoln in recent years, taking boys teams to the state tournament in three successive years and having the number one state ranked team in 1981. He has served Redeemer Lutheran church as member of the education committee, co-chairman of youth activities, council member and chairman. He has been a Boy scout area commissioner and is a member of the Elks club.

Olson is married and the father of two children, a daughter attending Lincoln and a son attending Franklin middle school His wife Jeanne is a substitute teacher at Lincoln.

Sverre Solheim graduated from Central high school in Red Wing in 1946 and enlisted in the army for two years, serving in Germany. He returned to work in Red Wing before enrolling at Drake university in Des Moines, IA, where he received a bachelor's degree in music education.

After teaching instrumental and vocal music in Iowa and Minnesota for 16 years, he began graduate work in counseling and guidance, and earned a master of science degree at Mankato state university in 1969. He has been a counselor at Northland community college here since that time.

"Each year, meeting new students and following graduates as they leave us for further study of employment," he said, "I am sure that were I to do it again, I would have made the same choice of career with no hesitation. It has been a worthwhile and especially satisfying experience."

Sverre and his wife Beverly have three children. Their married daughter Patricia teaches learning disabled students in the Elgin, IL, area and is the mother of a son, Sean. Scott is employed by Southwest educational cooperative service unit as a school psychologist and lives in Tracy. Kristin is in her senior year at the University of North Dakota majoring in office management.

Bargaining At Goodridge Is Near Decision

$331,750 for the Goodridge district. Increase of $[illegible] for 1983-84 would raise the district expense to $358,351. An additional increase in 1984-85 of $24,255 assume retention of the 1983-84 staff at the same full time equivalency and normal advancement on the experience schedule.

"The contract proposal agreement reached by the negotiating committees reflects eight months of difficult negotiations," Supt. Langan said. "From the standpoint of the board committee, the objective was to be able to maintain a highly competitive beginning salary schedule and attempt to limit growth in the bachelor degree column.

"The board also attempted to build in greater increases toward the master's degree column, encouraging teachers to obtain more training as they also gain experience steps on the salary schedule."

The superintendent also noted that there were no significant changes made in contract language.

Jobless Rate In Region I Shows Decline

general economic recovery may be marked by intermittent starts and stops," the department of economic security's Labor Market Bulletin states. "There are indications that the usual seasonal increases in unemployment may soon be accompanied by some non-seasonal cutbacks in durable goods manufacturing in northwest Minnesota... However, aside from reductions among certain durables producers and the seasonal layoffs of construction workers, the underlying trend should be gradual improvement as reflected by a comparison of year ago figures.

"By mid-1984 we are not likely to have a level of expansion comparable to 1979, but economic activity could be the best since 1980. An economic forecasting model developed by the research office of the Minnesota department of economic security indicates that by the second quarter of 1984 Minnesota's nonfarm payroll employment could be almost equal to the comparable period of 1980."

Marshall, Pennington, Red Lake and Roseau counties in Region I have been listed as labor surplus areas eligible for federal procurement preference between Oct. 1, 1983 and Sept. 30, 1984. Employers located in these areas who met other criteria are entitled to preference in bidding on federal procurement contracts.

Purpose of the preference, according to the department of economic security, is to "guide a portion of the government's procurement dollars into those areas where people are in most severe economic need... areas with the highest unemployment.

courages employees to keep claims down, by discounting monthly rate charges and allowing the city to retain the benefit of the discount if claim experience was lower than projected.

Jerry Bugliosi addressed the council, expressing personal objections to the decision made last week to purchase the Consumers Coop building and move the municipal liquor store from its present location on Highway 59 South, across from McDonald's restaurant, which he owns. Noting that he and others had spent considerable time and effort with the department of transportation planning the frontage road project there, he said it was like a "slap in the face" to have the city to be the first retail business to pull out. He suggested that further consideration should have been given to the old site, objected to the visibility of the Consumers Coop building, and stated "I don't think it's a positive move for the community."

Considerable discussion followed, with Alderman Bill Penning making a motion to "take a second look at the proposal," seconded by Don Goodrich. In the heated discussion which followed, both sides claimed overwhelming support from their constituents, and most of the arguments were a rehash of last week's meeting.

Objections raised by Penning, Goodrich and Mayor Carlson included the proximity of the Consumer's building to the fire hall and Methodist church, and its location out of the mainstream of traffic. Carlson even objected to the fact that it is in walking distance of the high school, and adequacy of parking at the location was questioned, along with costs of remodeling.

Milan Borsheim, chairman of the liquor committee, commented that the present store was "built 13 years ago as a temporary facility." He claimed that parking would be as adequate as at the present site, noting that cars parking on the service road now, would not be allowed to when the frontage road project was completed. He further cited statistics showing that the average stop at a package liquor store was four minutes. Responding to charges that the issue had been "railroaded through", he claimed that the liquor committee had withdrawn from negotiations on the building on several occasions, to allow the senior citizens group to negotiate for the building.

Borsheim further claimed that expenses to remodel the building could be kept "minimal" by using the expertise of city forces in planning and developing the property, and said that the liquor firm of Phillips and Sons had a staff who would help design the facility.

As before, when the matter was brought to a vote, only Carlson, Penning and Goodrich voted to reconsider the purchase. Aldermen Wysoski, Restad, Ken Murphy and Borsheim voted against the delaying tactic. Alderman James Womack, who previously voted to approve the purchase, was absent.

Again, Mayor Carlson promised to be "conspiciously unavailable" to sign papers to complete the purchase, leaving that detail to be taken care of by vice chairman Wysoski.

In other business the council spent some time discussing the senior citizen cab subsidy, and reviewing statistics on its use. Under the subsidy program, 477 senior citizens have been issued cab cards, authorizing them to use Fred's Cab service at reduced rates. Card holders are charged $1.50 to use the cab within city limits, with the city paying a subsidy of $1 each time the card is used. If multiple passengers are carried in the cab at the same time, only one is charged for the fare.

Statistics showed that from June 1 to December 18, 3,885 rides were subsidized. Weekly totals increased from 78 subsidized rides in the first week to 238 rides from December 12 to 18. Increased use was credited to both awareness of the service and onset of cold weather. Of the 30 users that rode the cab most frequently between November 1 and December 4, the individual using the service the most averaged 10.4 rides per week.

Federal revenue sharing budget for 1983 called for $3,500 to be spent on the cab subsidy. As of December 18, $3,885 had been spent on the program with a $900 deficit projected for the current calendar year. Revenue sharing budget for 1984 authorizes $6,500 for the cab subsidy program.

Discussion centered on how to limit the amount spent on the program, while still maintaining a worthwhile service to the senior citizens. Possibility of limiting the number of times per week that the cards could be used was suggested, as well as the possibility of the cab company picking up a larger share of the subsidy. Committee of Don Goodrich and Milan Borsheim was directed to meet with the users of the service, as well as Art Cloutier, owner of Fred's Cab, to determine the best course of action.

In other business, the council:

— Approved issuance of licenses for 1984, including 55 cigarette licenses at $24 each; one wine license at $100; four on-sale beer licenses at $200; 12 off-sale beer licenses at $75 each; three junk dealer's licenses at $36 each; one taxi license at $10 for the first vehicle and $5 for each additional vehicle; nine auctioneer licenses at $24 each; six plumber's licenses at $10 each; four on-sale intoxicating liquor licenses at $3,600 each; four sewage dumping licenses at $25 each; five gambling licenses at varying rates based on the amount of prizes; and six bingo licenses at $25 each;

— Approved a utilities committee recommendation to promote Ted Schmitz to full time lineman, third step, effective January 1;

— Accepted the resignation of Susan Beito, arena attendant, with a recommendation that the park department consider transferring sanitation employee Melvin Stenberg to fill the position;

— Approved lump sum payment of $5000 in revenue sharing funds to the Ripley Shelter for battered women, with Aldermen Goodrich and Penning voting against the transfer;

— Acknowledged a letter from Whitey Olson, thanking them for funds allocated for improvements to east-side tennis courts;

— Agreed to schedule a meeting with the Minnesota department of transportation to discuss the Third Street improvement project scheduled for 1985;

— Noted that the agenda for the January 10 meeting would include discussion of a possible lodging tax on hotels and motels, with 95 per cent of the gross proceeds to be used to fund a local tourism board.

REBUILDING THEIR BUSINESSES was never a question for Stuart Sethre of Sethre's Hartz store and Harvey Underdahl of the Hardware Hank store in Newfolden. Both stores were destroyed in a November 22 fire which wiped out large inventories on hand for the holiday season. Construction work is now underway on a new steel building which will house the two businesses which provided a large part of the Newfolden downtown business area. This view from the southeast shows where footings have been poured for the new 100x110 building. Steel for the building is expected to arrive shortly after the new year and the stores will be back in operation sometime in March.

To Seek Public Dialogue On Education

More than 200 Minnesota school districts have agreed to participate in a statewide project on the future of public education.

The Minnesota dialogue on education, being conducted by the Minnesota department of education, will give the people of Minnesota a voice in determining the future course for this state's public schools.

The focal point of the dialogue is the week of February 13-17, 1984, when town meetings will be held in hundreds of communities statewide to discuss the purposes of education in the 1980s.

"It is imperative the people of Minnesota help plan for the challenges in public education in the '80s," said commissioner of education Dr. Ruth E. Randall, who has set the dialogue as a priority of her administration.

"Once we know what Minnesotans want the purpose of education to be, we can go about finding ways to meet those goals," she said.

"We need to know, should education be for job preparation? Should it be for socialization, so young people know how to get along with others? Should it be for self-discovery? Or, should it be for other purposes?" Randall asked.

Under the leadership of Randall, the Minnesota department of education has invited every Minnesota school district to initiate at least one town meeting. The department anticipates a variety of community representatives will join in planning, organizing and hosting town meetings. In addition, the department will encourage local groups and organizations to place the Minnesota dialogue on education on meeting agendas, which would expand opportunities for people to come together to discuss the future of education.

Town meeting sites and dates will be selected and publicized locally. According to assistant commissioner Curman Gaines, who is directing the dialogue, a study guide on education information and issues is being written. It will be available in the latter part of January 1984 to help people prepare for town meetings.

Also under preparation are guidelines for planning and conducting town meetings. These will be sent in December to school districts and other groups interested in hosting town meetings.

The ideas gathered during the dialogue will be reported in the spring to decision-makers, as well as to the public.

"The many recent national reports on the condition of public education have focused the spotlight on schools," Randall said. "Now that public interest is more intense than ever before, we have an excellent opportunity to involve Minnesotans in helping direct the future course of education in this state."

Public Hearing Scheduled By Corn Council

Public hearing is scheduled for Friday, January 6, on a marketing order proposed by the new Minnesota corn research and promotion council, according to deputy agriculture commissioner Rollin Dennistoun.

The hearing, to be conducted by the Minnesota department of agriculture, will be held in Bloomington at the Radisson South Hotel, and will be opened at 9 a.m. and continue until all interested persons have had opportunity to comment. Hearing coincides with the date and the location of the annual meeting of the Minnesota corn growers association.

Proposed marketing order provisions to be discussed include the amount of the checkoff assessment, possible exemptions, the best calendar period for a statewide referendum of all corn producers on the marketing order, and the checkoff implementation date if the referendum approves the final marketing order.

Copies of the proposed marketing order drafted by the 11 member Minnesota corn research and promotion council will be made available at the January 6 hearing.

After all interested persons have completed testimony on January 6 and the hearing officially closed, the Minnesota corn research and promotion council will meet to review the hearing comments and consider possible revisions and the final form of the marketing order to be submitted in the statewide referendum later in 1984.

Emergency Loan Program Is Reinstated

Farmers in Minnesota facing a credit crisis may find some relief now available with the court ordered reinstatement of the economic emergency loan program by the federal Farmers home administration (FmHA) on December 22, according to Deputy Agriculture Commissioner Rollin Dennistoun.

Minnesota has been given an initial allocation of $23,735,000, or four per cent of the national $600 million economic emergency loan funds that had been frozen by the federal administration since September 30, 1981.

Deputy Commissioner Dennistoun urges farmers with commercial credit distress to contact their local district FmHA office or supervisor at the earliest opportunity about the new availability of the economic emergency loans, noting that the state and federal allocations are on a "first come, first served" claim basis until funds are exhausted. New applications must be submitted, except for any approved and obligated applications caught in the September 1981 administrative suspension of the program.

Accenting the urgency is the fact that FmHA economic emergency funds remaining at the end of March will be reallocated to those states with the greatest number of unserviced loan applications pending. Latest date that economic emergency loans will be approved is next September 30, 1984.

Farmers who have suffered economic stresses caused by the unfavorable relationship between production costs and farm commodity market prices and by the general tightening of agricultural credit during the past three years are eligible to apply for the economic emergency loans. Interest rates are 10.25 per cent on production loans and 10.75 per cent on capital loans.

Both FmHA and Minnesota department of agriculture officials anticipate that the greatest demand for the reinstated economic emergency loans will come from livestock and poultry producers, who continue to be caught in a prolonged cost-price squeeze. Cash crop producers, who were under severe financial stress during 1981, 1982 and until mid 1983, have marketed record volumes of crops in the past five months and in most cases have improved their farm credit status.

Safety Council Warns Against Heater Mis-Use

In an effort to put heat where it is needed in the home, many consumers will purchase portable space heaters this winter. While portable heaters are safe and effective provided their unique characteristics and requirements are understood, serious questions concerning heaters have been raised by safety experts.

According to the Minnesota safety council, some safety considerations are applicable to all types and models of portable heaters:

— Select a heater which carries the seal of a reputable testing laboratory. Be certain the heater has proper metal guards or glass shields covering the flame or heat source to prevent burns and clothing fires.

— Locate heater at least three feet away from combustible surfaces including walls, draperies, furniture, clothing and papers. Heater should be placed out of the way of all traffic areas.

— Space heaters should not be used in small rooms, and flammable liquids (gasoline, paint thinner, cleaning fluids, etc.) should be kept away from them.

— When fuel-burning portable unvented space heaters are used, they should be properly adjusted and cleaned frequently. To prevent carbon-monoxide poisoning, keep a window or door in the room slightly open for fresh air (a square-inch opening for each BTU heat rating).

If using a kerosene heater, never fill it inside the home. And be sure to use only water-clear kerosene. Don't confuse that with water-clear gasoline marketed for use in campstoves and equipment.

When using an oil space heater, don't fill the reservoir to the brim with cold oil because, as the oil warms, it could expand and overflow, causing the heater to flare up.

When purchasing an electric heater, choose one with an automatic shut-off that cuts the power if heater is tipper over.

It's safer to avoid using an extension cord but, if one is needed temporarily with an electric space heater, use a heavy-duty cord. Ordinary lamp extension cords are not adequate.

To prevent electric shock, refrain from touching electric heaters when your body is wet or when standing on a wet floor. If an older model electric heater is used, clean it before using and check to see that wiring has not become worn or frayed.

Drunk Drivers Pose Danger During Holiday

Drunk drivers are continuing to kill themselves and others on Minnesota highways, according to the State department of public safety.

Commissioner Paul Tschida reminds drivers that the holiday season can be especially dangerous from the standpoint of the drinking driver. "Those who drink at parties should make arrangements to have others drive," Tschida advised.

Year-end statistics compiled by the department, although preliminary, show that more than 300 people will die on highways in 1983 due to their own intoxication or other drinking drivers. In 1982 the estimated number in these categories was 319. The 1983 preliminary death total on highways will probably be near 600. Department estimates that 55 per cent or more than 330 of these deaths will be attributed in some way to drinking and driving.

Staying off the road after drinking also can save you the expense and inconvenience of a DWI (driving while intoxicated) conviction. Approximately 37,000 Minnesotans will have had their licenses revoked by the end of 1983 because of alcohol-related offenses.

Even with all the publicity which accompanied DWI law revisions in Minnesota, it is worth repeating that Minnesota law regarding drinking and driving is swift and severe.

Seven days after being stopped for being over the legal limit of alcohol concentration, the driver's license is automatically revoked for 90 days. If the test is refused, the revocation is for six months. After conviction, a driver may be jailed for 90 days, fined up to $700 and be required to undergo a professional alcohol assessment probably followed by treatment. Later the revoked driver will be required to retake the driver's license exam and pay a fee of $100 for reinstatement. Last but not least, the insurance company may reclassify the driver as a high risk which may triple insurance rates for at least three years.

UNSIGHTLY WEEDS are transformed into objects of beauty by the winter cold and snow in northwestern Minnesota. These roadside weeds were capped with crystals of snow which drifted into a shaded area during the strong winds late last week. Hazy sunlight cast soft shadows and individual snowflakes sparkled from the wintry blanket which covered other grasses and weeds.

Rose Parade Theme Salutes Volunteers

"A Salute to the Volunteer" is the theme of the 1984 Pasadena tournament of roses parade. Televised on Monday, it will be seen by more than 125,000,000 people through the United States and abroad.

This unprecedented focus on American volunteerism was made by Donald Judson, tournament association president, who selected the theme.

"Through this teheme, we can truly celebrate the significant contributions of individuals who have given of themselves to build our nation," said Judson.

More than 91 million American volunteers spearhead and sustain important educational, cultural, recreational, political, religious, health related and environmental activities.

It is hoped that the more than 60 floral floats will feature all aspects of volunteerism.

For more information on volunteerism contact the Minnesota Office on Volunteer Services, 500 Rice Street, St. Paul, Minnesota 55155, 296-4731 (metro), 800-652-9747 (non-metro Minnesota).

Minnesota office on volunteer services, a division of the Minnesota department of administration, encourages the effective coordination and channeling of voluntary action to improve the quality of life for Minnesota citizens. It provides statewide leadership and supportive services to volunteer leaders to initiate, expand, and improve the contributions of volunteers.

Winter Travel Assistance Is Given By DOT

Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) can help motorists reduce their chances of being delayed or stranded by severe winter weather and provide assistance in case they are, the department advises.

Mn-DOT assists motorists by issuing road condition reports, by calling the Minnesota state patrol or other agencies for help and by providing emergency supplies at highway rest areas.

Curt Christie, Mn-DOT state maintenance engineer, says 40 safety rest areas and travel information centers along interstate and major trunk highways are stocked with food, water and other emergency supplies for use by travelers stranded by severe weather.

During recent winters marked by extremely heavy snowfalls, high winds and bitter cold, these emergency supplies have helped hundreds of stranded motorists until Mn-DOT road crews could once again open the state's highways to travel.

The rest areas are stocked yearly by Mn-DOT and the American Red Cross.

Although Mn-DOT crews will summon the state patrol, medical help or a tow truck, Christie said they are prohibited from towing stranded vehicles. Determination whether a vehicle is still driveable or whether the driver is physically capable of continuing to drive rests with the state patrol.

One way for motorists to lessen the chance of encountering severe winter weather is to heed weather advisories or to contact Mn-DOT's 24-hour road information unit. The unit received road condition and weather reports from 15 Mn-DOT maintenance areas and furnishes current road information to the news media and to travelers who call for information. Persons may call (612) 296-3076 for statewide information.

Persons outside the Twin Cities area may receive area road condition reports through Mn-DOT maintenance offices. Locations and telephones are as follows: Bemidji (218) 755-3816, Brainerd (218) 828-2570, Crookston (218) 281-5641, Detroit Lakes (218) 847-2111, Duluth (218) 723-4866, Mankato (507) 345-8900, Marshall (507) 537-6133, Moorhead Travel Information Center (218) 233-7029, Morris (612) 589-2001, Owatonna (507) 451-9000, Rochester (507) 285-7404; St. Cloud (612) 255-4265, Virginia (218) 749-8090, Willmar (612) 235-9230 and Windom (507) 831-2740.

"By calling ahead or listening to the radio when planning a trip," Christie says, "motorists can minimize the possibility of running into adverse weather or road conditions that may affect their travel plans."

After Party Clean-Up Adds To Home Safety

No, wait! When you close the door after your last guest, pick up for safety's sake, the Minnesota safety council recommends.

Before leaving the mess for morning, consider:

+ That drinks left standing in half-empty glasses are like a magnet to children who like to play grown-up, and several ounces of alcohol can depress the nervous system of a small child enough for death to occur;

+ That fire caused by butts emptied into a waste basket or cigarettes left burning on sofas or chairs can smolder in upholstery for 40 minutes or longer before you even smell danger;

+ That a fireplace damper closed before the fire is entirely out can cause a dangerous build-up of the poisonous gas carbon monoxide.

So take a few extra minutes to clean up. Dispose of leftover drinks and place liquor bottles well out of children's reach. Gather up ashtrays and place them in the kitchen sink until morning to make sure all ashes are out. Be sure the fire screen is in place if a fire is still burning on the hearth. Check the smoke alarm to see that it is working. And wait until morning to close the damper on the fireplace.

Small Grain Production In State Declines

In the west central district, early spring conditions were dry and seeding of small grains was completed quickly, according to the Minnesota agricultural statistics service. Elsewhere, the seeding lagged slightly, the annual small grain production summary shows.

Emergence and early growth were slowed by cold temperatures through mid-June. Much warmer weather for the rest of June and all of July brought rapid maturity and excellent dry harvest weather in most areas. Portions of northwestern Minnesota were again an exception.

Small grain yields suffered from heat stress, but not to the extent that late season crops were affected. Most areas had their earliest harvest in years, but part of the northwest was devastated by heavy late season rains again this year.

Minnesota's 1983 wheat crop totaled 78.96 million bushels, 38 per cent below last year. By types, production of spring wheat fell 38 per cent to 75.11 million bushels, the lowest level since 1973. Yield slipped three bushels from last year to 37. Durum yield of 35 bushels per acre was down four bushels from a year ago; production of 1.23 million bushels was down 60 per cent. Winter wheat production at 2.63 million bushels was 12 per cent lower than a year earlier but yield of 35 bushels per acre was up one-half bushel from the previous year.

Oats production of 76.95 million bushels was 28 per cent below last year and yield of 57 bushels per acre fell nine bushels below a year ago. The large decrease was mainly due to the PIK program acres that were not harvested. This the smallest production since 1934.

Barley yield of 53 bushels per acre was five bushels lower than last year. Production of 41.34 million bushels was down 19 per cent from a year ago.

Minnesota rye growers produced a crop of 4.96 million bushels, 50 per cent more than 1982. The average yeidl was 31 bushels per acre.

Minnesota farmers seeded an estimated 400,000 acres of winter wheat for harvest in 1984. This large acreage amounts to four times the seedings for the 1983 crop, and the largest acreage since estimates were begun in 1913. U.S. growers seeded 64.9 million acres of winter wheat this fall for harvest in 1984. This is up four per cent from the 62.5 million seeded for the 1983 crop.

Rye seedings in Minnesota for 1984 totaled 200,000 acres, the same as seedings for 1983. U.S. growers seeded 2.98 million acres of rye for all purposes this fall for harvest in 1984, a seven per cent increase from the seedings for the 1983 crop.

Safeness Of Toy Storage To Be Considered

After the holidays, where do you put everything away? That's a question parents ask when they survey the pile of new toys their children received as gifts.

Minnesota safety council recommends that you take time now to establish a safe toy storage area. To determine your children's storage needs, consider the size, type and number of toys and also the family lifestyle. Make kids aware of space limitations in the home.

Impress children with the need for orderly toy storage by telling them that toys, like other important possessions, must have their own storage place. Explain that putting things back where they belong will prevent younger brothers and sisters from possibly being hurt by toys meant for older children. Emphasize the importance of keeping toys with small pieces or electrical components out of the reach of little ones who might be hurt. Place chemistry sets, hobby materials and other dangerous items in a locked closet or on a high shelf where they are well out of reach.

Children (and adults too) have been severely injured by tripping over toys on a cluttered floor, then striking their heads on the hard corners of playroom furniture, such as toy chests. Rounded and padded edges and corners may prevent some injuries and reduce the severity of others.

Toy chests are popular and practical storage units which can keep most playthings in one convenient place. But make sure it is safe. Be sure there are ventilation holes or a gap between the lid and the sides of the chest to provide fresh air inside the toy box. A toddler exploring inviting spaces like the inside of a toy chest doesn't have the physical ability to extricate himself or herself from the chest if a heavy lid falls down. Lacerations and suffocation are possible consequences.

Safety council points out that it's essential that any toy chest with an attached lid have a safety lid-support. It should not have an exterior latch — if a child became entrapped inside, such a latch would preclude his being able to escape by himself.

Toy chests with lightweight removable lids which can easily be opened from within are preferable. Open shelves and bins or chests with sliding door panels are even safer.

Make it a family project to put toys safely away at the same time each evening. Since the way children play often tells much about what is going on in their world, parents can use this time to find out what toys were played with and how. It is also a chance to check toys for needed repairs and to discard playthings beyond repair.

"Making sure that playthings are safely chosen, maintained and stored are as vital a part of play as the toys themselves," according to the toy manufacturers of America (TMA). A TMA booklet, "The ABCs of Toys and Play," details other toy suggestions; a single copy is available free of charge by sending a postcard to: ABC Toy Booklet, 200 Fifth Avenue, Room 740, New York, New York 10010.

Hockey Conference Formed

Little local interest has surfaced in the announcement of the formation of a new high school hockey conference within the Section 8 ranks featuring Fergus Falls, Moorhead, Detroit Lakes, Crookston, East Grand Forks, Thief River Falls and Warroad.

Those seven, plus Bemidji and Roseau, were invited to form the new grouping that sponsors hope would add additional interest and obtainable goals for the participants.

Fergus Falls and Moorhead backers were recognized as the main forces behind the new league, which was set up to accommodate the bulk of the Section 8 schools not already affiliated with a hockey conference. A conference trophy, plus all-conference recognition for the players would be the rewards. Fergus Falls apparently felt that finishing atop the Section 8 regular season standings a year ago should have been worth more than just a No. 1 seed into the Section 8 tournament quarterfinals, where the Otters were promptly eliminated in a 7-4 first-game loss to host East Grand Forks.

Bemidji, though, said no to the idea of being a member of a one-sport conference, and Roseau, recognized as a hockey power statewide, apparently wanted more flexibility in its schedule to allow for games against Iron Range or Twin Cities schools instead of being locked in a conference arrangement.

Thief River Falls reportedly went along with the proposal out of courtesy to those actively pushing the proposal. Conference affiliation won't hurt the Prowlers, and by joining they maintain a good relationship with the others.

Last year, Lake of the Woods, Indus, Hallock and Red Lake Falls formed the Northwest Conference, with Bagley joining this winter. Brainerd, Alexandria and Little Falls have league ties with the Central Lakes Conference, leaving only Crosby-Ironton and first-year Section 8 member East Grand Forks Sacred Heart without hockey conference affiliation.

Bemidji, Crookston, East Grand Forks and Thief River Falls once competed for a league hockey title as members of the old Northwest Athletic Conference from 1968 through 1972, but disinterest ended that arrangement.

Hockey Tournament To Be Aired

Sjoberg's Cable TV in Thief River Falls will be airing the 1984 Minnesota State High school hockey tournament March 8-10, picking up a feed from WCCO-TV in the Twin Cities.

WCCO-TV, which owns the television rights to the tournament through 1985, has been given permission by the Minnesota State High School League (MSHSL) to market and distribute the tournament games in 1984 to outstate television stations and cable systems. The tournament games will first be offered to over-the-air broadcasters in each Minnesota television market. If, however, a station decides not to carry any or only a portion of the available games, any balance will be made available to local cable systems. If the interest is great enough, the production of the tournament will be uplinked to satellite and thus more readily available statewide.

Viewers should note that these efforts only create the opportunity for the games to be shown in your area, say MSHSL officials. Commercial stations and-or cable systems serving the various areas in the state will have to determine if they elect to carry the hockey tournament. Sjoberg's Cable TV officials recognize the popularity of the tournament to northwestern Minnesota cable subscribers and have elected to pick up the transmission — for a fee that they must pay. On the other hand, viewers in, say, East Grand Forks could be left out of the broadcast coverage if the television stations serving the area elect not to carry the games.

If things work out, say WCCO-TV officials, the broadcasts may be expanded to include boys and girls state basketball tournaments in 1985, but those events will not be shown locally this season.

Miscellaneous

+Fergus Falls' highly-regarded high school hockey team, ranked high in the state-wide polls and 3-0 after a 3-2 win over Thief River Falls Dec. 10, now finds the going a little tough. Upset by Crookston 4-2 and Moorhead 5-4 in overtime in their last two starts, the Otters have a demanding Thursday-Friday junket to Warroad and Roseau before the first of the year. Section 8 hockey voice Frank Fee of Crookston started the week by ranking the top six Section 8 teams: 1. Roseau; 2. Crookston; 3. Moorhead; 4. Thief River Falls; 5. Fergus Falls; 6. Brainerd.

Thief River Falls Christmas Classic Basketball Tournament . . .

Eagles, Nordics, Falcons, Prowlers In Semifinals

Average victory margin was nearly 20 points per game Tuesday as Argyle, Marshall County Central, Fertile-Beltrami and Thief River Falls won opening round quarterfinal games at the first Thief River Falls Christmas Classic high school basketball invitational tournament being played in the Lincoln gym.

There were no down-to-the-wire finishes as Argyle handled Middle River 71-39, Marshall County Central dispatched Roseau 74-60, Fertile-Beltrami took care of Mahnomen 70-51 and Thief River Falls dropped Kennedy 53-39.

Play resumes Thursday and the tournament will be completed Friday. Thursday's slate of games includes the consolation round in the afternoon when Kennedy plays Mahnomen at 1 p.m. while Roseau meets Middle River at 3. Semifinals that night will feature Argyle vs. Marshall County Central at 7 o'clock, and Fertile-Beltrami vs. Thief River Falls at 9.

Friday's schedule will start with the seventh place game at 1 p.m., followed by the consolation finals at 3, the third place game at 7 and the tournament championship game at 9.

Following the title game an awards ceremony will present team trophies to the championship, runner-up, third place and consolation champion teams; individual medals to members of the championship team; announcement of an all-tournament squad; and the awarding of a school sportsmanship award.

Thursday's semifinal opener promises to be an entertaining basketball game featuring two District 32 contenders who play similar styles of fast-pace basketball both offensively and defensively.

"We do a lot of things similar," acknowledged Marshall County Central coach Ron Ueland after the opening round afternoon session was completed Tuesday. "They're probably a little quicker than we are, but I think we can shoot just as well as they can. It should be an exciting game."

"The teams are very similar size-wise," mentioned Argyle coach Warren Keller. "Both teams like to play all 84 feet of the floor. Defensively, their guard play is impressive. It should be an interesting game."

Meanwhile, Fertile-Beltrami showed some good quickness, too, leaving Thief River Falls as the only semifinalist not known for its foot-speed, although the Prowlers like to run, too.

"Fertile-Beltrami has good quickness," confirmed Thief River Falls coach Tom Hunt. "If we don't control the tempo, we'll be in trouble, but we still want to go with the thing if the opportunity is there for the fast break. We'll have to play better than we did tonight."

Admission prices are set at $2 per session for adults; $1.50 for college and AVTI students; $1 for students in grades 6-12; and 50-cents for students in grades K-5.

Argyle, MCC Are Winners

Argyle and Marshall County Central were easy winners in the first round afternoon session Tuesday of the Thief River Falls Christmas Classic high school basketball invitational tournament as the Eagles ran up a 71-39 margin against Middle River and the Nordics knocked off Roseau 74-60.

They'll meet Thursday in a 7 p.m. semifinal encounter. Middle River and Roseau, meanwhile, will play at 3 p.m. in Thursday's consolation round semifinals.

Argyle	71
Middle River	39

Middle River wanted to play the game at a slower pace, but Argyle dictated things with its fast break style as the Eagles opened the three-day, eight-team tournament with a one-sided 71-39 victory.

"We thought that if we could slow it down; get them to play half-court basketball, we could stay with them," explained Middle River coach Eldon Sparby. But instead, his youthful Skippers, featuring three sophomores in the starting line-up, were forced into full-court basketball and they quickly lost ground.

Argyle, a 66-48 winner over Thief River Falls on the same court in a regular season encounter exactly one week earlier when the Eagles shot 63 per cent from the field, matched that figure again Tuesday with a 63 per cent 34-for-54 effort.

"We shot well again," acknowledged Argyle coach Warren Keller, who said he was happy with the Eagles' performance, especially with the play of David Durand, a 6-0 junior center, who dominated play inside with 18 points, sharing game-high scoring honors with teammate Ray Safranski, a 5-9 sophomore guard.

"Durand killed us," confirmed Sparby.

Argyle shooters connected on seven of their first eight field goal attempts, but the Eagles couldn't shake the Skippers in the first quarter, leading just 16-15. Middle River messed up by missing six of seven first quarter free throws that could have given the Skippers a needed boost.

Middle River turnovers began to mount in the second quarter in the face of relentless Argyle pressure, allowing the Skippers to get off just two field goal attempts. They made 'em both, but trailed 31-19 at halftime when Argyle, after spotting Middle River a 17-16 lead on a pair of quarter-opening free throws by Sheldon Peterson, rattled off 11 straight points in a four-minute span. A couple of unpopular charging calls against Middle River added additional frustration for the Skippers' backers during that stretch.

It was 53-29 after three quarters.

Kevin McKeever, a 5-9 senior guard, scored 17 points for the Skippers, but he was the only Middle River scorer to crack double figures.

Middle River shot 43 per cent from the field (16-for-37). The Skippers shot just 33 per cent from the free throw line (7-for-21) where the Eagles shot 75 per cent (3-for-4). Argyle had a 25-20 rebound edge and Middle River topped the turnover charts 31-20.

Twenty first half Roseau turnovers led to a bundle of fast break lay-ups for Marshall County Central as the Nordics opened up a big 24-18 halftime spread in the second afternoon quarterfinal game.

It still wound up as a 14-point, 74-60 Marshall County Central victory, but it wasn't quite that easy as Roseau shaved the margin to eight points early in the fourth quarter before the Rams' comeback attempt fizzled.

"We're real satisfied with our play," said Marshall County Central coach Ron Ueland when it was over. "I thought we played a super first half. We were just a little flat in the second half, and they got rolling on us."

Marshall County Central took control by out-scoring Roseau 10-2 over the final 3½ minutes of the first quarter to open up a 16-6 point spread as the Nordics' ball-hawking defense picked the Rams' pockets on numerous occasions.

Ahead 20-10 with 6:02 left in the second quarter, the Nordics really put it away with a ten-point burst in less than two minutes. Chad Swan, a 5-8 junior guard, had four of the five baskets in that blitz, three on fast breaks as the Rams turned it over four straight times in falling behind 30-10.

After trailing 42-18 at halftime, Roseau cut the difference to 53-43 at the end of the third quarter and twice had a chance to turn an eight-point spread into a six-point margin but failed early in the final quarter.

Swan finished with 20 points for the Nordics, 16 of them coming in the second half. Kevin Boe, a smooth 5-11 junior forward, had 13.

"When your defense is working hard, your guards are going to score points," explained Ueland. "We like to make things happen with our defense. Our double-teamming is working real well — that's the best part of our defense."

Neal Feldman, a 6-4 senior forward, led Roseau with 17 points, while center Gregg Welin and guard Craig Singer each had 14.

Roseau actually finished with a better shooting percentage. After a 21-for-36 first half (58 per cent), Marshall County Central wound up 35-for-75 for the game from the field (47 per cent) after a poor 5-for-20 third quarter. Roseau, meanwhile, got off just 18 first half shots (making 9 of them for a 50 per cent half), finished 26-for-49 (53 per cent), which including an 11-for-14 third quarter to spark the comeback. The Nordics were

A FAMILIAR sight in the first half, Marshall County Central guard Scott Gustafson went in for one of the numerous fast break lay-ups the Nordics came up with against turnover-plagued Roseau during Tuesday's opening round quarterfinals of the Thief River Falls Christmas Classic high school basketball invitational tournament being played in the Lincoln gym. Marshall County Central forced 20 first half Roseau turnovers en route to a 42-18 lead that wound up as a 74-60 victory.

TRF Will Meet Fertile-Beltrami

Fertile-Beltrami and Thief River Falls completed the opening round quarter-finals Tuesday with wins in the evening session of the Thief River Falls Christmas Classic high school basketball invitational tournament.

It was a 70-51 win for the Falcons over Mahnomen and a 53-39 victory for the Prowlers over Kennedy to set the stage for Thursday's 9 p.m. semifinal encounter between the two winners.

First afternoon consolation semifinal that day will find the Rockets playing the Indians at 1 p.m.

Fertile-Beltrami	70
Mahnomen	51

A late second quarter surge broke it open and Fertile-Beltrami controlled play throughout the second half in a 70-51 decision over Mahnomen.

Fertile-Beltrami led just 14-11 at the end of the first quarter, but spread it out to a 36-24 halftime cushion and lengthened it to 57-40 by the end of the third quarter.

Karl Lisburg, a 5-10 senior, poured in 27 points for the winners, with senior frontliners Jeff McCollum and Chad Mosher getting 15 and 14 points, respectively. Football standout Charlie Stock led the Indians with 20 points, but he was the only double figure scorer for Mahnomen.

The game doubled as a Pine-to-Prairie Conference contest for the two participants, just like the afternoon quarterfinal Marshall County Central vs. Roseau ball game was counted in the Nordics' and Rams' North Border Conference standings.

Kennedy	39

One of Thief River Falls' better offensive efforts of the season staked the Prowlers to a 12-0 headstart, but it was their defense that wound up preserving the 53-39 triumph over Kennedy.

It was the Prowlers' first win in five starts this winter. Kennedy fell to 3-2.

Both coaches agreed that it was Thief River Falls' switching defensive sets that set the tempo for the game.

"I think we changed defenses effectively," explained Thief River Falls coach Tom Hunt. "We were changing quite a bit, and I think we kept them off balance with it. I think that's what won it for us."

Kennedy coach Louis Deere echoed similar thoughts for a few moments later when he said, "Thief River played a good defensive ball game. Their changing defenses kept us a bit off guard."

An 8-for-12 first quarter shooting effort by the Prowlers, combined with a 2-for-11 showing by the Rockets — who missed their first eight shots — pushed Thief River Falls ahead 12-0 at the start. Tim Kruse got inside for a basket to start it; Jeff Langan hit one from the side; Jeff

MIDDLE RIVER center Tom Neumann reached for a rebound as Argyle defenders looked on during Tuesday's Thief River Falls Christmas Classic high school basketball invitational tournament-opening game in the Lincoln gym. John Scheff of Middle River (13), along with Kevin Gruhut (45) and John Keller of Argyle watched the action. Argyle won the game 71-39.

UNCONTESTED AS he slipped inside for a lay-up, Marshall County Central forward Kevin Boe scored two of his 13 points on this first half shot against Roseau Tuesday during the Thief River Falls Christmas Classic high school basketball invitational tournament. The Nordics beat the Rams 74-60.

Prowlers Lose To Rams

Thief River Falls managed just 11 shots on goal Tuesday in losing a 5-1 Section 8 high school hockey game at Roseau.

Roseau climbed to 6-0 with the win, while Thief River Falls fell to 1-4. The Prowlers finish the 1983 portion of their 1983-84 schedule Thursday with a 7:30 p.m. game at Grand Forks Red River.

Kirby Espe scored twice for the Rams, who received single goals from Bruce Helgeson, Paul Broten and Lyle Dahlgren.

Joe Blankenfeld scored Thief River Falls' only goal at the 12-minute mark of the first period. Roseau led 2-1 after one period and carried a 5-1 lead into the scoreless third period.

Roseau goalie Troy Olson was forced to make just 10 saves all night, two in the first period and four each in the second and third periods. Thief River Falls netminder Steve Solheim stopped 21 of the 26 shots he faced.

"We're very disappointed in our play and in our overall effort," offered Thief River Falls coach Wendall Grand. "We passed the puck very poorly. And when you don't make two good passes in a row all night you aren't going to get many good scoring opportunities."

Roseau was a 4-2 winner in the junior varsity game, dropping Thief River Falls' JV record to 3-3.

The saying, "rain is good for fishing," is true, says National Wildlife's Ranger Rick magazine. Insects may be knocked into a lake or stream by wind or raindrops, which brings insect-eating fish, such as bluegills, to the surface, where it's easier for people to catch them. Raindrops also break up the smooth surface of the water, making it harder for fish to see people fishing.

Middle River Girls Win Warren Basketball Title

Middle River girls, in addition to extending their season-opening winning streak to seven games, collected a championship trophy by beating Alvarado and host Warren in the Ponies' four-team holiday invitational high school basketball tournament.

Coach Tom Neibauer's Skippers got by Alvarado 37-33 Thursday in the opening round semifinals, then shaded Warren 32-30 in Friday's championship game.

Warren was a first-round winner over Hallock 48-30. Alvarado bounced back to defeat Hallock 40-36 for consolation honors.

Middle River, like the rest of the area teams, will be idle until after the First of the Year. The Skippers (7-0) return to action Tuesday, Jan. 3, at home against Strandquist. Also scheduled that night will be Marshall County Central (4-2) at Badger and Grygla (2-5) at Tri-County. Returning to play Thursday, Jan. 5, will be Goodridge (1-3) at Alvarado and Plummer (3-3) at Climax.

Jody Christofferson scored 12 points and Paul Rantanen had 10 for the winners. Kristi Yanish matched Holtz with 10 points for the losers. Holtz scored eight points in the first half and was limited to just two second half free throws.

Third annual Prowler Alumni game was a big success, with over 50 players taking part in the Christmas Night event in the old arena.

A nice crowd was on hand to watch two groups of alumni play two periods of hockey each. TRFAHA would like to thank the players and organizers of the game for their efforts.

I would also like to thank those people who remembered me this Christmas season with many kind "remarks" regarding my swimming "talents" and for the nice gifts, such as goggles, nose plugs and snorkels.

DEFENSIVE STAND by Argyle's John Keller blocked Middle River guard Kevin McKeever's path to the basket Tuesday in the Thief River Falls Christmas Classic high school basketball invitational tournament opening round quarterfinal game at the Lincoln gym. McKeever scored 17 points for the Skippers, but the Eagles won handily, 71-39.

1. Since they started bucks only season and now issue doe permits by computer drawing, the adult bucks and does are getting a shorter and blockier body — can you tell me why this is? Also, they should go to a five-day season for all types of hunting as there are several adult dry does taken and that's because they are spooked too much for too long.

Each year during the deer hunting season, the Department of Natural Resources monitors huntercheck stations at Blackduck, Cotton, Hinkley and Garrison. At these check stations, we determine the age, sex, and weight of each animal examined. Over the years we have examined thousands of deer and have not noticed a trend to a shorter, blockier body. In addition, we have recently completed a 10-year study of the reproductive and physiological condition of female deer in the spring. By cutting open thousands of does that had been killed by automobiles, we found virtually all adult does to be pregnant. Most of these does came from the forested part of the state where there is a 16-day hunting season. Our conclusion is the length of the hunting season does not prevent female deer from being bred. We also found that very few female fawns are bred their first year. In other words, fawns born in the spring of 1983, will not be bred until the fall of 1984, when they are 1½ years old. Once a doe reaches 1½ years of age, she will be bred each year and have fawns the following spring. Jim Breyen, assistant regional wildlife supervisor.

2. I noticed while hunting partridges, that some seem to be red in color and some more grey in color — please explain.

This is simply a color variation of the ruffed grouse. Color phases range from rusty-red with a bronze tail band to silver-grey with a black tail band. There are dozens of combinations of these two color phases. Jim Breyen, wildlife supervisor.

Prowlers Play Fertile-Beltrami On Thursday

Hamerlinck put in an offensive rebound; John Brandt, who just stepped into the game, canned a short jumper; Kruse scored on a rebound; and Kruse finished off a fast break as the dozen points were registered with 5:15 elapsed.

Thief River Falls led 16-6 as the first quarter closed and maintained a 30-21 halftime cushion when Brandt scored on a fast break off a jump ball at the far end of the court and Randy Erickson took a feed underneath in the final 47 seconds after Kennedy had pulled within 26-21.

There was very little offense to be had in the third quarter, but Thief River Falls still held on to that nine-point difference, 36-27.

Final Kennedy challenge came at the start of the fourth quarter when Tommy Jon Deere hit a short turnaround jumper to make it a still-interesting 36-29 ball game. But Langan scored on a rebound off a missed Thief River Falls free throw, and was fouled on the play. Although he missed the chance at a three-point play, the Prowlers controlled the rebound on that one, too, leading to a pair of free throws by Hamerlinck on a bonus opportunity that stretched the Prowlers' lead to a now safe 40-29.

Those plays typified the Prowlers' success. They outrebounded the smaller Rockets 32-19 and had a productive 17-for-30 night at the free throw line where Kennedy was 7-for-12. In the second half, the Prowlers had attempted 16 free throws before the Rockets even stepped to the line with just 1:27 left in the game.

"They out-played us on the boards," nodded Deere. "We got off to a bad start, too. That set the tempo."

"Kruse, Hamerlinck and Erickson did a pretty good job for us up front defensively and on the boards," mentioned Hunt, who still wasn't satisfied with the Prowlers' overall offensive effort. "Our inconsistency is frustrating," he said.

Brandt led the Prowlers with 15 points. Hamerlinck and Kruse each had eight, and they combined for 15 rebounds. Deere, a 6-4 junior center, and Scott Johnson, a 6-1 junior forward, had 16 points each for the Rockets, but their teammates added just four points to that total.

Thief River Falls shot 42 per cent from the field (18-for-43) and 56 per cent at the free throw line. Kennedy shot 31 per cent from the field (16-for-51) and 58 per cent at the line. The Rockets topped the turnover charts 15-13.

'Designated Driver' Idea Is Encouraged

"Designated driver" program is one of the best ways to prevent alcohol-related traffic accidents, according to the Minnesota safety council.

"Most people don't consider alternative means of transportation if the person who drove to a bar or New Year's Eve party becomes intoxicated," says Robert L. Anderson, Minnesota safety council president. "Those who have had too much to drink don't give up their car keys easily, and they don't always respond to logic."

"Designated driver" program can help avoid a dangerous and embarrassing situation, he said.

Here's how it works: one person, selected in advance to serve as the "designated driver," refrains entirely from drinking alcoholic beverages and is responsible for driving everyone home safely after holiday festivities. At the next party or outing, another person assumes this responsibility, so the responsibility simply rotates, providing safety for everyone.

"The program is advocated by the National safety council and other organizations interested in preventing alcohol-related traffic accidents because it works," says Anderson. "It's been successful in Europe for years." In Sweden and the United Kingdom, for example, "designated drivers" often place their car keys in their empty beverage glasses so that hosts will not encourage them to drink alcohol, Anderson adds.

Traffic statistics for 1983 are not in yet but are estimated at about 600 fatalities. Traffic accidents killed 581 Minnesotans in 1982. Alcohol is a factor in an estimated 55 per cent of fatal motor-vehicle accidents.

FmHA Resumes Loan Program To Aid Farmer

New regulations were distributed to Farmers Home administration (FmHA) field offices last week, with the purpose of resuming the economic emergency loan program, according to state director Russ Bjorhus.

Loan program was first authorized in 1978, expiring in September of 1981, after more than $6.6 billion had been loaned. It is being reopened for the 1984 fiscal year under order of the U.S. district court in Washington, D.C., with authorization to lend a total of $600 million in direct and guaranteed loans to farmers and ranchers suffering economic stress caused by the cost-price squeeze.

Economic emergency loans are authorized for farmers and ranchers who are directly and primarily engaged in agricultural production and intend to continue, if they are unable to get sufficient credit from their regular lenders and need credit to maintain viable farming operations. FmHA can loan up to $400,000 to any one borrower under the program. Interest rates for direct economic emergency loans will be 10.25 per cent for operating loans and 10.75 per cent for farm ownership loans.

Among permitted uses of loan funds are: financing 1984 crop production; purchasing essential livestock, feed and equipment; paying family living and farm production debts that cannot be extended, and paying delinquent installments on farm and real estate debts if a lender is demanding payment.

Goodridge School Board

December 28, 1983
Regular Board Meeting
Ind. School Dist. 561
Goodridge, Minnesota
December 19, 1983

Members present: Norma Hanson, Richard Parnow, Sharon Howard, Supt. Don Langan, Paul Troska, Larry Vigen, Rodney Wayne, Adm. Asst. Gordon Henrickson.

The meeting was called to order by Norma Hanson, Chairperson, at 10:10 a.m. in Dr. Langan's office.

The minutes of the November 22, 1983 meeting were approved.

Richard Parnow moved, Rodney Wayne seconded, to accept computer checks, handpayables, and extra payroll for payment. Carried. (See reports No. 3.11, 3.12, 3.13 attached to the official board minutes.)

Dr. Langan presented cash balance review for all funds. (See report No. 3.2 attached to the official board minutes.) Rodney Wayne moved, Paul Troska seconded, to accept the district investment report as presented by Dr. Langan. Carried. (See report No. 3.3 attached to the official board minutes.)

Honor roll procedures were described. Dr. Langan explained that the actual honor roll is published in January and in June. The November and March honor roll list applies to mid-semester achievement. Only the January and June honor rolls become part of a student's permanent record.

Several program concepts were discussed for possible implementation beginning with the 1984-1985 school year. These included possibility of departmentalizing certain programs in grades 5 and 6, developing a formally structured technology program; developing an independent learning center; establishing performance criteria for all grades and courses; raising graduation requirements. The administration was directed to bring to the Board in January planning statements with program details. The Board would review the planning documents in January and February. (See report No. 6.2 attached to the official board minutes.)

Russ Christianson reviewed the June 30, 1983, audit. Of particular note was the fact that although the District's fund balance increased, its cash situation decreased by more than $100,000. This was due entirely to the tax shift that occurred in the spring of 1983. The district's financial procedures were given a clean opinion. The Board extended their appreciation to Mr. Christianson for his presentation and the work conducted for the district by his firm. Larry Vigen moved, Sharon Howard seconded, to accept the June 30, 1983, audit as presented by Russ Christianson, on behalf of Moser, Christianson, and Company. Carried.

Stage drapes were discussed. Richard Parnow moved, Paul Troska seconded to increase the 1983-1984 building improvement account $2,250. Carried. Dr. Langan and Sharon Howard were authorized to secure prices and select a drapery firm to install new drapes.

C.P.R. classes were discussed. Bus drivers and secretaries would be encouraged to receive C.P.R. training. The class will be advertized with the intent to provide district patrons with the opportunity to take the class also. Dr. Langan was directed to local C.P.R. instructors who would be able to best meet the district's training needs. (See report No. 9.2 attached to the official board minutes.)

Norma Hanson discussed the Ag in the Classroom project, and possibility of an artist residency program.

The Board Negotiating Committee and the Teachers Association had reached a tentative agreement on all salary and language items. The contract was recommended for ratification by Dr. Langan and Paul Troska. Following discussion, the Board determined to wait until the first week in January for a vote on the contract. (See report No. 9.3 as attached to the official board minutes.)

Larry Vigen moved, Rodney Wayne seconded, to direct the administration to evaluate all district programs and to provide the Board with recommendations for possible discontinuance or curtailment. Those in favor: Larry Vigen, Paul Troska, Richard Parnow, Rodney Wayne, Sharon Howard, Norma Hanson; Those opposed: none. Motion Carried. (See resolution No. 9.4 attached to the official board minutes.)

Rick Nelson presented his request for a one year leave of absence from his contract. The board will be reviewing Mr. Nelson's request and will act on it at a future meeting. (See report No. 10.1 attached to the official board minutes.)

Rodney Wayne moved, Sharon Howard seconded, to hire Aldon Hyland as elementary basketball coach for 1983-1984 season with salary as per negotiated agreement. Carried. (See report No. 10.2 attached to the official board minutes.)

Mr. Henrickson reviewed the bus accident as the actions taken by the district's insurance carrier.

Dr. Langan reviewed the MSBA conference registrations, board claims due for the second quarter, superintendent's contract language pertaining to referrals of patron concerns, PERA statute governing service allowance and temporary lay offs, community education classes for winter 1984, and labor charges for bus maintenance.

Larry Vigen moved, Sharon Howard seconded, to set the regular January meeting for Monday, January 23, at 7:30 p.m. Carried.

Meeting adjourned at 3:17 p.m.

DRIFTING SNOW over the Christmas weekend created this sculpture from a stack of split wood on a Thief River Falls yard. Temperatures moderated for the Monday holiday following Christmas day Sunday and continued through Tuesday. Colder temperatures returned today with sub-zero readings again being recorded. Wood piles are rapidly dwindling as those who have turned to the renewable source of heat have had to fire heavily to ward off this winter's cold.

NFO Starting Major Grain Price Effort

Grain department of the National Farmers Organization (NFO) recently announced plans for the most aggressive effort to raise grain prices ever undertaken by the organization.

It is designed to block together a major portion of 1983 corn and soybean crops for collective bargaining, holding it until the Gulf coast price rises to $4.50 per bushel for corn and $10 per bushel for soybeans.

In addition, a wheat block, covering the major wheat producing states, has been established with a base price of $4.75 for ordinary wheat in Minneapolis, Kansas City and North Coast, and a price of $2.35 for oats in Minneapolis.

Organizers of the blocking effort note that this should be a good time for farmers to command a fair price, citing November projections on ending stocks of corn for the 83-84 marketing year of 512 million bushels, a reduction of 76 per cent from this year's figure. Projections for soybeans suggest that less than a month's supply will be left at the end of the marketing year. NFO officials say even those figures may overestimate the grain supply. Although government carry-over projections on what are high, grain department officials note that a large portion is in a reserve program with a price on it, isolating it from the cash market. They further note that feed usage of what is expected to be up, which with the increase in corn prices should help pull wheat prices up.

Targeted countries are now blocking both corn and soybeans in barge-load quantities, and the supply tightening effect of this activity is expected to affect major grain exchange traders.

NFO leaders are asking farm organizations and individual commodity groups to actively support the $4.50 corn, $10 soybean, $4.75 wheat and $2.35 oats blocks. Farmers who would like further information on these and other NFO programs should contact their county grain committees or zone coordinator Ron Kotrba, Rt. 2, Goodridge; phone 378-4277.

Prescription Drugs Can Affect Driving

While many people know they shouldn't drive when they have been drinking, they forget that driving while under the influence of prescription and certain over-the-counter medications can also be hazardous, says the Automotive information council (AIC).

Both kinds of drugs can cause problems when you drive if you aren't aware of possible side effects. Pain killers, tranquilizers, blood pressure medications, muscle relaxants, as well as other prescription drugs, affect a driver's ability because they can cause drowsiness, dizziness, blurred vision, confusion and lack of muscle control. Many over-the-counter remedies sold for colds or allergies can cause drowsiness and dizziness as well.

Other considerations are the side effects of mixing prescribed drugs with either over-the-counter medications or alcohol. For example, combining two drugs that cause mild drowsiness such as a tranquilizer and an antihistamine can be a mistake because it can magnify the side effects of certain drugs.

AIC lists the following suggestions to avoid problems when you must take medications and drive:

— Understand what a medication is going to you before you drive. Ask your doctor about the drug and its possible side effects.

— Read all the small print on the labels of over-the-counter medications. These drugs must warn consumers of the possible side effects and the risks of taking the product.

— Never take another person's presciption drug. Drugs are prescribed for a person under their own set of physical conditions. A drug good for the person it was prescribed for may be harmful to you.

While illegal drugs and alcohol abuse may grab most of the public's attention, prescription drugs and over-the-counter medications can affect drivers and can be contributing factors in automobile accidents, says AIC.

VA Now Has Special Toll Free Hotline

Veterans administration (VA) has inaugurated a special toll-free telephone information hotline for former prisoners of war.

Hotline was established for ex-POW's to inform the VA if they feel they are not recognized as ex-POW's at VA medical centers or regional offices, or if they feel their treatment is not consistent with the intent of the Pirsoners of War Health Care benefits act of 1981, the VA said.

Act broadened VA's authority to provide health care for ex-POW's and also liberalized rules for determining whether certain medical conditions can be considered service-connected.

VA officials said that the 24-hour toll-free number, 800-821-8139, is available to over 93,000 ex-POW's nationwide, and will be staffed by a select group of POW specialists from the Washington, D.C., regional office during regular business hours (8 a.m.-4:30 p.m. EST). After-hours and weekend callers may leave a recorded message on the hotline.

New information hotline will supplement the existing toll-free services provided for all veterans to VA regional offices nationwide, and is in addition to the ex-POW coordinators assigned at all 172 VA medical centers.

State Jobless Rate Rises From October

Minnesota's unemployment rate was 6.8 per cent in November, which was up from 6.4 per cent in October, but the increase represents a typical seasonal change, Commissioner Barbara Beerhalter of the Minnesota department of economic security reported recently.

The .4 of a percentage point increase in the state unemployment rate if slightly less than the average October to November increase of .5 of a percentage point.

November rise in Minnesota's jobless rate reversed the downward trend of the past four months, but the November rate is significantly less than the 7.9 per cent rate reported a year ago, Beerhalter said.

Comparable national unemployment rate for November was 8.1 per cent.

Beerhalter said that the total number of persons employed in the state decreased .8 per cent from October 1983. This seasonal shift was less than the 12-year average decline of 1.3 per cent for the period, she added. Compared to November 1982, employment increased 4.9 per cent.

Wayne Graner, department analyst, said that non-agricultural wage and salary employment declined 2,100 from a month ago. "Seasonal changes were evident in retail trade, which was up 2,700, food and kindred products, down 1,800, and construction, down 3,700," he said.

Number of unemployed persons in Minnesota in November was 150,800, up 9,000 from October and down 19,600 from November a year ago.

Minnesota's labor force in November was 2,223,200 persons, down 7,700 from October and up 77,200 from November last year.

Compared to November a year ago, the size of the Minnesota civilian labor force increased by 3.6 per cent; and the number of unemployed workers decreased by 11.5 per cent.

Average November weekly earnings of production workers in the manufacturing sector increased from $391.64 to $391.88 over the month, as a result of a slightly shorter work week (40.4 vs. 40.5 hours in October) and a slightly higher hourly wage ($9.70 vs. $9.67 in October), Graner said.

Unemployment rate pertains to the entire labor force and is not used to determine whether unemployment insurance benefits will be extended beyond the 26-week maximum. Unemployment rate among persons covered by unemployment insurance is used to determine whether the benefit payments will be extended.

MICROWAVE MAGIC

MAKING POPCORN

Stop-by-step, this is how you make fresh popcorn right in your microwave oven.

With microwave ovens already cooking in some 40 percent of America's kitchens—and that number is growing daily—homemakers have acquired a whole new set of cooking equipment to work with these appliances.

Why shouldn't you cook in conventional pots and pans when using a microwave? Food must absorb the microwaves to get the cooking done. Those waves must pass through the cooking utensil. Most plastic containers, glass and paper will allow the microwaves to penetrate. With metal, they would just bounce off.

Just as there are new types of cookware, now there are new foods made exclusively for microwaves as well. One good example is popcorn, packaged in its own quick and easy popping bag. Just introduced by FLAV•O•RITE, it's one of SUPER VALU Stores' new R-BRANDS of frozen foods, made just for microwave ovens.

The popcorn, which is to be prepared only in microwave ovens of at least 600 watts, is done simply by placing the bag seam side up in the oven. In about five minutes, the expanded bag may be opened to reveal a scrumptious snack of hot, freshly popped salted corn—a treat for young and old.

Each carton of the new popcorn includes three pop-and-serve bags and each bag turns out eight cups of freshly made popcorn.

Ring Out The Old

The old year wanes. The last sands trickle down the hourglass as the old man totters into irrevocable past and a lusty infant year begins.

Bells ring in church steeples, confetti rains, horns blow. People sing and shout and maybe shed a tear. Cries of "Happy New Year" fill the ears and fall on happy hearts, or sad.

To some, the old year brought joy and happiness. To others it held sadness and despair. Thus, men greet the new year differently; some with mockery, some with resolution, still others with a smile.

Whatever your feelings about the year ahead, there is one way to be sure of its promise. God is the source of all goodness. Make Him and His Church a part of your life and you will find the strength and inspiration to make each day prosper.

The sum of its days shapes the year.

MN Innovation Center To Help Small Business

Sally J. Rigler
Executive Director
Project Innovation

Lt. Gov. Marlene Johnson has announced the establishment of the Minnesota Innovation center. The center, part of Minnesota Project Innovation, will help small businesses obtain federal grants of up to $500,000 through the small business innovation research (SBIR) grant programs.

Sally J. Rigler, on loan from ADC-Magnetic controls company, is executive director of the center.

Created by the small business development act of 1982, the SBIR programs require federal agencies with research and development budgets exceeding $100 million to set aside funds for small businesses engaged in technology-related research. Grants are awarded to small businesses, organized for profit, with 500 or fewer employees. Individual entrepreneurs also are eligible for grants.

Minnesota Project Innovation, which is chaired by Johnson, is a statewide partnership of government, business and other sectors. Its purpose is to promote technological innovation and technology transfer, and to create private-sector financing opportunities and new jobs for Minnesotans. It seeks to make Minnesota one of the top five states in total SBIR grants by 1987 by helping small businesses obtain the grants.

Minnesota Innovation center is a resource center that will disseminate information about the SBIR programs and will refer applicants to technical advisers to help them develop proposals.

"With the development of this new statewide support system, Minnesota entrepreneurs now will be able to successfully compete for part of the $136 million that will be awarded under the SBIR programs in fiscal 1984," Johnson told a news conference at the center.

"The opening of this center is yet another example of the public and private sectors working together to promote economic development for all Minnesotans. I am confident that we will meet our goal of making Minnesota a national leader in this program by 1987."

Earlier this year, Governor Rudy Perpich appointed a commission to make recommendations on developing a statewide program to help small businesses obtain grants under the SBIR programs. That commission, chaired by S. Thomas Moser, national director of high technology practice for the accounting firm of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., recommended that a central resource center be established as part of the Minnesota Project Innovation network.

Eleven federal agencies are participating in the SBIR programs, which are coordinated by the Small Business administration. There are three phases in the SBIR programs. First-phase awards of $50,000 or less are made to evaluate the scientific and technical merit of projects. Phase Two awards of $500,000 or less are made to further develop projects that offer the most potential. In Phase Three, private-sector financing will support the commercialization of research developed in phase one and two.

Control Data corporation is providing support for the center, which is located at the Control Data business and technology center in downtown Minneapolis. Additional funding will be sought from the state government.

The center's telephone number is (612) 376-6084. Persons from outside the Twin Cities can make toll-free calls to the center by dialing 1-800-642-1073.

Changes in Law Effective in 1984

Several changes in Social Security, made as a result of a new law passed last year, are effective as 1984 begins, a Social Security representative said recently.

One of the most important changes, the spokesperson said, is that all employees of nonprofit organizations who were not covered by Social Security are now covered and will pay Social Security taxes on their earnings.

Also covered, beginning in 1984, are all newly-hired employees of the Federal Government. In addition, certain current Federal employees are also covered, including:

- Legislative branch employees who were not covered by the Civil Service retirement system by the end of 1983.
- All members of Congress, the President, and the Vice-President.
- Sitting Federal judges.
- Most political appointees, including non-career members of the senior executive service.

Other changes in the law, effective in 1984, include:

- Benefits will be continued after remarriage for disabled surviving spouses 50-59, disabled divorced surviving spouses 50-59, and divorced surviving spouses 60 or older. Before, this provision applied only to surviving spouses 60 or older.
- Benefits to disabled widows and widowers are increased to 71.5 percent of the unreduced benefit amount the deceased worker would have received. Before, a disabled survivor's benefit ranged from 50 to 71.5 percent, depending on the person's age.

More information about the changes in the Social Security law can be obtained at any Social Security office. The address and telephone number of the nearest Social Security office can be found in the telephone directory.

QUESTIONS&ANSWERS

Q. I receive Social Security disability benefits, but I also work. Can work expenses related to my disability (such as my wheelchair) be deducted from my earnings when SSA decides if I'm involved in gainful work?

A. Yes. Certain impairment-related expenses for items or services you pay for and need in order to work can be deducted from your earnings in determining whether you are performing substantial gainful work. It does not matter if you also need the services or items (such as a wheelchair) for daily living. The cost of medical devices, equipment, certain attendant care services, prosthesis, and similar items and services are generally deductible. The cost of drugs or medical services are deductible only if required because of your condition. Impairment-related work expenses can be deducted only if you keep a record of them and provide proof of payment for all expenses. Social Security will decide what is deductible and the amount of the deduction.

Q. I am disabled, and I receive Social Security disability benefits. I've heard so much about the Social Security Administration's reviews of disability cases. I'm wondering whether I'll lose benefits.

A. Your disability checks will be paid for as long as you cannot work because of a severe condition. They will not necessarily continue indefinitely. Because of advances in medical science and rehabilitation techniques, an increasing number of disabled people recover from serious accidents and illnesses. Also, many individuals overcome serious conditions and lead productive lives in spite of them. Your case will be reviewed periodically to make sure you meet all requirements for disability checks. This review will be conducted every 3 years unless the Social Security Administration determines a shorter or longer review period is appropriate.

Q. I just found out that my SSI checks are being stopped because Social Security says I'm no longer eligible. I want to appeal this decision. Do I need an attorney? I really can't afford one.

A. No. Most people handle their business themselves, with the help of the people in the Social Security office. But, if you wish to be represented by an attorney, or other person of your choice, we will be glad to work with your representative just as we would work with you.

If you get Social Security checks, be sure to notify Social Security when you move or change your address.

New Vehicle Section Set Up In Minn.

New commercial vehicle section has been set up within the Minnesota department of public safety's state patrol division. Commercial vehicle section will expand in-depth mechanical inspections of heavy commercial vehicles. Inspections will be similar to those now made of school buses every year.

This new section will be headed by Captain Charles D. Geiger, a 13-year veteran of the state patrol. Commercial vehicle section will consolidate a number of existing inspection programs including school bus inspection; platform and mobile weight enforcement and, civil weight investigation. Colonel D. Roger Ledding, chief of the Minnesota state patrol said "these very specialized enforcement activities can no longer be fragmented." Formantion of the new section will improve levels of service and better coordinate inspection activity.

New vehicle inspection program will involve considerable cooperation with interstate trucking firms, many of which requested such a program. State patrol will train and certify inspectors from larger firms (those having 15 or more power units) to perform detailed inspections and will authorize inspectors to affix official state inspection stickers to qualifying vehicles. Smaller carriers not qualifying for a certified inspector can obtain a free inspection from the state patrol.

First training session to certify company inspectors will be conducted on January 9, at 9:30 a.m. at the public safety-MNDOT training center located at 1900 W. County Road I, New Brighton. Class is open to experienced mechanics and safety representatives who are employed full time by Minnesota based carriers operating 15 or more power units licensed in Minnesota. Course will cover the details necessary for administering the program as well as the bureau of motor carrier safety requirements. Course is limited to 30 inspectors.

Candidates will be selected from qualified appliants on a first come basis with priority given to one inspector per carrier. Additional classes will be scheduled as dictated by the demand for the training.

Those interested in becoming certified inspectors should apply in writing identifying:

(1) their employing motor carrier by name and address,

(2) applicant's position with the carrier,

(3) the number of power units the carrier has licensed in Minnesota.

Send letters of application to: Captain Charles Geiger, Minnesota State Patrol, Commercial vehicle Enforcement Section, 107 Transportation Building, St. Paul, MN 55155.

An additional, more detailed training session on inspection procedures is available through 916 Area Vocational Technical Institute. This recommended training is intended to augment, but cannot replace the required training conducted by the state patrol. For more information, contact: Mr. Tom Johnstone, 614 Vo-Tech, 3300 Century Avenue, White Bear Lake, MN 55109.

Major initiatives undertaken in fiscal year 1982 by the U.S. Department of Labor's Mine Safety and Health Administration (MSHA) included: to reduce adversarial relations between labor and management over safety and health in mining community; to eliminate needless regulatory burdens, and to encourage positive efforts by industry and labor to protect miners' safety and health.

NEW AMERICAN COOKING

From The Kitchens Of Betty Crocker

New Cookbook Highlights New Cooking Trend

The American people care about physical fitness and good nutrition now as never before. Americans are turning to cooking methods that require less fat, such as poaching, steaming, baking and stir-frying. Less salt is put on food and more lemon, garlic, onions, spices and herbs are used to enhance flavors.

Now there's a cookbook tailored to America's new style in foods. It's Betty Crocker's New American Cooking and it's a volume filled with recipes for those who seek well-balanced diets of lighter meals and more healthful snacks.

This cookbook is more than a collection of 350 delicious, tempting recipes. It's also a common sense guide to good nutrition. Each recipe is tagged with its calorie count per serving, and good sources of important nutrients are identified in many recipes.

The book is a Random House publication, priced at $14.95 and available at book and department stores.

Here's a sample recipe:

Chicken Provençal

Good source of protein, niacin and vitamin A.

2-1/2 to 3-pound broiler-fryer chicken
1/3 cup all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon dried basil leaves
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon dried oregano leaves
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon dried marjoram leaves
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
16 small pitted ripe olives
8 medium carrots, cut into fourths
8 small whole onions
4 medium potatoes, cut into fourths
1 cup chicken broth
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 tablespoon cold water

High in nutrition, low in calories—Chicken Provencal.

Cut chicken into pieces; cut each breast half into halves and remove skin. Mix flour, paprika, basil, salt, oregano, pepper and marjoram. Coat chicken with flour mixture. Heat oil in 4-quart Dutch oven until hot. Cook chicken until brown on all sides, about 15 minutes. Add olives, carrots, onions and potatoes; pour chicken broth over vegetables. Heat to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and cook until chicken is done, about 45 minutes. Remove chicken and vegetables; keep warm. Mix cornstarch and cold water; stir into liquid in Dutch oven. Heat to boiling, stirring constantly. Boil and stir 1 minute. Serve sauce with chicken. 7 servings; 340 calories per serving.

AGRI-GROWTH REPORT!

by RUSS SCHWANDT

I want to salute, congratulate and encourage the eleven state corn producers who were recently elected to the new Minnesota Corn Research and Promotion Council. These eleven farmers have a great responsibility on their shoulders. They must, on a very short time line, draft a proposed marketing order that will be the foundation of a grower-financed checkoff fund to promote corn.

Currently, they are working hand-in-hand with our Minnesota Department of Agriculture and Commissioner Jim Nichols, who is enormously helpful and personally supportive of their efforts. Presently, the group is working feverishly to draft a proposed marketing order that will be completed in time for the first public hearing, which is slated for January 6, 1984. The hearing coincides with the dates of the annual convention of the Minnesota Corn Growers Association at the Radisson South Hotel in Bloomington.

I have long been a strong proponent of the efforts to establish a state corn checkoff. And why not? I am one of the nearly 60,000 farmers in this state who raises corn, a crop whose annual value—from this state alone—is far in excess of $1 billion. I realize the great impact that checkoff funds can have in helping to promote markets for our crops. Imagine, if we have a checkoff amounting to just one quarter of one cent on each bushel of Minnesota corn, we would easily raise over $1 million for our Corn Research and Promotion Council in a one-year period.

I have always been extremely proud of the fact that the agricultural commodity checkoff concept was originated while I was Commissioner of Agriculture. The producers of milk, beef, eggs, turkeys, soybeans, wheat, potatoes, paddy wild rice, and dry edible beans have approved and implemented their checkoff programs. The time is long past for the corn producers of this state to do likewise.

Russ Schwandt is a farmer, agribusinessman, former Minnesota Commissioner of Agriculture in the 1960's and President of the Minnesota Agri-Growth Council, which was created to speak out for all groups, associations and companies in the state's agriculture industry.

More On Wolves

Our friend Delmar Hagen, a longtime resident of the Gatzke area, makes no secret of his feelings about timber wolves. He despises them. And he brought us a column written by a friend of his in Montana, Byron Grosfield, who writes "Yarns from the Yellowstone". Grosfield tells of an experience from many years ago and gives his opinion of wolf protection, as follows:

My grandfather, Ben Lavold, came into the Melville country in 1886, and shortly after homesteaded at the foot of the Porcupine Butte and began ranching. In 1901 he leased a small pasture in the Tronrud Basin, where he wintered 13 head of horses not needed around the ranch. About a mile separated the pasture from the home ranch on Sweet Grass Creek. Here is the story of the horses and a pack of wolves as related to me by Stanley Lavold (Ben's eldest son) about 15 years ago.

One evening in December the temperature registered -20 degrees, a foot of snow covered the ground, and the moon shone brightly, highlighting the frost crystals in the air. When Lavold and Stanley walked to the house after chores, the quavering, hoarse howl of a wolf shattered the silence. The quest cold air carried the sound so well they thought the wolf must be close by. Soon other wolves joined in, adding their deep, eerie voices to the Satanic chorus.

Ben Lavold spoke to his son, "I wonder what the wolves are up to tonight. They are calling each other."

They did not have long to wait. At 10:30 that night Stanley wakened to screams of pain and terror from the horses over in the basin. He knew the wolves had attacked the horses and no one could help them. By the time anyone could get there, it would be too late.

Early next morning Stanley, nine years old at the time, was wakened by his father, and after a hurried breakfast, they hooked a gentle team to a bobsled, and headed for the horse pasture. Lavold picked up his 30-30 rifle, in case a straggler wolf had stuck around.

As they looked down from the top of the hill overlooking the Basin, they noticed a large black splotch. Later they discovered it to be blood-trampled snow. They saw what they supposed to be dead horses, but as they drove closer, eight of the horses — still living — raised their heads and struggled painfully to their front feet. They neighed piteously as they recognized the team coming towards them. Their hind legs flopped helplessly; the tendons had been cut by the slashing jaws of the blood-crazed wolves. The other five horses were dead and partially devoured. Stanley held the lines controlling the team, shutting his eyes while his father mercifully put the cripples out of their misery.

"I still wake up at times, frightened by the recurring nightmare. I can hear the half-human screams of those tortured animals. The hideous outcries of terror-stricken horses with the wolf pack tearing away at them is something I can't forget, even after all these years."

Hopefully some day people in their comfortable homes, buying all their food in a supermarket, will understand the farmer and rancher and not compound their problems.

Many of these people consider the wolf an overgrown, misunderstood wild dog. They believe Old Lobo has the super intelligence to specifically and humanely control the wild game population and bypass domesticated stock.

For this reason, the wolf has been planted and protected in certain areas in order that man can be relieved of his problems, allowing him to say smugly, "It is Nature's way."

A Pandora's Box will be opened if wolves are allowed to propagate and the rancher not allowed to shoot them on sight.

Environmental Twilight Zone

Columnist Doug Schultz of the New Prague Times tells of visiting in the Adirondack Mountains of up-state New York a few years ago. An area resident with whom he caught a ride told him the spectacularly clear lakes were devoid of life due, he said, to acid rain. Schultz continues his column as follows:

It was almost a twilight-zone-like concept, but I had little reason to doubt the man's theory, first of all, because the man was some sort of hydrologist or natural resources researcher, he said, and he had been involved in testing in the area, and secondly, because of my own intuitive feeling about the environment.

"Yes, I was afraid something like this might happen some day," I thought to myself. I felt alone, in a way, as if the loss of life in the lake signaled the imminent death of other creatures around me in the forest.

Suddenly, the strangeness of those lakes became clearer than the water itself: there was not a speck of green anywhere on the bottom! Not a crayfish or a minnow, nor the thinnest strand of a weed.

Even the rockiest, coldest of BWCA lakes are lined with a thin green layer of algae or plant growth that provides sustenance, no doubt, to small creatures, evidence of the delicate natural balance in the area.

Needless to say, I shuddered with horror once again less than a couple years ago when a report concluded that many of Minnesota's northern lakes are susceptible to acid rain damage.

The loss of fish in those New York waters has hurt many businesses. Certainly one can imagine what a devastating impact on the sport fishing business even the rumors of acid rain kill would have on northern Minnesota resort owners and outfitters.

According to some researchers, there is already evidence that acid rain may be falling on and causing damage to Minnesota waters. While it hasn't been determined definitely where this stuff is coming from, it seems a safe bet to me that it could be coming from the increasing number of refineries in the oil boom-towns of Calgary and Edmonton and others in Canada and from industries in cities in Ontario. It might also be coming via winds blowing from the southeast the pollutants of the southern Great Lakes region.

A feasible solution to acid rain would not be to ask these industries to shut down, nor to impose such rigid sanctions on them that we force them to shut down. That would be economic chaos.

By killing the life around us, we slowly strangle ourselves and erase future generations.

We must first of all search for a way to combat the effects of acid rain where it falls. Might it not be possible, through the introduction of basic nutrients to neutralize the acid, since the soils and lands in the area lack such basal chemistry? Or would that also wreak chaos?

Secondly, we must find an economical way to eliminate the harmful, acid-producing chemicals from the emissions of the culprit industries. At the very least, it seems a scheme of tax incentives could be devised to encourage or reward those industries that research and solve the problems they are creating.

As for that Canadian air coming down here. . . it will require some diplomacy, I fear, a commodity which America has been sorely lacking across the globe lately.

And the problem of one man's (nation's) exhaust defiling another man's intake only demonstrates this. We do indeed live on a small planet that is, like a ship at sea, a community unto itself that must learn to live, work and breathe together or perish.

Interesting Opinions:

Just think how great Jack Block would be sitting today. . . if he had been as smart as certain newspaper writers! He would have foreseen this drought, saved billions of dollars in government payments to farmers, avoided the political liabilities of PIK. . . and would not even need to be practicing living on a "food stamp" diet!

Let's give the Secretary his due. He got the grain embargo lifted and a long-term sales agreement with the USSR signed! He has reopened the door (temporarily shut because of the textile issue) to grain sales to the People's Republic of China! He has confronted Europeans subsidization of agricultural trade competition head-on! He did have the guts to go into a supermarket and face the cameras and reporters and make the point that sure, none of us would voluntarily choose a "food stamp" diet, but on the other hand, it's a pretty generous people that sees that everyone has at least an opportunity for three decent meals a day. He can still go home to his farm, climb into the tractor seat. . . and know what to do and how to do it! For a guy who is in an almost "no-win" job to start with, Jack Block has made significant contributions — Emmett Barker, president, Farm and Industrial Equipment Institute.

River Shipping Volume Hits All Time High

All time records for volume and gross farm value of crops shipped from Minnesota by barge down the Mississippi river in the 1983 waterway season that closed December 9 when the last two barges were inspected for export, according to Agriculture Commissioner Jim Nichols.

The final tally reported by the grain inspection division of the Minnesota Department of Agriculture for this season listed 6,575 barges cleared with loads exceeding 447.6 million bushels.

Estimated gross farm value of that export movement was more than $1.9 billion. That volume exceeded the 1982 season total of 294.9 million bushels and topped the 1981 season of 332.2 million bushels.

This year's gross farm value of the crops exported by barge from Minnesota terminal elevators was 1661 million more or 53 per cent higher than the prior record 1981 season, and it topped last year by more than $843 million or a 79 per cent gain in farm cash flow from export crops marketings by this one major transportation mode.

Corn lead in volume shipped by barge, more than 219.3 million bushels with an estimated gross farm value of $655.9 million. Commissioner Nichols noted that the volume was equal to 59 per cent of this year's estimated Minnesota corn crop.

Soybeans were high in gross farm value, with 117.4 million bushels barged bringing farmers estimated cash receipts of $858.3 million. That volume was equal to nearly 80 per-cent of the soybean crop harvested this fall.

Wheat exports via the river totaled more than 98.9 million bushels with a gross farm value of $375.7 million. That volume exceeded Minnesota's total 1983 wheat crop by more than 17 million bushels.

Other commodities in the barge export total for this season were almost 7 million bushels of oats worth $10.8 million, 4.2 million bushels of grain screenings valued at $12.7 million, and three quarters of one million bushels of sunflowers, rye and millet value at $2.7 million.

STRAIGHT TALK

Albert D. Hattis, Associate Professor of Business and Holder of the Schwan Endowed Chair for Free Enterprise, Southwest State University, Marshall

After checking in upon arrival for a speaking engagement, a bank vice president introduced herself and indicated that she had been delegated to greet and introduce me. She asked some questions to prepare an introduction. One of her questions, "Have you ever been to this part of the country, before?" My response, "Back in 1950, when you were probably in grade school, I lived near here.

The young lady immediately let me know that she hadn't even been born in 1950. I excused myself, took a look in a mirror, and suddenly realized that I hadn't noticed the wrinkles; bags and fade spots that had been added to a more-than-50-year-old face which I had been shaving, almost daily, for about 40 years. The changes had been so gradual that I hadn't noticed them as they occurred.

This may explain why we don't solve problems as they appear, because they may develop so slowly that they aren't noticed until a crisis arises. Furthermore, the definition of a crisis, a critical moment, is really a matter of judgement varying with individuals.

For example, if you have read, listened or viewed the news, you have heard about the problems of American industries and the inability of many to survive. You are aware of the millions and billions of dollars in losses, the bankruptcies, and the cries of those who are hurting. Let's look at just one of those industries, the airlines, who are luckier than most because they have little foreign competition in their domestic flights.

Over the years, with regulation of rates and routes, the airlines automatically increased their costs, particularly wages and benefits and bought too many expensive planes. It is not uncommon to find pilots and stewardesses working less than 20 hours per week, with pilots earning up to $140,000 per year and stewardesses earning up to $41,000 per year, with mechanics putting in more hours and earning $30,000-40,000 per year. I am told that the average wage paid to all classifications of pilots for about a 10 hour week in the major airlines is more than $70,000 in wages plus benefits.

These major airlines have labor costs that average between 30-40 per cent of their total costs. They are competing against economy airlines where labor costs average about 20 per cent and the employees have to work harder and longer for their money. The pilots, for example, put in twice the hours, earn half the pay, and help in all sorts of extra chores to keep costs down and rates low.

Some say that the problem is de-regulation, letting competition work. That isn't true! The airline problems would exist with or without deregulation because the ticket prices kept skyrocketing as cost increases were just passed along, so that rates got too high for us to afford air travel. For example, on a trip that cost me three years ago $352 (both ways), today the comparable charge is $815.

Even though our population keeps growing, air traffic is no greater than 1979. Even that traffic level is the result of bargain fares. At the right price, we can afford to travel by air. At the wrong price, too high a rate, we won't travel by air. Elimination of bargain rates will just mean fewer customers and a continuation of the airline problems. The answer is lower standard rates, and that translates into lower airline costs.

Poor management and union leadership together with a lack of understanding on the part of airline employees, contribute to the present problem. We only have so much money to spend on food, clothing, shelter, education, taxes and everything else. When the airlines priced themselves out of the market, they asked for trouble and got it, about two billion dollars in losses since 1980. At the same time, the bargain rate airlines, with top safety records, are making money!

What happened? The situation confronting the major airlines changed. Instead of facing up to those changes and cutting costs, the airlines assumed that "this too, would pass." It won't! The airlines, with little foreign competition, are an example of what is happening, industry by industry. We have to cut "fat" and get competitive, again!

Just as there is no way for me to be a kid, again, there is no way to get back to the "good old days" that I hear both airline union and management leaders discussing.

Unless we can compete in the real world, the situation will get progressively worse. The simple fact that many of us are not earning our way, today, and the world isn't going to give us a free ride with ever increasing wages and benefits is something we must accept, even if we don't like it.

That's Straight Talk!
